[Vol. 5. May 6, 1909 Plaintiff's General Exhibit No. 1. Abstract of Acts.]

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The hearing was resumed pursuant to the taking of recess.

Mr. Anderson: We desire now to tender an abstract of the acts of the General Assembly from 1828 to 1860, inclusive, relative to the State debt. I have stated to my friends on the other side that there is nothing in this abstract of a controversial character.

The Special Master: Does it duplicate the material already in where these various indebtednesses are related to and connected with the legislation?

Mr. Anderson: It is a synopsis of all the legislation in reference to the public debt. It recites the legislation upon which the debt is created, and it is really an answer to that part of the decree which directs an ascertainment of information as to the authority under which the debt was contracted.

Mr. Carlisle: This was put in a long while ago. We have no objection to it. It is simply an index.

Mr. Anderson: That is all; or at least it is very little more than that.

The Special Master: Is there any objection to it?

Mr. Carlisle: No.

The Special Master: There is quite a good deal of material here that does not seem to relate to the legislation. I suppose this is a duplication of facts already in?

Mr. Carlisle: Yes.

The Special Master: On the left-hand margin are marks indicating what it is, as I understand it.

Mr. Anderson: Yes, sir.

Mr. Spooner: Of course we cannot take the time now to verify it; but we will let it go in subject to revision.

The Special Master: Then that is understood.

Mr. Spooner: If you want to prove anything from the act of course you will have to take the act; but this will help in finding the act.

The Special Master: This would be plaintiff's exhibit A-2, would it not?

Mr. Spooner: If I did say so, I did not mean to say that it goes in subject to objection; I meant it goes in subject to correction.

Mr. Robinson: You have the A exhibits running to A-13 now, I think?

Mr. McClintic: I would suggest you apply another letter to it, the letter H, if that is right.

The Special Master: No; if this relates to paragraph 1—or does it relate to all the paragraphs?

Mr. Anderson: It relates to all the paragraphs.

The Special Master: We will make it plaintiff's general Exhibit No. 1, then.

(The document was accordingly marked by the stenographer plaintiff's general Exhibit No. 1.)

This report has been delayed in consequence of the inability of the Trustees to get together the Bonds and notes of the "Coal River Navigation Company" which were held by parties scattered from Kanawha to New York, and some of which is thought are now in Europe and not withstanding the time which has elapsed since since the sale was made; and the persistent efforts which have been used by advertisement and otherwise to procure all the bonds, several thousand of them are still out standing and unsettled.

TABLE F.

Dividends on Stock	1,500.00
	$15,554.44

The monies received into the Treasury for Literary purposes, are subject to distribution and apportionment under the 79th Chapter, page 416 of the Code of Virginia. The especial attention of the Legislature is requested to this Chapter and its provisions. It will be seen that by the 3d section of this Chapter, that the Auditor of Public Accounts is directed on the first day of January, in each year, upon the order of the Second Auditor, to set apart and pay into the Treasury, to the credit of the Literary Fund for the purposes of Education, the amount of Capitation Tax received into the Treasury for the preceding year. The Second Auditor is then to apportion it out among the several Counties, Cities and Towns having Corporation Courts, under the provision of the 4th section of the same Chapter. The Second Auditor is to apportion it out by the white population of each County, City and Corporation of the State. Under this rule there would not be much for any County, and much the largest share would go to Counties, Cities and Towns of the Eastern part of the State, that have paid no part of the Fund into the Treasury. I think, therefore, the whole Chapter ought to be repealed.

Table G, will exhibit the amount received from the Banks of this Commonwealth, as a bonus, under provision of Chapter 59, page 348, section 48 of the Code of Virginia, and by that section, is a fund for the payment of the interest on the public debt of the State.

Bonus from North Western Bank, Wheeling	2,170.25

This section ought to be repealed and this money thrown into the Treasury, for while the law remains, the money arising from bonus now in the Treasury, or hereafter to come into the Treasury, cannot be made available for any other purposes.

Table H, will exhibit the money in the Treasury for Internal Improvement purposes.

Table K, will exhibit the amount received from Militia Fines for the fiscal year 1862.

TABLE K.

Militia Fines for 1862	$134.87

At the regular session of the General Assembly of 1861-62, there was appropriated $5,000 to pay expenses of the Militia of the State. Under the appropriation, up to this date, over $3,000 have been paid to Drummers, Fifers, Adjutants, Mustering Officers, &c. The Legislature will see that only $134.87 have been received from Militia Fines altogether.

Under the late order of the Executive calling out the Militia of the State, there have been presented to this office large claims for services rendered under this order, as Drummers, Fifers and other charges, that the Auditor has been compelled to reject, there being no law authorizing the Auditor to pay them; many of these claims amount to over one hundred dollars for one county. At this rate the sum necessary to meet these claims, if they are to be paid, will need not less than $10,000. It is a subject that the Auditor dare not venture an opinion upon, but hopes that the Legislature will give to it their proper attention.

Having furnished the Legislature with a true statement of the Finances of the State at the close of the last fiscal year, I now beg leave to call the attention of the Legislature to the necessity of some more legislation to enable the Auditor to have the Revenues of the State more properly collected. Without some additional legislation upon the subject, the Revenues of many of the Counties of the State will never be collected. The highest rates of commission now allowed to Sheriffs and Collectors of the Revenue, is 5 per cent. This is far too small a consideration for Sheriffs and Collectors, where there is no other business for the Sheriff and Collector to do. In many of the Counties it would not give the Sheriff or Collector over $150 or $200 for a whole year's work. The Legislature will see at once that an officer, competent to discharge the duties of Sheriff or Collector, cannot be obtained for so paltry a sum. Many of the Sheriffs and Collectors at work, are only temporarily engaged in the work, under the promise from the Auditor that some provision would be made by the Legislature to increase their compensation, and unless the Legislature does increase their compensation, it will be impossible for the Auditor to hold them.

I would, therefore, as a matter of justice, recommend that the Legislature pass a provision increasing the compensation of Sheriffs and Collectors of the tax on Lands and Property throughout the State, to 10 per cent., where the sum collected does not exceed Ten Thousand Dollars, and where the revenue exceeds Ten Thousand Dollars, 7 1/2 per cent. To pass anything but a general law, would only involve the Auditor in trouble, for the Counties of the State are so unequal in the amounts collected, that it would be impossible to pass laws that would equalize the compensation.—Some Counties would pay the Sheriff or Collector more than others. But the great object to be kept in view, is the collecting and paying of the Revenues into the Treasury; it is for the Treasury and not for the Collector, that this recommendation is made. No injustice is done by General Laws: injustice would be done by passing laws for each County. The Sheriffs and Collectors of the State have been exceedingly prompt, under all the circumstances, in paying into the Treasury; and by a provision of law, such as I have recommended, the Auditor is convinced that in many of the Counties that are now paying nothing into the Treasury, Sheriffs or Collectors could be procured, but without some such provision no hope can be entertained of our getting the Revenue of those Counties collected. The Auditor therefore hopes that his promises, heretofore made to many of these officers now engaged in the collecting of the Revenues, will not be denied them by the General Assembly. If the experience of the Auditor is worth any thing to the Legislature upon any subject, surely it is upon this, the most important of all his duties. I need not assure the General Assembly (for they all know) that the Auditor has labored most assiduously to collect the public Revenues and place them in the Treasury; and I ask the Legislature to pass the provision referred to and make it retrospective, so as to embrace the Revenue of 1862.

The Auditor would most respectfully call the attention of the General Assembly to a provision of law passed by them at the last regular session, Chapter 59, page 55, of the Acts of the General Assembly, passed February 15th, 1862. The law, (as it is short,) will be copied into this report, it is as follows:

Be it enacted by the General Assembly, That the expenses incurred in prosecutions for Misdemeanor, shall be chargeable to the Commonwealth.

The interpretation placed upon this law by Clerks, is that all the expenses incurred by them, such as issuing Subpoenas, Docketing Indictments, Continuance Cases, and such like, in cases of Misdemeanors, are chargeable, under this law, to the Commonwealth, and payable under this law. Many of the Clerks have demanded payment for services, such as above mentioned, of the Auditor.—Even the witnesses for the Defendants have claimed their attendance fees under this law. Fortunately, for the Auditor, the Legislature did not make any appropriation by which prosecutions for Misdemeanors could be paid. The law must be repealed or changed, so as to designate what expenses are meant. The clear presumption is that it only intended to embrace expenses incurred by the Commonwealth in prosecution, and not all the expenses incurred by the Commonwealth and the Defendants; but without some interpretation of the Legislature, this statute must give trouble to the Auditor. If it is the intention of the General Assembly that the Commonwealth is to be chargeable with all the expenses of witnesses, jailor's fees and other expenses, in drunken riots and peace warrants, the Auditor hopes the Legislature will so frame a law that will make it plain what charges are to be paid and what not to be paid by the Auditor.

The attention of the General Assembly is especially called to the Act of the General Asembly, passed February 10th, 1862, called the "Military Fund Bill." The first section provides that the Governor of the Commonwealth shall receive from the United States, the monies heretofore advanced by the State for military purposes, and place them to the credit of the State Treasury. Nothing has been received into the Treasury of the State from that fund. The second section provides that in addition to the monies so to be collected and placed to the credit of the State, as in the first section provided for, the additional sum of Forty Thousand Dollars was appropriated to aid in the further organization, arming, transporting and supporting the military forces of the State, in the service of the United States, or that might hereafter be mustered into the service of the United States. Under this provision, the Executive has paid $11,507.69 since the regular session of the General Assembly. In the opinion of the Auditor, this law ought to be repealed. Surely there can be no use for the State to be paying bills belonging to the National Government, when she has here, at the seat of Government, an officer whose business it is expressly to provide for the support, arming, equipping and transporting of her own troops. While this law remains, it is only a temptation to persons who cannot obtain payment for their claims of the regular army officers, to hope for relief under this provision. And with all due deference to the Legislature, the Auditor would venture the opinion that $50,000 already paid in aid of this object by the State, and not likely to be returned again, is quite enough for the paying Counties of the State.

The Legislature will see that for Lunatics in Jail and Lunatic Asylum, there was paid during the last fiscal year, $6,930.18. The Lunatic Asylum at Weston, Va., being now nearly completed, ought to be furnished as rapidly as possible, so that the lunatics of the State might be better provided for than many of them now are, by being confined in some cell in the Jails of the State. A large number of the female lunatics of the State have been kindly provided for at the Lunatic Asylum, at Columbus, Ohio. The generous offer of the State of Ohio, to take the female portion of these afflicted of our citizens, and provide for them, is deserving the thanks of the Legislature. Without this provision, many of them must have suffered sorely, if indeed, death had not taken them away. The State can now afford to make ample provision for them, and it is to be hoped that the General Assembly will not omit this important duty to the afflicted lunatics of the State.

As a matter of interest, I herewith present a Table showing the several amounts paid by each of the proposed Counties of the New State, into the Treasury of the State. This Table is taken from the Report of Auditor J. W. Bennet, for 1859-60. This Table shows only the Tax on Land, Property, Capitation and Licenses. To this may be added, at least, One Hundred Thousand Dollars more, for Taxes on Banks, Railroads, Express, Insurance and other companies, which would give a grand total of at least Six Hundred and Twenty Thousand Dollars, paid into the Treasury of the State by the Counties of the proposed New State, in 1860.

By reference to Table B, exhibiting the whole amount disbursed by the Auditor in the fiscal year, 1862, the Legislature will find the following items paid by the Auditor that do not properly belong to the ordinary expenses of the State, and in looking to a time of peace, will not be counted as part of the expenses of State to be provided for.

Paid upon the order of the Governor for extraordinary purposes, as follows:

For Military purposes for the Government of the United States...	$11,507.69
Civil Contingent Fund	16,884.86
Pay of Patrols of State	5,404.91
Pay of Lunatic and other Asylums of State	3,722.63

Appropriation for Lunatic Asylum at Weston	21,684.00
Appropriation for the Convention to frame Constitution of New State	16,399.25
	$75,603.34

Deduct this amount from the sum disbursed in the fiscal year, as shown by Table B, as follows:

Whole amount disbursed in the year 1862	$165,450.17
	$89,846.83

Eighty-nine Thousand Eight Hundred and Forty-six Dollars and Eighty-three cents ($89,846.83) is the actual expenses of the State if reduced to a state of peace; and the amount ought to be still further reduced, when the Legislature remembers that during the past fiscal year there was one Regular and One Extra Session of the General Assembly. The Legislature will see by referring to the Table enumerated, that there was a little more than one-half of the money disbursed in 1862, paid for extraordinary purposes, and shows the actual expenses of the State, for the fiscal year ending September 30th, 1862, at only $89,846.83. It will be remembered that this expenditure was not alone for the counties in the proposed New State, but embraces payments made for Alexandria, Accomac and Northampton counties.

nothing to do with it. The settlement with the Old State ought to go back to the beginning of the rebellion, and settlement made from that time, if so, the New State is entitled to, and ought to have, not only the One Hundred Thousand Dollars, but all that shall be in the Treasury at the time of its admission. An Appropriation Bill to that effect ought to be framed. The money belongs to the Counties of the New State, and by any just rule, ought to remain with them. By this rule and with the uncollected balances due the State from Counties within the proposed New State, the New State would have the money ready to put up all of her Public Buildings, or nearly so.

The State has about Four Hundred Thousand Dollars worth of stock in the North Western Bank at Wheeling, standing in the name of the Commonwealth, part in the name of the Board of Public Works, and part in the name of the Literary Fund. The State has Fifty Thousand Dollars of stock or loan, in the name of the Literary Fund, in the Bank of Fairmont, and from Fifty to Seventy Thousand Dollars in the Exchange Bank at Weston, making about Five Hundred Thousand Dollars in all. She is also a stockholder in the improvement of the Kanawha river, how much, the Auditor does not know. The State is the owner of several important turnpike roads in the North-Western part of the State, and is a stockholder in many other turnpike and bridge companies. The power to control and use this stock, before and pending, the settlement with the Old State. Some legislation therefore, upon the subject, will be necessary.

Under the provisions of the Bill now pending before the Congress of the United States for the admission of the New State, the Convention that framed the Constitution for the New State, will have to again assemble, and it is respectfully submitted, whether the Legislature ought not to make a small appropriation to meet the expenses of that body while sitting.

All of which is most respectfully submitted.

SAMUEL CRANE,
Auditor of Public Accounts.

DEFENDANT'S GENERAL EXHIBIT NO. 6, A, B, AND C.

(Being Extract From the First Executive Journal of Governor Boreman, 1863.)

Special Message of Governor Arthur I. Boreman to the Legislature of West Virginia.

A.

Executive Department,
Wheeling, July 28th, 1863.

Gentlemen of the Senate and House of Delegates:

I have received from His Excellency, F. H. Peirpoint, Governor of Virginia, the enclosed communication and the accompanying report of S. P. Hildreth, Esq., on the subject of the Auditor's office and the state of the finances of the State of West Virginia at the time of the organization of the State of West Virginia, which I submit to you for your consideration and action. The report of Mr. Hildreth contains a statement showing as nearly as he could ascertain, the balance in the treasury on the 19th day of June, 1863, which is to be transferred to this State under the provisions of the Act of the General Assembly, passed February 4th, 1863: and also a statement showing the amount of money paid into the treasury by the counties of the State of Virginia outside the boundaries of this State, and the amount drawn therefrom for those counties, and the balance in their favor. The report also shows that some of the appropriations made by the General Assembly of Virginia have been overdrawn, and, as the money in the treasury after paying the appropriations, is the property of this State, it will be necessary for the Legislature to make an appropriation to meet the amount overdrawn, and thereby legalize what has been done. It will also be seen that many of the appropriations have not been exhausted.

It will also be seen from the communication of Governor Peirpoint, that there is a large number of claims against the State of Virginia, held by persons within the boundaries of this State, for the payment of which no appropriations have been made: and that there are no such claims held by persons in the remaining State of Virginia. As the balance in the treasury is to be transferred to this State, it may become necessary to make provision for the payment of those claims due our own citizens, when they are ascertained. At present, I am unable to state their character or amount, but would suggest that the subject be referred to th proper committee to inquire into and report thereon, and the several sums that it is proper, should be paid out of the treasury in discharge of the claims referred to.

It will also be seen from the communication of Governor Peirpont, that he appreciates fully the difficulties that might occur in the absence of the books, papers, &c., of the Auditor's office, or of copies of the same, and, therefore, he proposes to leave those books, papers, &c., in the hands of the officers of this State for the present, but requests that you pass an Act directing that they be all delivered to the proper authorities of the State of Virginia, if they shall be demanded. He does not know that they will or will not be demanded. I recommend that such an Act be passed, and, in view of the contingency mentioned, and of the very great injury that must result to this State, if we should be left without those books, papers, &c., or copies of them, I recommend that provision be made to have copies of them made, in the event that they shall be called for by the proper authorities of Virginia.

By section 6th of the Act passed February 3d, 1863, page 65, of Acts 1862-1863, these books, papers, &c., were directed to be copied, and the copies to be delivered to the Governor of this State "when his election should be officially declared:" and I am informed that the appropriations of the same session of the General Assembly, included a sum sufficient, and was enlarged for the purpose (although not expressed) of copying the same.

But from some cause, unknown to me, the copies have not been made, and, of course, the money appropriated to pay for the same passes to this State by the Act transferring the balance in the treasury of the State of Virginia. The money intended to be used for this purpose thus remains in the treasury.

As these books, papers, &c., or copies of them, are needed almost daily for the purpose of ascertaining balances due from collecting officers, making settlements, &c., I hope the Legislature will take speedy action on this subject. I may say that had it not been that my attention, as well as the attention of the Legislature, has been given to military matters for a few days past, the necessity for which is known to all, this communication would have been made at an earlier day.

LETTER OF GOVERNOR F. H. PEIRPOINT, SENT TO GOVERNOR ARTHUR I. BOREMAN, AND BY HIM TRANSMITTED TO THE LEGISLATURE OF WEST VIRGINIA WITH HIS SPECIAL MESSAGE OF JULY 28, 1863.

B.

Wheeling, July 22d, 1863.

To his Excellency A. I. Boreman,
Wheeling, West Va.:

Sir,—By act of General Assembly of Virginia, passed February 3d, 1863, page 64, it is provided among other things, that all property and debts due the State lying within and owing from persons resident in the boundaries of the new State, should belong to the State of West Virginia, without further transfer. Provision is made also in the same act, requiring the Auditor of Public Accounts of the State of Virginia to procure fit blank books and transcribe therein true copies of all the records, &c., which may be useful to the State of West Virginia. These copies were to be certified by the executive and "delivered to the Governor of West Virginia, when his election was officially declared, for the use of said State of West Virginia." There was also an act passed on 4th of same month (page 68) appropriating one hundred and fifty thousand dollars to the State of West Virginia, and also the residue in the treasury after certain deductions therein named.

The Auditor and Treasurer of the State having resigned on the 19th day of June, 1863, it became my duty to appoint successors. I was informed that the copies of the records required by the General Assembly for use of West Virginia had not been made out by the Auditor of Public Accounts—nor had any statements of moneys received and expenditures made, &c., in accordance with the second section of last Act, been made, to ascertain the proper payment to be made to West Virginia out of the Treasury. I therefore directed the Treasurer and Auditor, by the assistance of Mr. Hagans, the Secretary of the Commonwealth, to examine the books, &c., of the Auditor's office and report to me their condition, with a view to ascertain whether any copies were needed of books and papers, &c. Also to ascertain and make statements in regard to the money in the treasury and sources whence derived, &c.

The Treasurer, S. P. Hildreth, furnished me the enclosed report, which I herewith send you.

I suppose it will involve the State of West Virginia in great difficulty to arrive at its rights, under the Acts of Assembly, above referred to, without the original books and papers for reference.

I find there is a number of claims against the State, held by persons in the bounds of the new State, which cannot be paid without further appropriation, the money appropriated, applicable to that subject, having been all expended. You will see from Mr. Hildreth's report the appropriations which have been overdrawn and the amounts. There is also a large number of accounts not audited, connected with the delinquent list and other papers, and with this is the unascertained school fund belonging to counties. (See report.)

There are but four counties in the State of Virginia from which any revenue has been derived. There are no unsettled claims from that sections that I am aware of. If there are any, I can have them arranged, if it is by further legislation. But as the money which is now in the treasury, derived from the counties in West Virginia, will be handed over to the treasury of the State, and as the officers cannot pay a portion of the claims without further legislation, and as it would subject the parties residing in the west to great inconvenience and delay to await legislation in Virginia, and then bring their claims there for payment, it occurs to me that this business should all be settled here by such legislation as may be necessary. Mr. Hildreth states that some of the delinquent lists are not returned, and others incorrect. It occurs to me that there might be difficulty on the part of the State of Virginia, now that the State is divided, to enforce the returns, &c., that may be necessary to settle the accounts with the different counties in regard to the literary fund derived from capitation tax.

I am anxious for the welfare of the new State of West Virginia. I desire to furnish the greatest facilities for securing her interests, and in view of that, I propose to leave the books, papers, &c., with you for reference and settlement, asking that your Legislature will pass an Act directing that they all be delivered to the proper authorities of the State of Virginia when demanded. They may be demanded and may not. I have no authority to say that they will not.

With sincere desire for the future welfare of your new State of West Virginia,

I am yours, &c.,

(Signed) F. H. PEIRPOINT,

Governor.

STATEMENT MADE TO GOVERNOR FRANCIS H. PEIRPOINT BY MR. SAMUEL P. HILDRETH, CONCERNING THE FINANCIAL TRANSACTIONS BETWEEN THE NEW STATE OF WEST VIRGINIA AND THE COMMONWEALTH OF VIRGINIA, JULY 14, 1863.

C.

Wheeling, W. Va., July 14, 1863.

His Excellency F. H. Peirpoint:

Dear Sir,—In accordance with your request, I would respectfully report that, with the assistance of Messrs. L. A. Hagans and Dr. Webb, I have examined the papers, vouchers, and memorandums of accounts kept in the Auditor's office of the Commonwealth since the restoration of the Government.

In a book called "Sheriff's Accounts," we found where the amount of taxes reported annually by Commissioners of the revenue were charged to the Sheriffs of the Commonwealth, we compared the Land and Property Books with the accounts as charged, and found the following errors:

Sheriff of Brooke county is overcharged tax on town lots, in 1861, $21; Sheriff of Putnam county, overcharged tax on town lots, $252.80, in 1861; Sheriff of Jackson county is charged tax on personal property, $754.98; it should be $2,241.07; Sheriff of Upshur county is charged tax on personal property for 1862, $506.27; it should be $2,552.50. This Sheriff, according to the account, had paid his indebtedness to the State, and his account has been closed.

Sheriff of Gilmer county is charged tax on lands, $3,093.16; it should be $3,039.16.

Sheriff of Kanawha county is charged tax on town lots, $9,078.94; it should be $1,456.32, and $3, in same account, an undercharge in tax on personal property. For some of the accounts we could not find any land books or property books to compare with.

We next examined a book called "License Book" in which was charged the taxes on licenses. In this we also found some errors, the largest of which was $20, and we concluded to take no account of them.

Next came a book (without any index) called "Railroads, Banks, Express and Insurance Companies," in which was charged the taxes on dividends; in this we found that on the 14th of March, 1863, the Sheriff of Ohio county collected from three Institutions (here in the city) taxes amounting (less his commissions) to $866.59. The whole amount was credited to each of the institutions, in addition to which they were credited with commissions, 5 per cent.

While on the subject of licenses, we omitted to mention that in some instances the Sheriffs owed largely for 1861, while they were over credited for 1862. The proper plan, we think, would have been to have made the Sheriffs pay all that they owed for one year before crediting them anything for the taxes of a subsequent year.

We have no doubt that a number of the accounts in both the sheriffs and license tax books could be closed if they were credited with their delinquent lists and commissions. It is true that owing to the disturbed state of affairs in the State, a number of delinquent lists have not been sent to the office, and it is also true that those which have been sent are not properly credited. After a great deal of patient examination we failed to understand the subject of delinquent lists. In some instances we found them credited to the account, direct, while in others the accounts were credited with the Auditor's warrant for the amount, which was charged to an appropriation called "Erroneous Assessments and Delinquent Tax," in a book called "Journal," (we could find no such appropriation,) whether or not this is the correct plan we are not unable to say.

In a book called "Journal" to which we have referred, we found the amount in the Treasury on the 1st October, 1862, to have been	$120,159.01

Observe a difference of 24 cents between the amount in Bank and what there should be. We hunted for the cause of the difference, but were unable to find it.

The following appropriations are overdrawn:

	Amts. paid.	Appropriated.	Overdrawn.
Judiciary	$12,091.71	$10,000.00	$2,091.71

			$6,123.29

In the appropriations of Salaries of Officers of Civil Government an item appears. Voucher No. 945, S. Crane's salary is charged $466.66, which is an error; it should be $441.95. He has overdrawn $24.61. In pay of Auditor's Clerks, Vouchers No's 948 and 949, it appears that both the Auditor's Clerks have been paid from April 1st to July 1st, 1863, overdrawn in one case, $22,23, and the other, $11.12. The following table will show the amount yet unexpended of the different appropriations:

Receipts over expenditures		$ 9,937.86

It would require too much time to endeavor to ascertain the amount set aside by law for educational purposes, (which is the capitation tax,) as it would necessarily involve another examination of delinquent lists, and we doubt very much that it could be ascertained correctly. There has been no capitation tax account kept in the books. In conclusion we would say that if the Legislature of West Virginia would pass an Act by which you could get possession of them whenever you require it, we would deliver the books to the Executive of West Virginia, so that the accounts in them might be properly settled, for they can be of no manner of use to you unless they were demanded by the General Assembly of Virginia hereafter.

Very respectfully,

(Signed) S. P. HILDRETH.

Other Evidence and Proceedings Relating to the Several Paragraphs of the Decree and the Case Generally.

[Vol. 1. Nov. 16, 1908. Plan for marking Exhibits.]

The Special Master: I will mark the first paragraph of the decree A, the second B, and so on. So I will say the first exhibit offered will be "Plaintiff's Exhibit A 1", and the one that is now offered will be "Plaintiff's Exhibit B 1", B representing the second paragraph. 56

[Vol. 1. Nov. 16, 1908. Procedure as to objections.]

The Special Master: Let me see if I get this right. I understood Attorney General Anderson to state that they were willing to agree to adopt a suggestion made by Mr. Spooner with reference to the time when the objections should be finally settled and passed upon, but they would much prefer as we go along for you to 13 make such salient objections as occur to you, without stopping to discuss them, so that they might be in a way advised, but not foreclosing you from raising other objections, and leaving all the objections to be finally passed upon. Do I get your meaning correctly?

Mr. Anderson: That is satisfactory. That is a fair statement of our position.

Mr. Spooner: Then I did not understand the gentleman.

The Special Master: I suppose the idea of the Attorney General is that if there is something that it is quite obvious ought to be objected to, they ought to have your objection at the time, in order to save time and make progress, because they might pursue another course if they knew a certain thing might be objected to which was obviously inadmissible. Do I state it correctly? 14

Mr. Anderson: Yes; that is satisfactory.

The Special Master: Then we will have that understanding, that the case may go on and evidence may be introduced by either party to be subject to all objections, objections to made de bene so far as they may occur to counsel as they go along, but not to be argued or discussed, though perhaps the grounds should be set forth; that the making of an objection of that sort is not to foreclose either party making any objections they may have to make ultimately, the question of objections to be passed upon later by the Master with the understanding that if testimony is excluded coming from either side, such side will be given fair opportunity to submit other evidence bearing upon that same point, as they may be advised is necessary in order to protect their rights. Either party or both parties will have full opportunity to bring into this case any evidence that has any legitimate connection with it or any legal bearing upon the issues, that is, within reasonable limits. Now, does that state the understanding satisfactorily?

TESTIMONY ON BEHALF OF THE COMPLAINANT.

In reference to Exhibit H 1.

Mr. Conrad: We now offer in evidence, if your Honor please, the biennial report of the Auditor of Public Accounts for the years 1860 and 1861 of the Commonwealth of Virginia. It was transmitted by the Auditor of Public Accounts to the Governor in November 1861. It gives the statement by counties, each county in the state, and a summary at the close, showing the number of square miles, the personal and real property, the number of slaves taxed, and so on.

Mr. Mollohan: Whose Auditor was he?

Mr. Conrad: He was a native of West Virginia, and perfectly loyal to Virginia and to the Confederacy until that calamity occurred in 1865. Then he returned to the State of West Virginia which had become a state in the meantime and became just as loyal to West Virginia as he had been to Virginia; and he appeared on behalf of West Virginia and made another report of this very debt, some years later. That is as much of his biography as I think appropriate to the submission of this book and the suggestion of my brother.

Mr Mollohan: At the proper time, we expect to object to the book.

Mr. Conrad: Do you object to the book now? It is an official publication.

Mr. Mollohan: We object now, because he is nobody's Auditor.

The Special Master: The book is admitted, subject to objection, under the agreement we have already entered into: 86 and if the counsel for West Virginia see fit at this time to indicate in a general way the character of their objection, it is perfectly open to them to do so. That will give notice to the other side.

Mr. Mollohan. We rely on a number of documents which we will present at the proper time.

The Special Master. Very well; it is admitted de bene, according to the understanding.

Mr. Anderson. I do not suppose you object to this as being the Auditor's report, but you object to the Auditor's report being competent evidence.

Mr. Mollohan. No; he was no Auditor.

Mr. Anderson. He was the Auditor of the Richmond Government, which our friends claim was only a de facto government of Virginia at that time, but still it was a government. The Supreme Court of the United States has decided it was a government.

Mr. Mollohan. This was before the State of West Virginia was formed.

Mr. McClintic: Samuel Gray was the Auditor of Virginia at that time.

Mr. Anderson. A portion of this is the Auditor's report for 1860, when he was the Auditor of the undivided State of Virginia.

Mr. Mollohan. Not in 1861.

Mr. Anderson. Part of this is for 1860. These items here are for 1860, the ones we rely on chiefly, when he was undoubtedly the Auditor of the undivided State. 87

Mr. McClintic: He was only a private citizen, making a report.

Mr. Anderson: Not in 1860.

Mr. McClintic: He did not make the report until 1861.

The Special Master: I suppose the significance of the information depends upon whether or not you both agree upon the facts as stated. If you disagree, then the question comes as to what is the best evidence of the facts.

Mr. Mollohan: We disagree as to this statement. He has our counties all wrong. If you take the map to-day and measure it, you will see it is wrong. He evidently arrives in that book at his area by taking the acreage of land and supposing that every acre charged represented an acre of territory. Our land is charged sometimes three and four times over.

The Special Master: All these suggestions will be entitled to weight, so far as they have weight in impeaching the validity of any computations that may be made.

Mr. Spooner. I was not trying to impeach the witness.

The Special Master: I understand. I remember now the allegations of the bill, and of course the facts stated are quite diverse.

Mr. Anderson: I do not think there will be any controversy between us as to the area. It is a question that cannot be accurately determined from those records. It can only be approximated. The witness took it from the best sources of record he could find.

The Special Master: This will make a start on it, anyway.

Mr. Spooner: Here is a map of West Virginia, prepared by 89
the Auditor of Virginia before the State was divided. It gives the number of square miles of the old State of Virginia as 61,352 square miles.

Mr. Anderson. West Virginia is only 24,000 square miles instead of 45,000.

The Special Master: That book will be marked, "Plaintiff's Exhibit H-1".

(The book referred to, entitled, "Biennial Report of the Auditor of Public Accounts, 1860 and 1861," is filed herewith, marked "Plaintiff's Exhibit H-1.")

Mr. Robinson: That has evidence in it on all the paragraphs of the decree.

Mr. Anderson: If the Master please, we have no further evidence to offer at present on behalf of Virginia.

[Vol. 6. May 7, 1909. Defendant's Balance Sheet of Receipts 515 and Disbursements.]

Mr. McClintic: If your Honor please, I wish to make a short statement. We desire to file, as soon as we get the copies here—and we expect to have them ready by noon today—a statement of all the cash receipts and disbursements of the State of Virginia from March 19, 1823 to January 1st, 1861, beginning with the balances that stood in the various funds on the books of Virginia March 19, 1823; the total of which shows $85,002,130.72. Then we have the counter part of that. I spoke of receipts and disbursements; I should have said those figures represented the receipts. Then we want to show the disbursements from March 19, 1823 to January 1st, 1861, having of course the same balance, a general detail of all those things. This copy that I have here is a preliminary copy. As I have said, we will have complete and correct copies here, probably 576 by 12 o'clock.

The Special Master: In what way will that affect the schedules already put in?

Mr. McClintic: We want to show by that the character of the examination made by Mr. Dixey and his assistants in this case, that he took up each item from books of original entry, beginning March 19, 1823 and running to January 1st, 1861, and this is the complete balanced account which shows, as they say in accountants' language, control of the figures during that time.

Mr. Anderson: I do not understand that this paper Mr. McClintic has referred to has been introduced in evidence.

Mr. McClintic: Not yet; but we will introduce it as soon as the copies of the same, to which I have referred, arrive. I have simply been making a statement from this copy that I have.

Mr. Anderson: We have not seen it and of course we reserve the right to object to it.

The Special Master: But there is no objection to his making the statement?

Mr. Anderson: Not at all. We simply reserve our rights.

By Mr. McClintic:

Q. Please look at this paper and state what it is (handing witness paper).

A. I am holding a carbon copy of the statement prepared by me and under my direction, showing balances of the various funds March 19, 1823; the total receipts of the Commonwealth of Virginia from that date to January 1st, 1861; the total disbursements from March 19, 1823, to January 1st, 1861; and the cash balances in the various funds at the end of that period; together with the supporting schedules showing the details of those receipts and disbursements. 577

Q. Does that account show an absolute balance between the receipts and disbursements?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you believe it to be absolutely correct?

A. I have verified it, yes.

Mr. McClintic: We will offer it, then, as soon as we get the copies.

[Vol. 6. May 7, 1907. Nature and Effect of agreement between accountants.] 726

Mr. Spooner: Your Honor has suggested that these accountants get together and reconcile differences. I suppose that means mathematical differences?

The Special Master: Certainly.

Mr. Spooner: That does not go to any principle?

The Special Master: Not at all.

Mr. Spooner: And if they cannot agree on mathematics, then it will be referred to you. 727

The Special Master: The suggestion is this. The way these accounts have been stated, there are a good many items, which, in the first place, do not appear to be quite identical. In the second place, there seems to be some controversy as to the amount. Now, the great bulk of those things, I suppose, if the accountants get together, can be reconciled and agreed upon, so far as they are able to agree upon them. That will eliminate them as subjects of controversy in the various schedules. So far as they can not agree upon them, I will hear the controversy as to those particular items, and of course pass upon the question of amount myself.

Mr. Spooner: That is where the items are identical, while they differ in total?

The Special Master: Yes; but so far as the principle involved that underlies either schedule or anything the accountants submit is concerned, there is nothing the accountants will do between themselves that will bind the parties, so far as I am concerned.

Mr. Spooner: Before you decide at all any of those things, either party will be heard.

The Special Master: Absolutely; yes. I will hear you in regard to everything in controversy between the parties, involved in every schedule.

Mr. Spooner: That is what I assumed.

The Special Master: Certainly; the parties are to be heard. The only purpose of the accountants getting together is to eliminate elements of controversy in detail. Of course we could 728 sit here and try out each individual difference, but that would be interminable, and entirely unnecessary if the accountants between themselves can agree.

[Vol. 7. July 2, 1909. Introduction of Official documents into evidence.]

Mr. Moon: At that meeting in New York I understand we 1016 are to be allowed to introduce official documents that have a bearing—

The Special Master: Each party will be allowed to introduce anything that is not already in; but the auditor's books are in the case already, the acts of assembly are in, and all official records are in, as I understand it. All the acts of West Virginia and Virginia that have any relation whatever to any part of this controversy, are a part of this controversy and will be in. Does that cover your ground?

Mr. Moon: I am not sure that they are all in.

Mr. Harrison: I do not know that we have referred to all of the auditor's reports.

The Special Master: I will say this. Now, after looking the case over, after the case is printed, if either counsel discovers that they have left out anything that is important, I will re-open the case and give them an opportunity to put it in. I appreciate, of course, that we have gone very rapidly here to-day, and it may possibly be that counsel have inadvertently overlooked something. I do not say that I will open the case for any thing trivial, and of course counsel would not ask that, but if there is something of importance that you find you ought to be heard on and ought to have evidence on, the case will be opened, and you will be given an opportunity to be heard. That may be a little unusual, but I think that is the proper thing to do in a controversy of this magnitude. So you need not either of you feel that you are by any inadvertence prejudicing either side. Is that agreeable to both of you?

Mr. Anderson: Yes, sir.

Mr. Conley: Yes, sir. 1017

Mr. McClintic: It applies to both sides?

The Special Master: Certainly; it applies to both sides.

[Vol. 1. Nov. 16, 1908. Direct Examination of A. G. Potter. His qualifications.]

TESTIMONY ON BEHALF OF THE COMPLAINANT.

Under Paragraph 1 of the decree.

ARTHUR G. POTTER,

was called as a witness for the complainant, and being duly sworn by the Special Master, testified as follows:

By Mr. Anderson:

Q. What is your professional occupation, Mr. Potter?

A. Public accountant.

Q. State how many years experience you have had as a public accountant.

A. Eight years.

Q. What has been the character of that experience and how extensive has it been?

A. It has extended over general mercantile accounting mat- 27 ter, manufacturing and financial.

Q. Have you done work of that kind in connection with litigated cases?

A. I never did.

Q. Have you any diploma or certificate or license of an official character from any government?

A. I have a certificate of the Regents of the State of New York, making me a certified public accountant.

Q. What are the requisites for granting that certificate? Is there any examination made of the party?

A. There is an examination in the theory of accounts, practical accounting, commercial law, and auditing—four subjects.

Q. Have you had experience, and if so what, in auditing accounts of corporations, firms or individuals?

A. I was an auditor for five years prior to entering the duties of a public accountant. Since that time my work has been of a general public accounting nature, which includes auditing as well as other lines of accounting work.

Q. Please state to the Master whether you have made any investigation—

The Special Master: Just one moment, Mr. Anderson. I do not know whether the counsel for West Virginia raise any question as to the qualifications of the witness. If they do, it will be open to them now, I suppose, to cross examine Mr. Potter upon that point. I do not know that they will raise any question.

Mr. Spooner: No.

The Special Master: You may proceed, then. 28

By Mr. Anderson:

Q. Have you made up any statements or accounts relative to the matters in controversy between the Commonwealth of Virginia and the State of West Virginia in this cause?

A. I have.

Q. How long a time have you devoted to those investigations, and to that work?

A. Approximately seven months and a half.

Q. Did you have assistants in the conduct of those duties?

A. I did.

Q. Were they trained accountants?

A. Yes, sir.

[Vol. 4. May 5, 1909. Cross Examination of A. G. Potter. Methods and Sources.]

ARTHUR G. POTTER, 213
resumed the stand for Cross Examination.

By Mr. Carlisle:

Q. Mr. Potter, you are the accountant who made the accounts for the State of Virginia in this matter?

A. I am.

Q. Will you state about how long you were engaged in that work; —actively engaged?

A. About seven months and a half. I have not the exact length of time, but about seven months and a half. 214

Q. Do you mean you were actually engaged in the work about seven months and a half, or that it was seven months and a half from the time you began until the time you quit?

A. No, sir; seven months and a half actual work.

Q. Not continuously, as I understand, but counting the time that you were actually engaged it makes seven months and a half?

A. Yes, sir; we started on the 1st of February and completed our work at the time of the first hearing, with one or two months intervening that we did not work.

Q. From what sources did you procure the information which you embodied in your report?

A. As to the board of public works, from the board of public works' published reports, and later checked those with the internal improvement books, the original manuscript books.

Q. All of them?

A. All of them.

Q. All of those accounts?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. From what sources did you get the other accounts, excluding now the accounts of the board of public works?

A. The Commonwealth accounts we took from the published reports of the treasurer, and the auditor of public accounts, and verified some of them from the original records.

Q. About what proportion did you verify from the original records?

A. Well, if we had occasion to get further description as to roads, internal improvements companies, &c, we referred to 215 the original books. Otherwise we took the accounts of the treasurer and auditor of public accounts.

Q. What proportion of those accounts, as nearly as you can state, did you ascertain by an examination of the original books?

A. We ascertained the amounts paid in by the counties of West Virginia entirely from the original manuscript books. The items of ordinary expenses of government, we took from the published reports?

Q. Did you go to the books of original entry for all the items which are included in the debits and credits to West Virginia?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What books do you mean?

A. The ledgers and day books of the auditor of public accounts, in which there were accounts with sheriffs, coroners, clerks and so forth.

Q. From what source of information did you get the data which you put in the ordinary expenses of State government?

A. The published reports of the auditor of public accounts.

Q. From what source did you procure the information embodied in your report concerning the amounts expended in West Virginia?

A. The reports of the board of public works and the original manuscript books, as I have explained before.

Q. What proportion did you procure from the published re- 216 ports, and what proportion, as nearly as you can state, from the original books?

A. I believe I have testified that we verified all the figures we took from the published reports by the manuscript books.

Q. What do you mean by manuscript books?

A. The books of original entry.

By the Special Master:

Q. The books on file in the State Department?

A. Yes, sir; as to the auditor's office.

Q. Of the Commonwealth of Virginia?

A. Yes, sir; as to the auditor's office.

By Mr. Carlisle:

Q. Did you examine the ledgers and journals, or only one?

A. The ledgers and the journals.

Q. You examined the journals?

A. Yes.

The Special Master: Let him state, Mr. Carlisle, what books were kept at that time.

Mr. Carlisle: Yes; I was going to come to that.

By Mr. Carlisle:

Q. Will you state now what books were kept and what books you found among the public archives of the state?

A. There was ledger A and ledger B of the board of public works, and the journals that went with them. I think there were three journals for those two ledgers. There were two or three ledgers of the literary fund, I don't recall which. I think there were three, and the journals that went with those. There 217 were the books of the James River Company, ledger and journal, the books of the Northwestern Turnpike Company, ledger, journal and minute books, the books of the James River Company, ledger, journal, minute book and an old minute book which was not filed in the library, but which I found in the top of the Capitol building here, and the ledger, journal and minute book of the Covington & Ohio Railroad. I believe those are all the books.

Q. What other books of original entry, if there are any, did you examine?

A. Ledgers and day books, I believe, and journals in the office of the auditor of public accounts.

Q. Did you examine all of them?

A. I think we examined all of them; yes, sir.

Q. Did you examine all you could find? What do you mean when you say you think you examined all of them?

A. We examined all the books that were necessary to find the receipts from the various counties during the period under review. I think they embraced all of the books in the office of the auditor of public accounts.

Q. There were no original books there except those which showed the receipts from the original counties. Is that what you mean to say?

A. I don't understand your question.

Q. Do you mean to say you found no books there of original entry, or examined no books of original entry, except those books which showed receipts from various counties?

A. These same books showed disbursements, many of them, 218 but as I testified before, we examined the books of the auditor of public accounts for the purpose of ascertaining the amounts paid by the counties into the public treasury.

Q. What counties?

A. The counties of Virginia and West Virginia.

Q. You see, Mr. Potter, I think you misunderstand the scope of my question. I am asking you not what books you examined with respect to any particular matter, or any particular account. I want to ascertain from you, if I can, all the books of original entry which you examined—about what proportion of them, putting them all together.

A. I believe we examined them all in both the office of the auditor of public accounts and the second auditor's office. In other words, we covered the entire bookkeeping system for the period.

Q. Did you afterwards balance your accounts, balance everything, to see whether you had examined all the entries as to receipts by the state during that time, and all the disbursements of the State during that time, and whether they balanced or not?

A. We did make such a balance.

Q. Have you that balance?

A. I haven't it with me; no, sir.

Q. Did you submit it with your report?

A. No, sir.

By the Special Master:

Q. You have it in your notes?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are the notes here in Richmond? 219
A. Yes, sir.
Q. But not present here in court?
A. No, sir; I haven't them with me. They are in the library.

The Special Master: Do you wish those produced?
Mr. Carlisle: Yes.

By the Special Master:
Q. Will you produce them after the intermission today?
A. I would like to have a copy made of them. I have only one copy of the balance.

By Mr. Carlisle:
Q. Have you any memorandum showing the books of original entry you examined?
A. No, sir.
Q. You did not make any memorandum?
A. No, sir.
Q. Have you any memorandum showing the printed official reports which you examined?
A. Showing the what?
Q. The printed official reports you examined?
A. We examined all of the printed official reports of the board of public works, of the Commonwealth and of the literary fund.
Q. Will you tell us how you know you examined them all?
A. By starting in with the figures with which, for instance, the board of public works started, adding the total receipts for that year, deducting the disbursements, and arriving at a new balance at the end of the first year. Taking that balance, we added the receipts for the second year, deducted the disbursements, and ar- 220 rived at a new balance for the second year. Taking that balance, we went to the third year, and so on during the forty years.
Q. That is not shown in your report?
A. No, sir; that is the balance statement I have referred to.

By the Special Master:
Q. You have that on your notes?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. You had better have your notes here in the afternoon, so that if they have occasion to inquire about them, you can produce them without delay.
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Could you send for them now, Mr. Potter, without any trouble?
A. No, sir; my assistant does not know where they are.
Mr. Carlisle: We would like to have them.
The Special Master: Get them during the intermission.

Mr. Conrad: He can get them in twenty minutes.

The Special Master: Do not suspend for that purpose now. He can get them during the intermission and have his notes here with him. Counsel on both sides had better keep that in mind, and have their original notes here, so that if any question arises about the notes, that can be produced without any delay.

By Mr. Carlisle:

Q. When you examined the published official reports, did you find a detailed itemized statement of receipts and expenditures in those books? 221

A. It was somewhat summarized. It was not a detail statement.

Q. Somewhat summarized? What do you mean by that?

A. Well, the criminal charges for one year were given in one item for the whole year.

By the Special Master:

Q. Do you mean for the whole State?

A. Yes; for the whole State?

By Mr. Carlisle:

Q. Now, take that item, for illustration. Did you itemize that item by reference to the books of original entry, to see whether it was correct or incorrect?

A. We did not.

Q. Was that the only item you found on the official reports summarized in that way?

A. There were other items of general expense, such as court charges, the penitentiary charges, and such things as that.

By the Special Master:

Q. They were lumped instead of being summarized, as I understand?

A. There was one total for each year in the published reports.

Q. They aggregated the year instead of giving the details?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Carlisle:

Q. When you found that to be the case in regard to any other official report, did you simply take that total as stated there and include it in your account, or did you analyze that item to see that it did cover? 222

The Special Master: To get at the details from which it was made?

By Mr. Carlisle:

Q. Yes; to get back to the original source?

A. No, sir; we did not.

Q. Did you do that in any case?

A. We did that with respect to the board of public works expenses. We analyzed all the board of public works expenses.

Q. How about the literary fund?

A. Not the literary fund.

Q. How about the Commonwealth fund, as it was called?

A. No; we did not analyze the details of those general headings.

Q. There were very large expenditures which you have included in your account under those?

A. There were.

Q. And very large as to all these others you speak of?

A. Yes; they were very large.

[Vol. 5. May 6, 1909. Direct Examination T. B. Dixcy. His Qualifications and Methods.]

THOMAS B. DIXCY, produced as a witness on behalf of the defendant, having been first duly sworn, testified as follows:

466

By Mr. Carlisle:

Q. What is your occupation or profession?

A. I am a professional accountant, a certified public accountant, under the laws of the State of New York.

Q. How long have you been engaged in that business?

A. I have been actively engaged in professional accounting since 1900, as an active professional accountant.

Q. What were you doing before that time; were you an accountant?

A. Not a professional accountant. I have been an accountant all my life; yes; but not a professional accountant; not practicing personally.

Q. State, in a general way, what your experience as an accountant has been?

A. I have been manager for Haskins and Sells, an accounting firm of New York. I left them in order to go in a special capacity with the Delaware & Hudson Company of Albany, to take charge of their accounting department and do special work. I returned to professional accounting after leaving the Delaware & Hudson Company and have practiced it since. I was in a professional capacity with the Delaware & Hudson Company, but not generally. 467

Q. State whether or not you have made any examination of the accounts in the States of West Virginia and Virginia under the decree of the Court.

A. I have, sir, made such an examination.

Q. How long a time were you engaged in that?

A. We have been engaged in it for approximately 15 months. It will be 15 months the middle of May.

Q. In what way did you ascertain the items in the charges and credits?

A. We took the books of original entry in the Commonwealth of Virginia in all cases where such books of original entry were in existence. They were in existence without any commission so far as this account was concerned, but we had reference to other books in reference to the examination and the accounting.

Q. Did you examine any public papers and documents in connection with the accounts?

A. All such papers and documents as had reference to the information that was required under the decree.

Q. State to the Court whether you and your assistants personally examined the items upon the books of original entry which entered into your accounts?

A. Yes; we went directly to the books of original entry.

Q. About how many items do you think you examined?

A. I estimated in round numbers;—and carefully estimated, 468 it was not a guess—about 750,000.

Q. And you took them off the books, did you?

A. Yes; we took them off our books. They are tabulated in what we call our working papers.

Q. And you have what you call your working papers?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many men did you have with you?

A. I had from five to nine.

Q. That many all the time?

A. All the time; varying between those numbers.

[Vol. 6. May 7, 1909. Cross Examination of T. B. Dixcy. Methods, and Sources.]

Cross Examination.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. I understood you to say that you were the professional 579 accountant, who had charge of the investigation of records here for the State of West Virginia?

A. They were made under my supervision and direction, yes, sir.

Q. And you say you occupied in the performance of that work approximately sixteen months?

A. Fifteen months, I think I said. It will be fifteen months the middle of this May.

Q. You began when?

A. We began the 14th of February. 580

Q. And concluded when?

A. The men are still here. They are working on some of the details now; but we turned in our last schedule completed, I think, on May 3rd.

Q. May 3rd of this year?

A. Of this month, yes, sir.

Q. And you began in February, 1908?

A. A year ago this last February, yes.

Q. How much of that time did you spend here in connection with the work?

A. You mean personally?

Q. Yes, personally.

A. I cannot answer that with definiteness. I was here during some months a longer period than during other months. I have no idea without referring to my diary, so as to state it in specific terms.

The Special Master: State it approximately.

The Witness: I have always said that I have spent about half of my time here. I think that would be approximate. Latterly I have spent more of my time here. I have been here continuously for the last six weeks or so.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. Did not Mr. Potter, who was in charge of the work for Virginia, propose to you that you unite and collaborate together?

A. I don't recall that. My recollection of that incident is that Mr. Potter suggested that we accept a certain amount as shown in one of the Acts, I think the Sinking Fund Act of 1853, as establishing the debt September 30, 1852, and as I knew 581 the books themselves did not substantiate the amount shown in the Act I refused to accept that. I also said to Mr. Potter that our method of examinations, that is the principle on which ours was conducted was so different from his that it would be impossible to collaborate on the other features.

Q. How did you know that; how did you know on what principle he was conducting his examination?

A. I had a very fair idea of the principle on which he was conducting it. I knew what books he was examining.

Q. He was examining the same books you were, I presume?

A. No; he did not examine all the books that we did.

Q. He must have examined some of them.

A. He did examine some of them.

Q. You were at work in the same capitol?

A. No, sir; he was working here and we were in the State Library Building.

Q. You were examining together the public records of Virginia, were you not?

A. We were examining them at the same time.

Q. And had a common object in view, did you not?

A. I don't know that the object was a common one.

Q. You do not? You say you had a general idea of the principle upon which he was working, and am I to understand that you derived that idea solely from the fact that you knew some of the books he was examining? 582

A. Not at all. Mr. Potter and I saw more or less of each other when we were down here, and in a general way there was no secret about what we were attempting to do; but the differences were such that it was impossible to collaborate and get along together—differences of principle.

Q. Did not Mr. Potter suggest as the reason for his proposal to you that it would insure a uniformity of plan in the statement of the accounts that you both were engaged in examining?

A. I do not recollect any such suggestion. Certainly I could not have acceded to it in any event.

Q. You could not have acceded to it?

A. No, sir.

Q. Then, if he had made a proposal, you must have declined it?

A. If the proposal was made I certainly should have declined it.

Q. Why would you have declined it?

A. Mr. Potter was acting under instruction of counsel for Virginia and I was acting under instruction of counsel for West Virginia.

The Special Master: In what respects did your methods differ?

The Witness: Our methods differed as to the detail in which we went into the accounts and the classification of the items.

By the Special Master:

Q. You say you differed in the details. That does not 583 illuminate me very much. In what particular did you differ as to how you went into the details?

A. Am I qualified to testify as to what Mr. Potter did? I can tell you what I did.

Q. If you do not know I will not bother you.

A. I was not familiar, of course, with all the details of Mr. Potter's work. I know we examined books that Mr. Potter did not examine, books of original entry, ledgers and journals.

Mr. Anderson: Can you specify what books?

Mr. Conrad: This is important.

The Witness: I can specify, but I will have to look it up.

The Special Master: Was the principal respect in which your methods differed the fact that Mr. Potter took the aggregates in many instances, and that you examined the details.

The Witness: Very largely that was the difference.

The Special Master: I rather inferred that. So that, in substance, was the difference in method between the two. Excuse me for interrupting.

Mr. Harrison: We are very much obliged to you for bringing that out.

The Witness: I should fancy—well, I don't want to guess.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. You don't want to guess?

A. No.

Q. You did no guessing in your examination? 584

A. I tried not to.

Q. For the purpose of considering for a moment the degree of work expended by yourself in this compilation, I will refer you to page 4 of the defendant's exhibit D-1, 4, 5, and 6, which relates to the expenses of the Government of Virginia, classified there as Ordinary Expenses. You stated in your examination in chief that you did not make the examination which is the foundation of that summary?

A. That is true, sir.

Q. But that you did compare the totals and verify them.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. With what did you compare the totals?

A. I said I verified—I don't think I said I compared the totals. If I did say that it was an inadvertence. I verified them, and my verification is right there.

Q. What do you mean by verifying them?

A. I mean, to put it specifically, as to the amounts charged to the various accounts.

Q. Verified them as to the amounts charged to the various accounts?

A. Yes.

Q. Well, did you examine every item?

A. I certainly did not; I made no attempt to.

Q. You did not compare the totals, then, with the books from which the items were taken?

A. Certainly, absolutely. We used every method of verification—

Q. I ask you if you did it?

A. I personally? 585

Q. Yes.

A. I did not in all cases.

Q. We are talking about the case that I have called to your attention.

A. I did not so far as all the items are concerned. I have already testified, I think, that in regard to details my personal examination was confined to an examination about some questions which arose in the course of examination.

Q. Then you have no personal knowledge of the details that enter into and make up the summary of this statement, Exhibit D-1?

A. I should say that was rather a broad statement.

Q. You can answer it in as broad a way as you choose.

A. I think that I have a rather intimate knowledge of the details that enter into the account; but as to specifying the exact amount of each one of the items that went into the account, or to say that I extracted that myself from the books of original entry or that I examined it after it had been extracted from the books of original entry would be very wide of the mark, because in the tremendous volume of items examined that would be impossible for one man to accomplish.

Q. My whole object is simply to ascertain how much you know about foundation of these summaries.

A. I understand that. 586

Q. I am not questioning the fact that they have been correctly taken off.

A. I understand that. I am trying to give you fully my personal relation to the matter.

Q. If I understand correctly, you did not compare the totals that you speak of having verified with the books yourself?

A. Not in all cases, no, sir.

Q. The books of original entry I am referring to now.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you did not have any part personally in the investigation of the books of original entry that resulted in the summary shown in Exhibit D-1?

A. I would like to add something there, if I may. You speak of comparing totals with the books of original entry .

Q. Yes.

A. I hardly know what you mean by that, because the books of original entry do not contain totals. They contain items. The books of original entry do not contain totals, but are made up of individual items.

Q. That is what I presumed.

A. And it would be impossible for me to compare totals with the books of original entry.

The Special Master: What he wants is just exactly what you mean when you say you verified these items. Now, he wants to know, first exactly what you did in the verification. That is what Mr. Harrison wants to get at, just exactly what processes you went through when you did what you say you did and verified these items. Now, what did you do with reference to that which resulted in verification? 587

The Witness: May I explain how the work was done?

The Special Master: Of course that is exactly what he wants, as I understand it.

Mr. Harrison: That is exactly what I want.

The Special Master: Explain exactly what you did when you say you verified these items. What did you do personally. That is what he wants to get.

The Witness: First, the total amounts were drawn off very similarly to the manner in which the Virginia totals were drawn off, I imagine, from the public records. Then we took the books of original entry, and an accountant and an assistant were assigned to abstract from the books of original entry all the items entered therein under a certain heading. For instance, Court charges, criminal charges, civil prosecutions, and various items of that kind. Each account was assigned to a team of accountants, or to an accountant and an assistant, and they went through the books of original entry and abstracted all the items in the period under examination from that account. Another set of accountants, another team, took some other accounts; and in that way all the items of receipts and disbursements were abstracted from the books of original entry and segregated. Then the total of those items, the individual items of each account, made the total account as appears on these schedules.

By the Special Master:

Q. Where did you come in; what did you do in the verification? 588

A. My work was supervisory, and in case any question arose or any question came up I examined that particular account personally, as I did in a number of cases, and passed on the matter where I could pass on it. When I could not pass on it it was submitted to counsel.

Q. Is that what you mean by verification?

A. No, sir; that is not what I mean by verification. Then the accounts were brought together in this final schedule, which we expect to introduce, showing the total of all these accounts, and the balances at the beginning and at the end of the period, and that account being in balance is an absolute verification of all the work that was done, and that I verified.

Q. Then I understand that you verified these various aggregates in connection with this general statement?

A. As a whole.

Q. For the purpose of ascertaining whether the thing balanced in the end?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. The classification of the work and the detail work was done by the gentlemen who were employed under you?

A. Under the constant direction of Mr. Scoville, who was my chief of staff, and who was here all the time.

[Vol. 6. May 7, 1909. Direct Examination of C. E. Scoville. His qualifications and methods.] was produced as a witness on behalf of the defendant, and being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

696

By Mr. McClintic:

Q. State your occupation?

A. I am a public accountant.

Q. State how long you have been engaged in the business of public accounting?

A. I have been engaged as a public accountant continuously for the last nine years.

Q. State where you are registered, if you are registered, if that is the proper term?

A. I have not taken the State examination in any State.

Q. State when you came to Virginia to engage in this 697 present work?

A. On the 14th of February of last year.

Q. How much time have you given it since the 14th of February, 1908.

A. Continuously.

Q. You have been here continuously from that time to this time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Giving your full time and attention to this particular work?

A. Entirely ,sir.

Q. What position did you occupy in relation to the work?

A. Chief of Mr. Dixcy's Staff of accountants, engaged on this examination.

Q. There has been filed here a number of accounts as exhibits. Please state generally what you had to do with all those exhibits and the making thereof, if anything?

A. A considerable portion of the work I did personally, and all of the work in preparing the details, working up to the schedules, was prepared under my direct supervision. I was present while all the work was done, and closely in touch with it all the time.

Acts Relating to the Fund for Internal Improvment and the Board of Public Works.

CHAP. XVII.

An Act to create a fund for Internal Improvement.

[Passed February 5th, 1816.] 35

1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly, That a fund shall be, and the same is hereby created, to be denominated "The Fund for Internal Improvement," and to be applied, exclusively, to the purpose of rendering navigable, and uniting by canals, the principal rivers, and of more intimately connecting, by public highways, the different parts of this Commonwealth.

2. And be it further enacted, That this fund shall consist of the shares held by the Commonwealth, in the stock of the little River Turnpike Company, of the Dismal Swamp, Appomattox, Potowmac, and James River Canal Companies, of the Bank of Virginia and Farmers' Bank of Virginia, together with such dividends as may, from time to time, accrue to such shares of stock, and such bonus, or premiums, as may be hereafter received, for the incorporation of new Banks, or for the augmentation of the capitals, or the extension of the charters of the existing Banks.

3. And be it further enacted, That, for the purpose of preserving and improving this fund, and of disbursing such portions of it as the General Assembly may, from time to time, direct to be applied to any object of internal improvement, it shall be and the same is hereby vested in a corporate body, to be styled, "The President and Directors of the Board of Public Works," in which name they shall have a common seal, and perpetual succession, subject to the limitation hereinafter provided, shall be capable of suing and being sued, pleading and being impleaded, and shall have and enjoy all the rights and privileges of a corporation.

4. And be it further enacted, That the Governor of the Commonwealth shall be, ex officio, President of the Board of Public Works; that the Directors, a majority of whom shall constitute a Board for the transaction of any business devolving on the corporation, shall consist of the Treasurer and the Attorney General of the Commonwealth, for the time being, and of ten citizens thereof; of whom three shall reside westward of the Allegany mountain; two between the Allegany and the Blue Ridge; three between the Blue Ridge and the great post road, which, passing through the territory of the Commonwealth, crosses the principal rivers thereof at, or about the head of tide water; and the residue, between that road and the sea coast.

5. And be it further enacted, That the Directors of the Board of Public Works, except the Treasurer and Attorney General, shall be chosen annually, by joint ballot of the two houses of the General Assembly, and receive such compensation for their services, as may be allowed by law, which, until otherwise provided, shall be the same mileage for travelling to and from the place of sitting, and the same pay per diem during the continuance of their session, as is now by law allowed to a member of the General Assembly. 36

6. And be it further enacted, That in the absence of the Governor, the board may elect a president pro tempore, from their own body, who shall preside over the deliberations of the board, until the Governor is enabled to attend.

7. And be it further enacted, That the President and Directors of the Board of Public Works shall have power to appoint a principal Engineer, or Surveyor of the Public Works, and a Secretary to the board; together with such other officers and assistants, as they shall deem necessary; each of whom shall receive for his services such compensation, as the President and Directors of the Board of Public Works may allow, to be paid out of the revenue of the fund for internal improvement, and to be reimbursed that fund, by an allowance to the Commonwealth of so much of the stock of any canal, or turnpike company, as shall constitute a reasonable compensation for the services rendered such company by the surveyor and his assistants.

9. And be it further enacted, That the President and Directors of the Board of Public Works may, at their annual meetings, enact, alter, or amend, such rules as to them may seem proper, for the purpose of regulating the order of their proceedings; that they may have power to adjourn the board for any period not exceeding six months, or, when occasion shall require it, to have an extra meeting at any other place than that designated by law, and shall have power to make and establish such bye-laws, rules and regulations, for the better ordering of the conduct of their officers, agents and servants, as to them may seem expedient, provided the same be not inconsistent with the constitution and laws of this Commonwealth, or of the United States of America. They shall also have power, at any time during the recess of the Legislature to fill any vacancy which may occur in their own body, either from death, resignation, removal, inability, or any other cause.

10. And be it further enacted, That the fund for internal improvement, subject to the order of the President and Directors of the board, shall be deposited in the Treasury of the Commonwealth, and kept distinct and apart from all other public money: It shall be paid out or delivered by the Treasurer of the Commonwealth to the order of the board, certified and subscribed by the Secretary, and countersigned by the President; that the Treasurer shall keep a fair and regular account of all such disbursements, and carefully preserve the certificates upon which the same shall have been made, and shall render an account thereof to the General Assembly, at the same time at which he renders his annual account of the disbursements of the ordinary revenue: that once in every year the Board of Public Works shall depute a committee of their body to examine the accounts of all disbursements made by order of the board, during the year next preceding the annual meeting of the board, and to compare these accounts with the Treasurer's books, and the certificates giving authority for the payment of the several sums of money, or stock, entered therein; that their reports shall certify to the board, that the same have been fully accounted for, or otherwise, as the case may be.

12. And be it further enacted, That the dividends on the stock which may be subscribed by the President and Directors of the Board of Public Works shall go exclusively to other subscribers than the Commonwealth, until such portion of the stock of those subscribers, as shall have been actually paid in, shall have 38 netted to them six per cent. per annum, from the specified time of such payment; that any increase of profit, after that nett income shall have been assured to the subscribers, shall belong exclusively to the fund for Internal Improvement, until the nett annual income of the whole stock, actually expended by any company, shall reach six per cent per annum; after which, the Commonwealth and the other subscribers to the stock of the company shall divide the nett profits on such stock in proportion to their respective interests. That, whenever the nett income of any company, to which any part of the fund hereby created shall have been subscribed, shall be found, for two succeeding years, or upon an average of five succeeding years, to surpass fifteen per cent. per annum, the General Assembly may reduce the tolls, from which such income is derived, so as to limit the nett revenue of the company to that amount; provided, that should the tolls for any two succeeding years fail to yield a nett income to the company of ten per cent. per annum, the President and Directors of the Board of Public Works, on satisfactory evidence being adduced thereof, may authorise the tolls to be augmented, so as to assure to the company such nett income; And provided, also, that after the lapse of sixty days from the period at which such tolls shall have first netted ten per cent. per annum, the maximum profit of the company may be reduced to twelve per cent.; and after the lapse of one hundred years from the same period to ten per cent per annum.

13. And be it further enacted, That the President and Directors of the Board of Public Works shall vest in some productive fund the unappropriated dividends accruing upon any of the stock committed to their charge, until the same shall be specially applied by law to some object of internal improvement: and shall have power, subject to the control of the General Assembly, to sell, from time to time, as may be ordained by law, the whole or any part of the shares held by the Commonwealth, in the stock of any canal, turnpike or other company subscribed for under the provisions of this Act, for the purpose of investing the proceeds of sale in the stock of some other similar company, subject to the like conditions as have been before expressed in this Act.

14. Be it further enacted, That the President and Directors of the Board of Public Works shall have power to appoint, in behalf of the Commonwealth, so many directors of every Public Work, as shall bear to the whole number of the directors of such work the proportion of the Commonwealth's shares of stock in such work, which may be subscribed in pursuance of this Act, to the whole number of shares subscribed thereto: provided, however, that whenever it shall be found expedient by the Legislature to authorise the subscription of any part of the fund hereby created to any company already incorporated, the provisions of this section shall not be construed as applying to such company, unless it be otherwise directed by the Act authorising the subscription.

15. Be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of the President and Directors of the Board of Public Works, to keep a fair and accurate record of all their proceedings, which shall be at all times open to the inspection of the members of the General Assembly, and of the President, Directors and other officers of any company interested therein; that they shall report to the General Assembly, at or near the commencement of every annual session thereof, the exact state of the fund for internal improvement; the progress and condition, noting especially the nett income, of all the public works within the Commonwealth; the surveys, plans and estimated expense of such new works as they may recommend to the patronage of the General Assembly, together with such other important information, as they may have it in their power to collect, in relation to the objects committed to their trust.

16. And be it further enacted, That the public faith shall be and the same is hereby solemnly pledged to fulfill the appropriation made by this Act; and that the said appropriation shall continue in force until the first day of January, of the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty six, except at such times as the United States of America may be involved in war, or the safety of this Commonwealth may, in the opinion of the General Assembly require; when the General Assembly may withdraw (during the period of actual hostilities, or of such imminent danger,) the whole or any part of the said fund for the purpose of defence; provided such withdrawal can be made without a violation of any engagement entered into under this Act.

17. This Act shall commence and be in force from and after the passage thereof.

2. And be it further enacted, That so much of the section aforesaid, as requires that the Treasurer shall preserve the certificates upon which disbursements of the fund for Internal Improvement have been or may be made, shall be and the same is hereby repealed; and all such certificates and vouchers shall be delivered, as soon as may be convenient after the passage of this law, to the Auditor of Public Accounts, together with a correct statement of all disbursements heretofore made, to be preserved by him in his office.

3. Be it enacted, That hereafter, it shall not be lawful for the President and Directors of the Board of Public Works, to subscribe for any part of the stock of any company, unless otherwise specially authorized by law, until they shall have received satisfactory evidence, not only that one-fifth part of the subscriptions of indivi-

4. Be it further enacted, That when the said board, having made any subscription for the stock of any such company, shall have good reason to believe that the private subscriptions are improperly withheld, or that the funds of the company are misapplied or will probably be misapplied, it shall be the duty of the said board to withhold payment of their subscriptions, until proper legal measures can be taken to secure the faithful payment of private subscriptions, and the faithful application of the funds of the company.

5. And be it further enacted, That the pay and allowance for travelling and attendance, to the members of the Board of Public Works hereafter, and to those who have attended during the present session of the Legislature, shall be the same as that allowed by law to the members of the General Assembly—But, no member of the General Assembly who may be a member of the Board of Public Works shall have any allowance for his attendance, or mileage, as a member of the board, when coming to, or during the sitting of the Legislature.

CHAP. XXXVIII.

An Act prescribing certain general regulations for the incorporation of turnpike companies.

[Passed February 7th, 1817.] 41

1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly, That, whenever it may be deemed expedient by the General Assembly, to grant a charter for the incorporation of a company to make a turnpike road, and an act shall actually pass the General Assembly for such purpose, the following general provisions shall be deemed and taken to be part of the said charter or act of incorporation, to the same effect as if the same were expressly re-enacted in reference to any such charter or act, except so far as such special grant, charter or act may otherwise expressly provide; viz: the commissioners named in any special act of incorporation, or a majority of them, shall have power to open books for subscriptions to the stock of the company, at such places as shall be named in the said special act, and to divide the capital stock authorized to be subscribed by the said act, into as many shares, not exceeding one hundred dollars each, in amount as they may deem proper, and to appoint any number of deputy commissioners to open books for a subscription to the stock of such company; and the subscriptions may be made by the subscribers to the said stock, either in person or by power of attorney in Virginia currency, or such medium as the commissioners or a majority of them may agree to receive. It shall be the duty of such commissioners, and deputy commissioners, to receive all monies which may be due upon the shares subscribed in their books, at any time before the first election of the president and directors of the company, as herein provided for; but all monies which may be payable on such shares, after such election, shall be paid to the said president and directors, or to their order. The said commissioners and deputy commissioners shall, forthwith, after such election, pay over to the president and directors all monies received by them; and in failure thereof, the said president and directors may recover the amount due from them, or from any one or more of them, by motion, on ten days previous notice, in the superior or inferior court of any county or corporation wherein such commissioner or commissioners may reside; the clerk shall endorse, upon the execution, which shall issue upon such recovery, that no security shall be taken, and the sheriff or other officer shall govern himself accordingly.

3. If it shall appear to this meeting on examination of the books, that one half of the said capital sum shall have been subscribed, then the said subscribers, their executors, administrators and assigns, from the time of said meeting, shall be and they are hereby declared incorporated into a company, with all the rights, privileges and immunities of a corporation or body politic in law, and may make such bye-laws and regulations, not inconsistent with the constitution and laws of this state, or of the United States, as shall be necessary for well ordering and conducting the affairs of the company.

16. In consideration of the expenses the proprietors will incur in opening, improving and repairing the said road, the said road, with all the tolls and profits, shall be and the same is hereby vested in the respective proprietors forever, in proportion to their respective shares; and the same shall be deemed personal estate, and shall be exempt from any public charge or tax whatsoever.

17. Be it further enacted, That, so soon as any section of five miles of the said road shall be completed, it shall be lawful for the president and directors to apply to the court of that county in which such section, or the greater part thereof, may lie, for the appointment of three discreet and disinterested freeholders to examine the same, who, or any two of whom, being sworn for that purpose, shall examine such section, and make a written report of the condition thereof to the court; and if, after such report and such other evidence as shall be offered, the said court shall be satisfied, that such section is completed in the manner prescribed by this act, they shall make an order of record declaring that it is so completed, and it 48 shall thereupon be lawful for the president and directors, and they are hereby authorized to erect thereon a toll gate or gates, and they shall be entitled to demand and receive the following tolls upon the said section, to wit: for every score of sheep or hogs, six and one quarter cents; for every score of cattle, twelve and one-half cents, and so in proportion for any greater or lesser number; for every horse, mare, mule or gelding, three cents; for every two wheeled riding carriage, ten cents; for every four wheeled riding carriage, twenty cents; for every cart or waggon the wheels whereof do not exceed four inches in width, six and a quarter cents, for every four footed animal drawing the same; and for every cart or waggon the wheels of which exceed four inches in width, and roll less than seven inches, three cents for every four footed animal drawing the same; and for every cart or waggon the wheels of which are seven inches or more in width, one cent, for every four footed animal drawing the same: Provided always, that return waggons or carts shall pay one-half of the said tolls only: and the like rules and proceedings shall be had for every other section of five miles of the said road, when the same shall be completed, and the like tolls shall be paid for passing the same; and if, after all the full sections of said road shall be completed, there shall remain any fractional part of a section, a toll gate may be erected thereon after it shall be completed, in the same manner as is provided in relation to the full sections; and tolls may be demanded thereat, bearing the same proportion to the tolls allowed on a full section as the said fractional part bears to such full section.

eighteen months, then shall the interest of the said company in the road and tolls aforesaid be forfeited and cease forever.

28. Be it further enacted, If the said president and directors 52 not begin the said work within two years, after the passage of the act for incorporating the company, or shall not complete the same within ten years thereafter, in the manner hereinbefore directed, then the interest of the said company, in the road and tolls aforesaid, shall be forfeited and cease.

29. At the end of one year from the completion of the road, the president and directors shall report, to the baord of public works, a statement, shewing the whole amount of the capital stock expended in the construction of the road, the amount of tolls received during each preceding year, the expenses and charges incurred during each year, and the nett annual profit or loss, on the capital expended. If, from this statement and such other evidence as shall be offered, the president and directors of the board of public works shall be satisfied, that the nett average profits of the three succeeding years, on the capital stock expended, will not equal ten per centum per annum, then the said president and directors of the board of public works shall so augment the tolls hereby allowed so as to make them sufficient, in their estimation, to yield such nett annual profit for the three succeeding years; and if the said board of public works shall be satisfied, from the evidence aforesaid, that the average nett profits of the said three succeeding years will exceed fifteen per centum per annum, on the capital stock expended, then they shall so diminish the tolls hereby allowed as to make them only sufficient, in their estimation, to yield an annual nett profit of fifteen per centum per annum, for the said period of three years. The president and directors of the turnpike company shall in like manner, at the expiration of every period of three years, after the said one year from the completion of the road, return to the board of public works a 53 similar statement shewing the amount of expenditures, receipts and nett profits of each year, of such period; and upon each return so made, it shall be the duty of the president and directors of the board of public works to regulate the tolls by increasing them when below the minimum, and diminishing them when above the maximum, upon the principle above laid down, so as to attain as nearly as practicable the following result, that is to say: that for each period of three years during the first twenty-one years, the average nett profits upon the capital stock expended shall not exceed fifteen per centum per annum, nor be less than ten per centum per annum; that, for each period of three years, for the next thirty years, the average nett profits upon the capital stock expended shall not exceed twelve per centum per annum, nor be less than eight per centum per annum; and that, for each period of three years thereafter, the average nett profits upon the capital stock expended shall not exceed ten per centum per annum, nor be less than six per centum per annum.

The president and directors of the board of public works may from time to time prescribe the form, in which the returns aforesaid shall be made, and the evidence by which they shall be verified; and if the president and directors of the turnpike company shall fail to make the return accordingly, and to produce the evidence required for its verification, without good cause for such failure to be shewn to the board of public works, it shall be the duty of the president and directors of the board of public works to make an entry upon their journal declaring such failure, and forthwith to reduce the tolls of said turnpike company, to an amount not exceeding one half the tolls hereby allowed, and calculated to yield a nett profit not exceeding in their estimation five per centum per annum. Such reduction shall be continued until the proper return shall have been made, verified by the proper evidence, or until good cause shall have been shown for the failure.

30. And the president and directors of the said company are hereby required, when they make their first report to the board of public works as herein required, to accompany the same, with a complete plat or map of their road.

32. The president and directors shall cause to be written or printed certificates for the shares of the stock in the said company, and shall deliver one such certificate, signed by the president, and counter-signed by the treasurer, to each person for every share subscribed by him, which certificate shall be transferable by him, subject however to all payments due or to become due thereupon; and such assignee, having first caused the transfer or assignment to be entered in a book of the company to be kept for that purpose, shall thenceforth become a member of the said company, and shall be liable to pay all sums due, or which shall become due upon the stock assigned to him: Provided, however, That such assignment shall in no wise exempt the assignor, or his representatives, from their liability to the said company, for the payment of all such sums, if the assignor or his representatives shall be unable, or shall fail to pay the same; And provided, moreover, That if the commonwealth shall desire to purchase the stock of such company, and shall vest authority to make such purchase in any person, body politic or corporate, it shall not be lawful for any proprietor of such stock to sell or transfer the same to any other person whatever, until he shall actually and with good faith have offered the same for sale, for the price which he is willing to take therefor, to the person, body politic or corporate so authorized to purchase by the Commonwealth; and after such person, body politic or corporate shall have been so authorized to purchase on behalf of the commonwealth, no transfer or assignment to any other person shall be registered, or entered in the books of the company, nor shall any such transfer or assignment vest any right whatever, unless it shall be proved to the satisfaction of said president and directors, that the stock so assigned, or transferred, had been, with good faith, previously offered to the person, body politic or corporate, so authorized, at a price at least as low as that at which it had been sold to such assignee, or transferree.

* * * * *

35. Be it further enacted, That the powers hereby given to the president and directors of the board of public works, may be at any time transferred by the legislature to any other corporate or natural body, and all returns hereby directed to be made to the said board of public works may be hereafter in like manner directed to be made to any other body.

36. This act shall commence and be in force from the passing thereof.

CHAP. LXXXI.—An act prescribing certain general conditions on which future subscriptions to the capital of joint stock companies shall be made on behalf of the commonwealth.

[Passed February 11th, 1832.] 71

1. Be it enacted by the general assembly, That all subscriptions which are now authorized by law, and have not been made by the board of public works, or which may hereafter be so authorized shall be subject to the following conditions previous to subscription, to wit: In every case the board of public works shall be furnished with a certificate, under the seal of the company, signed by their treasurer, and countersigned by their president, stating that at least one-fourth of the private subscriptions of not less than three-fifths of the capital stock, has been actually paid up into the hands of the said treasurer, and that the remainder of said subscription is either so paid, or is made by solvent persons fully able to pay; and these facts shall be shewn to the satisfaction of the board of public works. They shall also be furnished with a list of the stockholders, shewing the number of shares standing in each name. If any private improvement shall have been commenced previously to the subscription thereto being authorized or made, the board of public works shall be furnished with a statement, shewing the amount of money received up to the date of such statement, and on what account received, and of the amount expended in the work, together with the balance of money on hand the contracts entered into for the construction of the improvement, the exact progress made therein, as near as may be, its dimensions, its mode of construction, and a correct map of its location.

2. The instalments on the future subscriptions of the board of public works, shall be payable in the manner, and on the conditions herein-after mentioned, when not otherwise specially provided by law; that is to say, one-fourth of such subscriptions shall be paid on the production of the draft of the treasurer, or other authorized agent of the company, for the same, in such form as the board of public works may prescribe and the remaining three-fourths on similar drafts, in six equal semi-annual instalments, or in instalments of the same proportions with future payments of private subscriptions, at the discretion of the board of public works: Provided, That before payment of the instalments aforesaid, the said board of public works shall be furnished in every case with a certificate in the form and manner required by the first section of this act, shewing the amount actually paid up by the private stockholders, which amount must be at least equal in proportion to the amount payable by the board of public works. But should the fund for internal improvement be inadequate, in the opinion of the said board, to the payment of the full amount of the instalments aforesaid, after providing for the subscriptions previously made, then their subscriptions shall be payable in such proportions, and at such periods, as the said board may deem expedient.

4. When the board of public works, having made any subscriptions to the stock of any company, shall have good cause to believe that the private subscriptions are improperly withheld, or that the funds of the company are misapplied, or will probably be misapplied, it shall be the duty of the said board to withhold payment of their subscriptions until proper legal measures can be taken to secure the faithful payment of private subscriptions, and the faithful application of the funds of the company.

5. The board of public works shall have the right to appoint such a number of the directors in all companies hereafter incorporated, to whose stock the board of public works may subscribe, as will be in proportion to the stock so subscribed; and the fund for internal improvement shall participate in all dividends declared by said companies, in the proportion which the amount actually paid on behalf of the state, bears to the amount of private subscriptions actually paid up at the time of declaring such dividends: and in all general meetings of the stockholders of such company, the proxy or proxies representing the interest of the fund for internal improvement, shall have the right to vote on all questions, and in the election of all officers except directors, in the manner, and under the limitations contained in the twentieth section of the act, entitled, "an act prescribing certain general regulations for the incorporation of turnpike companies," passed the seventh day of February, eighteen hundred and seventeen.

6. It shall be the duty of the president and directors of every such company, to the stock of which the board of public works shall subscribe as aforesaid, annually, on or before the seventh day of December, to furnish to the secretary of the board of public works a report of the income and expenditure of every such company, for the next preceding year, including payments made by the stockholders, as well as tolls, together with a statement of the progress and condition of their works a list of the stockholders at the time of making said report, with the number of shares standing in each name, and such other information respecting the affairs of said company, as the board of public works may require. It shall also be the duty of the president and directors of such company, within sixty days after any dividend shall have been declared by them, to give information thereof to the second auditor, and to pay into the public treasury, to the credit of the fund for internal improvement, within the said period, any such dividend to which the board of public works may be entitled: and in case of failure, either on the part of the president and directors of such company, in furnishing such report and information, or of the treasurer of such company, in paying such dividends as aforesaid, the president and directors, or the treasurer, as the case may be, of each company so failing, shall individually forfeit and pay to the board of public works, a penalty not exceeding fifty dollars; which said dividends and penalty may be recovered by motion in the general court, on ten days previous notice. 73

7. All acts and parts of acts coming within the purview of this act, shall be, and the same are hereby repealed.

8. This act shall be in force from and after the passing thereof.

CHAP. 94.—An ACT to explain the act authorizing subscriptions on part of the commonwealth to the capital of joint stock companies.

(Passed March 18, 1836.) 69

Whereas the limited income of the fund for internal improvement will not justify subscriptions on the part of the state to all the canal, rail-road, turnpike, navigation, or other joint stock companies, which have been, or may be incorporated, for carrying on works of internal improvement, and it is expedient, until such income shall be adequately increased, that it shall be applied to the aid of such works, as by their character or position are best calculated to promote the prosperity of the state at large: Therefore,

1. Be it enacted by the general assembly, That nothing contained, or to be contained, in any acts incorporating companies for the purpose of executing and carrying on works of internal improvement, shall be considered as a pledge or assurance on the part of the general assembly, to subscribe on behalf of the state for any portion of the stock of such companies, unless the legislature expressly direct such subscription to be made in the act of incorporation, or by subsequent enactment.

2. This act shall be in force from its passage.

See Act April 9th, 1838, Chap. 12, under head "Interest on Public Debt."

[No. 8.] Joint Resolution requesting the members of Congress from this State to secure the aid of the United States in repairing roads and bridges injured during the war.

Whereas, during the recent rebellion, our state, lying on the border, has been peculiarly exposed to the raids of the enemy and the ravages and desolations resulting from the oft repeated tread of advancing and retreating armies; and whereas, during this painful process, our citizens have endured suffering beyond weight or measure, in the loss of life in every form, at the hand of every variety of enemy—in captivity—in exile—in perils night and day; and in many parts of our state the general disruption of all organized legal and social order, and the embarrassment of even the ordinary pursuits indispensable to their comfort and existence. In this broad sweep of contending armies, and foes of lesser note, many of their churches, court houses—not to mention private property—have been injured or destroyed; but the roads and bridges, the most important of which, were in part owned by the state, and were used and many of them destroyed, by the Union armies—and the bridges burnt by order of the Union commanders as means of safety, leaving our principal roads impassable. Therefore,

Resolved by the Legislature of West Virginia, That our senators in congress be hereby instructed, and our representatives 134 requested, to respectfully, yet earnestly, present our grievances to the attention of congress, and to adopt such measures as may best secure adequate relief in the premises; and that the governor transmit a copy hereof to each of our senators and representatives in congress.

ADOPTED, January 24, 1866.

[W. Va.]

The suspension bridges across the Monongahela river at Fairmont and Morgantown, and any other such bridge in this state, and the Kanawha turnpike, are not intended to be included in this act.

Provided, that this act shall not apply to the Maryland and Virginia Bridge Company.

Third. The Virginia Central Railroad Company:

The said commissioners of Virginia and West Virginia, by virtue of the authority given them by the statutes already referred to, and in order to secure the speediest and best construction, equipment, and operation of the said railroad from Covington to the Ohio river, according to the true intent and meaning of the said statutes, have contracted therefor with the said Virginia Central Railroad Company as the party giving the best terms and the most satisfactory assurances of having the capital, capacity and responsibility contemplated and required by the said statutes, and have introduced into the said contract the following additional stipulation, proposed by the stockholders of the said Virginia Central Railroad Company in general meeting on the twenty-ninth day of November, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, and accepted by the said commissioners as being for the benefit of their respective states and in furtherance of the purposes declared by the legislature aforesaid, viz:

I. The work to be commenced and completed in the time and manner provided in the charter.

II. The company to guarantee four per cent semi-annual dividends upon any stock which may be subscribed for the construction of said road, after the completion of the road to the Ohio river, and in the meantime said stock shall be preferred in any dividends which shall be declared by the company, to an extent not exceeding four per cent semi-annually.

III. The company to borrow such sums of money at a rate of interest not exceeding eight per cent per annum, as may be necessary, in addition to the funds arising from stock subscriptions for the completion of said road, and to execute a lien on its property and resources to secure the payment of the principal and interest of such loans: Provided, that subscriptions may be received to be applied to the construction of the work continuously from either end of the line.

IV. The company may guarantee the payment of principal and interest of bonds of cities and counties, receivable in payment of subscription to stock.

V. That bonds of cities and counties at ninety cents on the dollar, and bearing eight per cent per annum interest, convertible into preferred stock, be received in payment of subscription to stock.

VI. Nothing contained in any contract made by this company shall have the effect to deprive the present creditors of the company of their claims for satisfaction out of the present property of the company, and it shall be the duty of the president and directors, before executing any further lien on the present property of the company, to secure by mortgage any portion of the funded or floating debt, not heretofore so received, that cannot be promptly paid off in the ordinary administration of the affairs of the company.

And the said Virginia Central Railroad Company having undertaken and contracted to construct the said railroad, on the terms and conditions aforesaid, it is hereby declared and certified that the said company shall hereafter be known as "The Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad Company," and is entitled to all the benefits of the charter of the Covington and Ohio Railroad, and to all the rights, interests, and privileges which, by the statutes aforesaid, are conferred upon the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad Company, when organized.

In testimony whereof, the commissioners of Virginia and West Virginia have set their hands and seals; and the said Virginia Central Railroad Company has caused the corporate seal of the company to be affixed, with the signature of Edward Fontaine, president of said company, this thirty-first day of August, eighteen hundred and sixty-eight.

ACTS RELATING TO STATE'S EXPENDITURES ON "KANAWHA IMPROVEMENTS."

CHAPTER LVI.—An act to amend the act, entitled "an act for clearing and improving the navigation of James river," and for uniting the eastern and western waters, by the James and Kanawha rivers.

Whereas it will be greatly beneficial to the good peopple of this Commonwealth to improve the navigation of the James and Jackson's rivers, from tide water to the mouth of Dunlap's creek, by navigable canals and locks, where necessary; to make a convenient road from thence to the great falls of the Kanawha river; and to make the last mentioned river conveniently navigable from the great falls thereof to the river Ohio. And, whereas there is reason to believe that the James River Company is willing to consent to such modifications of their charters as will enable the said company, as an agent acting and holding in trust for the benefit of this Commonwealth, to undertake and carry the said improvements into effect, in such manner as the General Assembly shall, from time to time, direct and require; and, under the direction and superintendence of such agent or agents as may from time to time be appointed for that purpose; by appropriating to these objects such sums of money as they may borrow, under the authority and by the direction of the General Assembly, and upon such terms as may be prescribed by law from time to time; and that the said company will moreover consent to apply all their surplus tolls and income of every kind which may accrue after the first day of January, eighteen hundred and twenty, from the works and property now belonging to them, or which they may hereafter acquire, to the payment of the interest on the money which they may so borrow, except only so much thereof, as may be necessary to defray the expenses of keeping their works now existing, or hereafter to be made, in complete repair, and all reasonable expenses necessary for collecting tolls, and managing all other affairs of the company; and, moreover, excepting so much of the said tolls and income as may be necessary to pay, in semi-annual instalments, a dividend upon the present stock of the said company, of twelve per centum per annum, for and during the term of twelve years from said first day of January, eighteen hundred and twenty, and fifteen per centum per annum from and after the expiration of the said term of twelve years, forever

1. Be it therefore enacted, That, if the James River Company shall, on or before the fifteenth day of March next, assent to the provisions of this act, by a resolution to that effect, entered on their journals, and certify the same to the Governor of this Commonwealth, who shall forthwith make proclamation thereof, then this act shall immediately commence and be in force; and shall thereafter be considered a compact between this Commonwealth and the said company; subject, however, at all times, to such change and modification, as the legislature may think proper to make; Provided, That no such change or modification shall be made as will take from the James River Company their right to the dividends, or any part of the dividends upon their stock, allowed to them by this act; and that no such change or modification shall be made as will take from those who may have loaned money to the said company, under the faith of this act, the security hereby pledged to them for the payment of the interest thereon.

2. And be it further enacted, That, in the event of the assent of said company, as aforesaid, the said company shall, during the present year, so far as their funds, hereinafter provided for, will enable them, and without delay, proceed to the execution, and steadily persevere to the completion, of the following works, and in the following order, that is to say: First, to render the Great Kanawha, from the great falls thereof to the Ohio river, navigable at all seasons of the year for boats drawing three feet water, according to the plan of the principal engineer, in his report to the Board of Public Works, made in January, eighteen hundred and twenty. Secondly, to improve the navigation of James river, from tide water to Pleasant's Island, by locks and navagable canals, affording at all seasons of the year at least three feet depth of water from tide water to said island, and so as to navigate conveniently boats carrying one thousand bushels of coal at all points below the highest point at which coal lands on James river are now known; and above such coal lands, by a canal, not less than thirty feet wide at top, and twenty feet wide at bottom, having, at all seasons of the year, not less than three feet depth of water, in every part thereof, according to the said report of the principal engineer, and make safe and convenient communications from the river, at such point or points as will afford ample accommodation to the coal trade. Thirdly, to make the best road practicable, at an expense of one hundred thousand dollars, from the mouth of Dunlap's creek, to the great falls of the Great Kanawha river, and to expend in the making of said road, in each of the two successive years, immediately following the completion of the aforesaid works, the sum of fifty thousand dollars; the said road to be made in the most direct practicable route, not to exceed in any part five degrees of declivity or acclivity, and to be made according to the suggestions of the said report of the principal engineer. Fourthly, to make navigable canals and locks from Pleasant's island to the mouth of Dunlap's creek, according to the suggestions of the 41 said report of the principal engineer, as nearly as may be. And fifthly, to make safe and convenient communications from the river, at such points as will afford ample accommodation to the trade on the river: the road aforesaid to be completed according to the provisions of the act, entitled, "An act prescribing certain general regulations for the incorporation of turnpike companies," dispensing, however, with the summer roads required by the said act, except clearing the same of timber; and the winter road shall be improved, as required by the said act, at least twenty-two feet wide, except in difficult places, but in no place less than eighteen feet wide; and the said company shall constantly keep said road in good repair: Provided, however, That, if the sum of one hundred thousand dollars should be insufficient to improve the road in the manner described in this section, then such further sums shall from time to time be appropriated as will be adequate to that purpose. The improvements aforesaid, and all others, which may be prescribed by the legislature, shall, from time to time, be made under the superintendence of such commissioner or commissioners, agent or agents, as the General Assembly shall from time to time appoint.

2. And be it enacted, That, to enable the James River Company to open and complete the aforesaid road, and to keep the same constantly in good repair, which they are hereby required to do, they shall be entitled to avail themselves of all the provisions in favor of turnpike companies, which are to be found in the act, entitled, "an act prescribing certain general regulations for the incorporation of turnpike companies," as well for the condemnation of lands as for other purposes.

ing the lands so acquired for the purpose of improving and for the convenient use of the navigation aforesaid, and the other purposes aforesaid, but may at any time thereafter acquire, by purchase, the right to use the same for machinery as aforesaid, or may at any time dispose of water power to the proprietor of the adjoining lands on such terms as they may agree upon, not endangering the navigation as aforesaid. And the said company shall have the right to enter on lands for laying out their canals, dams and other works, and in making examinations as to the best mode of improvement, in like manner as is allowed to turnpike companies by the act aforesaid. And if the said company should have occasion to carry materials for their works through the lands of others, or to deposit such materials on the lands of others, or to carry on any of their said works on such lands, and cannot contract with the proprietors of such lands for the privileges aforesaid, on reasonable terms, they may proceed to assess the value of such privileges, and acquire them as lands may be acquired as aforesaid, changing the forms of the proceedings as occasion may require. And in case any controversy shall arise in any county or other inferior court, in relation to the matters aforesaid, between the said company, their servants or agents, and others, the same shall be decided as soon as may be, having a due regard to justice, without regard to priority of other matters or suits upon the docket; and, in case of unreasonable delay herein in such court, such suit or controversy shall be removed by certiorari, in to the superior court having jurisdiction thereof, and there be speedily decided as aforesaid.

Commonwealth, and shall be deemed real estate, transferable only on the books of the said company, by the proprietor or proprietors, his, her or their agent or agents, duly authorised, and shall be forever exempt from the payment of any tax, assessment or imposition whatsoever.

5. And be it enacted, That, so soon as the improvements for the navigation of the Kanawha river shall be completed as aforesaid, from Slaughter's creek to the Ohio river, the said company shall be entitled to demand and receive, upon boats and commodities passing the said river, tolls at the following rates, that is to say: On salt, two cents per bushel; on bacon, twelve and a half cents per hundred weight; on every barrel of cider or beer, twenty cents; on every cask of linseed or other oil, ten cents; on every bushel of wheat, peas, beans, flax or hemp seed, one cent and a half; on every bushel of indian corn, oats, potatoes or apples, one cent; on every barrel of pork or beef, ten cents; on every barrel of flour, six and a fourth cents; on every bushel of indian meal, one cent; on every bushel of dried fruit, two cents; on every ton of hemp, potash, bar or manufactured iron, one dollar; every ton of pig iron or castings, forty-five cents; every hundred bushels of lime, one dollar; every chaldron of 43 coal, twenty-five cents; every hundred barrel staves or heading, one cent; every hundred hoop poles, one cent; every hundred cubic feet of plank or scantling, three cents; every hundred cubic feet of other timber, six cents; every hundred hogshead or pipe staves, two cents; every empty barrel, one quarter of a cent; on whiskey, apple and peach brandy, or other domestic spirits, fifty cents per barrel; on rum, wine, gin and french brandy, or other foreign liquors, three cents per gallon; every hundred weight of all other commodities or packages whatsoever, thirty cents; on every boat or vessel other than canoes, not having commodities on board, yielding a toll of at least one dollar and fifty cents, one dollar and fifty cents; and every canoe, having commodities on board, the rate of toll herein-before prescribed: Provided, That an empty boat, canoe or other vessel, returning, whose load has already paid tolls, shall return toll-free. Which said tolls shall be paid at or near the Tyler shoals, as the tolls of the James River Company are now payable and collectable by law; and the said company shall have all the remedies for recovering said tolls, as they now have by law for collecting and recovering their present tolls.

6. And, so soon as the said company shall have opened and improved the road aforesaid in sections, such as are specified in the act aforesaid, by the gradual expenditure of the said sum of one hundred thousand dollars, they shall be authorised to collect and receive, in the manner prescribed by the said act, tolls on the said road, in sections, to the amount of one half the tolls authorised by the said act, in relation to turnpike roads: and so soon as the said road shall be completed, according to the provisions of the said act, with the exceptions aforesaid, in sections, the said company shall be entitled to receive and collect thereon, the full tolls authorised by the said act.

7. And, so soon as the said canals and other works shall be completed, from tide water, to the highest point on James river, where coal is now raised, the said company shall be entitled to receive a toll of two cents per bushel, on all coal passing the same, or any part thereof, in lieu of the toll which they are now entitled to receive on coal.

8. And the General Assembly hereby pledge themselves, that, as the works aforesaid on the James and Jackson's rivers, and in the vallies of these rivers, shall progress, and shall contribute to reduce the expense of transportation, up or down the said rivers or canals, below the average price of transportation upon the said rivers, as they have been for the three years last past, they will authorise the said company to receive tolls thereon, in convenient sections, to the amount necessary, (with their other resources specified in this act, as applicable to the payment of interest on money to be borrowed by them,) for the payment of the interest on the money expended in such work; provided, that such additional tolls shall not exceed one third of the saving in transportation up and down the said rivers, which will accrue thereby to those who use the said improvements, taking the average price of transportation for three years last past, as the basis of the estimates.

9. And be it enacted, That fourteen commissioners be ap- 44 pointed, residing in the counties bordering on the James river and Jackson's river, for the purpose of ascertaining the average price of transportation, of the various commodities liable to toll, according to the terms of the charter of the James River Company, and all other commodities up and down the rivers aforesaid, for three years last past; that is to say, Daniel Warwick of the city of Richmond, William Trabue of Chesterfield, Tarlton Woodson of Goochland, Jacob Michaux of Powhatan, Francis B. Deane of Cumberland, John H. Cocke of Fluvanna, William J. Freeland of Buckingham, Robert Rives of Nelson, William Moon of Albemarle, John Horsley of Amherst, Richard Pollard of Campbell, Isaac Otey of Bedford, Robert White of Rockbridge, and James Cartmill of Botetourt. It shall be the duty of each commissioner, to enquire diligently and impartially, upon the oaths of such person or persons as may be well informed upon the subject, in their respective counties aforesaid, what has been the average price as aforesaid, of the transportation of all commodities up and down the said rivers, or otherwise, from and to Richmond, and from and to the principal landings and places of deposit on the said rivers, in the said counties respectively. And the said commissioner, in each of the said counties, shall forthwith return an account of such average prices ascertained as aforesaid, to the courts of the said counties respectively, to be there recorded, and shall moreover, return duplicates of said accounts to the president and directors of the James River Company, to be recorded and preserved. To each of which accounts and duplicates, the said commissioner shall make affidavit that has justly, diligently and impartially discharged the duties prescribed by this act, and that such account, or duplicate, is the result of these inquiries. The said commissioner shall proceed to the execution of the duties aforesaid, as soon as he shall be required by the James River Company; and, in case of a vacancy occurring from any cause, it shall be supplied by the court of the county in which it shall happen.

10. And be it further enacted, That, from and after the period at which the said company holding, as an agent, in trust for the benefit of the Commonwealth, shall give their assent as aforesaid to this act, they shall not be obliged to work on the bed of James river as heretofore, except so far as may be necessary to render the navigation from the upper locks to Lynchburg as easy and equal in every part as may be practicable; and the said company shall, at all times hereafter, keep the bed of the river, above the point to which any new improvement contemplated by this act shall be completed for use and connected with the river and below Crow's ferry, as good and convenient for navigation as it now is, and as it will be after the repairs aforesaid shall be made: all which repairs are to be contracted for and made by the company, from time to time, under the control, direction and superintendence of the commissioners, on the part of the Commonwealth, for superintending the works aforesaid on the James and Jackson's rivers hereafter mentioned, or of such other commissioner or commissioners, superintendent or superintendents, as the legislature may appoint; except so far as the said company shall undertake said repairs before they shall have received directions from the commissioners aforesaid. And, so soon as the said company shall have assented to the provisions of this act, the writ of quo warranto depending against them at the instance of the General Assembly shall be dismissed.

11. And be it enacted, That nine commissioners shall be annually appointed by joint ballot of the General Assembly, for superintending the works aforesaid on the Kanawha river, and the road aforesaid; who shall be denominated "the commissioners for the Kanawha river and road;" the acts of a majority of whom shall be in all cases obligatory. And nine commissioners shall be annually appointed, by joint ballot of the General Assembly on behalf of this Commonwealth, for superintending the works aforesaid, on the James and Jackson's rivers; the acts of a majority of whom shall be in all cases obligatory. No contract or contracts made by the James River Company for improving the navigation of the Kanawha river and road, shall be binding, or carried into effect, until the same shall be submitted to and approved in writing by the commissioners named to superintend the works on said river and road: and no contract or contracts made by the said company for making any of the improvements on the James or Jackson's rivers, shall be obligatory or carried into effect until the same shall be submitted to and approved, in writing, by the commissioners named to superintend the works on the last mentioned rivers, who shall be denominated "The Commissioners for the James and Jackson's Rivers." And the said company shall semi-annually lay before the last mentioned commissioners an account of their receipts and disbursements, to be by them examined, stated and settled, after comparing the same with the books and vouchers of the company, and be reported by them to the General Assembly and to the Board of Public Works: Provided, however, That the boards of commissioners, hereby appointed to superintend the Kanawha river and the road, and the James and Jackson's rivers, may from time to time, adopt such rules and regulations for the distribution of the powers and duties hereby assigned them, amongst the members thereof, as they may think proper.

12. And be it further enacted, That the treasurer of the state shall be ex-officio treasurer of the company, shall be liable, as such, to the same penalties and conditions, as he is, as treasurer of the Commonwealth, and shall give additional security, in the sum of two hundred thousand dollars, for his faithful discharge of the duties hereby imposed.

13. And, to the end that adequate funds may be provided for the purpose of completing the works aforesaid: Be it enacted, That it shall be lawful for the James River Company, and they are hereby required to borrow, annually, after the fifteenth day of March next, from such individuals or corporate bodies, as may be disposed to lend, at an interest not exceeding six per centum per annum, payable semi-annually, two hundred thousand dollars, or such greater or less sum as may be hereafter directed and authorised by law; and in such proportions, and at such periods of the year as the said company shall deem expedient, to be applied to the execution of the works and improvements aforesaid, or such other works and improvements as the General Assembly shall hereafter direct: which authority and obligation shall continue until it shall be otherwise directed by law. The said Company shall issue certificates, under their common seal, (which, for this and all other purposes they are hereby authorised to have and use,) for the money so borrowed, and register the 46

of the said company by the person or persons, or corporate bodies entitled thereto, or by their agents legally qualified for that purpose. The tolls and all other income of the said company, (after setting apart so much thereof as may be necessary to discharge all expenses of repairs, of the collection of tolls, and other necessary expenses of conducting the affairs of the said company; and also so much thereof as may be necessary to pay to the stockholders of said company, for twelve years next after the first day of January, eighteen hundred and twenty, a dividend of twelve per centum per annum on their stock, in semi-annual payments, and for ever thereafter a dividend in like manner of fifteen per centum per annum,) shall be applied to the payment of the interest on money so borrowed; and the surplus of such tolls and other income, after the payment of the expenses, dividends and interest, as aforesaid, shall from time to time be paid into the treasury of this Commonwealth, to the credit of the fund for internal improvement, to be disposed of as may, from time to time, be directed by law. And, if, at any time, the said company shall fail or refuse, or the tolls and other income aforesaid, after making the deductions aforesaid, shall be insufficient to pay the interest due upon said certificates, upon demand, the holder of such certificate shall cause a protest to be made, by a notary public, stating such demand and refusal, and thereupon the president of the Board of Public Works shall, immediately upon the production of such certificate and protest, issue his order, countersigned by the secretary of said board, authorising the payment of such interest out of the income of the fund for internal improvement; and the auditor of public accounts shall thereupon issue his warrant upon the treasurer therefor, and endorse such payment upon the back of such certificate. And so much of the income of the fund for internal improvement as may be necessary for the payment of such interest, unpaid by the said company from time to time, is hereby pledged for that purpose in preference to any other object: Provided, nevertheless, that such pledge shall not exceed twelve thousand dollars per annum, to be taken from the income of said fund.

14. And be it further enacted, That, for all such payments made out of the income of the fund for internal improvement, before the works on the James river shall be completed from tide water to Lynchburg, the said company shall deliver to the president and directors of the Board of Public Works certificates of debt, as aforesaid, carrying interest at six per centum per annum, payable semi-annually; but the interest not to commence thereon until the works shall have been completed as aforesaid to Lynchburg. And for all such payments made, after the works aforesaid shall have been completed to Lynchburg, like certificates shall be issued, and the interest thereon shall commence from and after the date when the whole of the works aforesaid, or such other as the General Assembly shall hereafter direct in lieu of any part of them, shall be completed. 47

CHAPTER 46.—An act to amend the act, entitled, "an act to amend the act for clearing and improving the navigation of James River, and for uniting the Eastern and Western Waters, by the James and Kanawha Rivers."

Whereas it is the opinion of this General Assembly, that the coal trade on the James river, and the salt trade on the Great Kanawha river, ought to be fostered and encouraged; and it being represented that the tolls to be received by the James River Company on those articles, when certain improvements in the navigation of those rivers shall have been made as provided for by the act, entitled, "an act to amend the act, entitled, an act for clearing and improving the navigation of James river, and for uniting the eastern and western waters, by the James and Kanawha rivers," may be found to be burthensome on both or one of those articles; and whereas it is expedient at this time to provide a remedy for such evil, should it, on experience, be found to arise;

1. Be it therefore enacted, That, until improvements contemplated by the above recited act, shall be completed, and the stock issued by the company for loans of money, shall be purchased in, as provided for by said act, or otherwise redeemed, the tolls on those 49 articles respectively, shall not be less than one cent per bushel; but that it shall be lawful for the said company, from time to time, as to them it may seem meet and expedient, and until it shall otherwise be regulated by law, to graduate the same respectively, by raising or lowering the said tolls, so that the same be not less than one, nor more than two cents per bushel.

2. The tolls on coal shall be receivable by the said company so soon as the trade in that article shall be facilitated, agreeably to the provisions of said act, should that happen before the improvements contemplated thereby shall have proceeded as high up the river as Pleasant's island.

And whereas it is represented, that many of the commissioners in and by the ninth section of the act above recited, have failed to perform the duties assigned to them in and by the said section; and whereas it is highly necessary that those duties should be promptly performed;

3. Be it further enacted, That the James River Company shall forthwith again require and notify the commissioners so failing, to proceed to execute the duties assigned to them as aforesaid; and that in case of the death, refusal, or inability to act, or continued failure of the said commissioners, or any of them, or of any commissioner or commissioners appointed in pursuance of this act, to perform the said duties, the said company are hereby empowered to appoint some other fit person or persons for that purpose, in the place of such commissioner or commissioners, so dead, refusing, unable, or failing to act, and who, being notified of his appointment, and not thereupon refusing to act, shall immediately proceed to perform the duties assigned to the commissioner, in and by the section above recited, whom he or they shall respectively be appointed to substitute as aforesaid.

4. Be it further enacted, That, instead of nine commissioners for superintending the works on Kanawha river and the road, as is provided by the eleventh section of the act above recited, there shall be five commissioners annually appointed, by joint ballot of both Houses of the General Assembly, for superintending the works contemplated by the said act, on the Kanawha; and that, in like manner there shall be appointed annually five commissioners for superintending the works on the road contemplated by said act; the acts of a majority of whom respectively, shall, in all cases, be binding; and no contract or contracts, made by the James River Company, for improving the navigation of the Kanawha river, or for making the road aforesaid, shall be binding, or carried into effect, until the same shall be submitted to and approved in writing by a majority of the commissioners appointed to superintend the works on the said river and road respectively.

5. Be it further enacted, That hereafter the James River Company shall semi-annually, to-wit; on the tenth day of July and tenth day of January in each year, lay an account of their receipts and disbursements before the treasurer of the state, the auditor of public accounts, and the clerk of the board of public works, instead of laying the same before the commissioners for the James and Jackson's rivers, as directed by the above recited act, to be by them, or a majority of them, examined, stated and settled, after comparing the same with the books and vouchers of the company, to be reported by them to the General Assembly, and to the board of public works.

6. And whereas it has been found inexpedient for the treasurer of the state to be treasurer of the said company: Be it further enacted, That the president and directors of the James River Company, shall, from time to time, appoint some fit person to act as their clerk and treasurer, who shall hold his said officers at the will and pleasure of the said president and directors, and receive such compensation for his services, so long as he continues in their employment, as they shall from time to time ordain and appoint. He shall take an oath before some justice of the peace, that he will truly and faithfully execute the said offices; and shall moreover enter into bond, with one or more good sureties, payable to the company, and conditioned for the faithful discharge of the duties of said offices, and the payment of all monies according to law, which may come to his hands as treasurer, so long as he continues in said offices; which bond shall be in the penalty of thirty thousand dollars. It shall be the duty of the said treasurer to make weekly settlements and payments into such bank or banks in the city of Richmond, as the president and directors shall direct, to the credit of the James River Company, of all tolls receivable at the city of Richmond, and shall in like manner pay into bank all other profits and revenue of the said company, so soon as the same shall be received by him, there to remain, subject only to such order or check as the president and directors, by a resolution or resolutions entered on their journals, shall, from time to time, make and direct.

7. And be it further enacted, That all monies borrowed by the company, by virtue of the above recited act, of this or any other act of Assembly, shall be paid by the lender or lenders thereof into such bank or banks within the United States, to the credit of the James River Company, as the president and directors may agree upon with the lender or lenders thereof; and, when such payment is made into a bank or banks, not within the city of Richmond, it shall be the duty of the president and directors, from time to time, to adopt such measures as to them shall seem most proper, by a resolution or resolutions for that purpose entered on their journals, to have the same drawn and deposited to the credit of the company, in such bank or banks in the city of Richmond, as they may direct, there to remain for the use of the company, and only to be drawn for that purpose by a resolution or resolutions of the president and directors, entered on their journals, authorising one or more of their body to check therefor, and which check or checks shall be accompanied by a copy of such resolution or resolutions, certified by their clerk to the cashier of the bank on which such checks shall be drawn.

8. And the more effectually to enable the James River Company to borrow money as directed by the thirteenth section of the act above recited, or as may be directed by this or any future act of Assembly; Be it further enacted, That, hereafter, the company shall borrow no money agreeably to the section above recited, except so far as they shall be expressly authorised by act of Assembly fixing the amount so to be borrowed; and that each lender shall have a prior lien on the funds provided, or which may be provided, for the payment of interest on loans, in conformity with the date and number of his certificate of stock: and that the evidence of such 51

lien may be fixed and preserved, it shall be the duty of the James River Company to number, and register the number, as well as the date, of each certificate of stock; and that no two certificates shall bear the same number; and the date and number shall be preserved on any duplicate of any certificate, which, by reason of a sale and transfer, or otherwise, it may be proper for them to give: and it shall moreover be their duty so to provide that the funds aforesaid shall be applied to the payment of the interest, as the same shall become payable on each certificate of stock, agreeably to its date and number; and that the certificate issued to the president and directors of the literary fund, be number one. And, for the further security and satisfaction of lenders, and as evidence to them of the ability of the company to pay the interest on loans which may be authorised by law, the faith of the state is hereby pledged, that no loan will be authorised by law unless it shall appear to the satisfaction of the legislature, from the annual reports of the accounts and proceedings of the company, that their revenue, applicable to the payment of interest, together with the appropriation made for that purpose out of the fund for internal improvement, is sufficient, not only to pay the interest on loans theretofore authorised, but on each loan as the same shall be authorised; and, in case of any deficiency of funds for that purpose, it shall be the duty of the company to pay such deficiency out of any money in hand, or to borrow money for that purpose.

9. Be it further enacted, That, instead of limiting the sum to be drawn from the fund for internal improvement to twelve thousand dollars per annum, as is provided by the thirteenth section of the act aforesaid, that fund shall stand pledged, as is provided in and by the said section, for the payment of any interest which the surplus fund of the company, applicable to the payment of interest, shall be insufficient to pay; provided, the same shall not exceed the sum of eighteen thousand dollars per annum. And, to avoid expense and embarrassment to lenders by the protest made necessary in and by the said section before they can receive the interest due and payable out of the fund aforesaid, the president and directors of the company are hereby authorised to draw an order or orders on the auditor, for a warrant or warrants on the treasury, for any interest payable out of that fund, after the proper funds of the company for that purpose shall be exhausted.

10. And be it further enacted, That, if that part of the fund for internal improvement appropriated to the payment of interest, or any part of it, has not been, or shall not be drawn for the payment of interest in any one year, that the same shall be set apart, from time to time, in like manner with the other surpluses of the company, to be applied to the purchasing the certificates of loan of the company as is directed in and by the said act.

11. And be it further enacted, That the said company be authorised, as they are hereby authorised, to proceed to borrow, agreeably to the provisions of this and the above recited act, at such times and in such proportions as they may deem expedient, a sum, not exceeding in the whole three hundred thousand dollars, exclusive of the fifty thousand dollars already borrowed from the literary fund; and that the bank of Virginia and Farmers' bank of Virginia, be authorised 52 to loan money to the company, or to deal in the certificates of loan of the company, as far as the president and directors of those banks, respectively, may think proper.

12. And, whereas the urgent necessities of the country require as prompt an execution of the improvements contemplated by the act above recited, as is practicable, whilst at the same time their economical prosecution will be greatly advanced by contracts amounting in the aggregate to a large sum; which contracts, however, cannot be made, with a proper regard to punctuality and good faith on the part of the company, unless they have the certain command of money to the amount of such contracts: Be it further enacted, That it shall be lawful for the president and directors to employ such agents for negotiating loans, and to give them such compensation therefor, as they may from time to time deem most economical and expedient; and should large sums be borrowed, which would necessarily lie idle until wanted for the payment of contracts, whereby great loss of interest would accrue, the president and directors are furthermore empowered to invest said funds, until wanted, in such secure and productive stock as they may think proper and expedient, and again to sell the same when their necessities may require, and carry the whole proceeds of the interest on, and the amount of sales of, such stock, to the account of monies loaned, to be placed in bank as aforesaid, and applied to the improvements aforesaid.

13. And be it further enacted, That the commissioners for superintending the works on the James and Jackson's rivers, on the Kanawha river and the road, shall receive three dollars per day, for every day they shall severally be employed in the discharge of the duties assigned them by said act; to be paid by the James River Company, on a certificate from a board of said commissioners, respectively.

14. This act shall commence and be in force from the passage thereof.

CHAPTER 45.— An act making more effectual provision to carry into effect, the act, entitled "an act, to amend the act, entitled 'an act, for clearing and improving the navigation of James river, and for uniting the eastern and western waters, by the James and Kanawha rivers, and for other purposes."

Whereas, by an act passed on the 17th day of February one thousand eight hundred and twenty, entitled "an act to amend the act, entitled 'an act, for clearing and improving the navigation of James river, and for uniting the eastern and western waters by the James and Kanawha rivers,'" the James river company were directed to effect a canal navigation from the tide water of James river, to the mouth of Dunlap's creek; to make a road from thence to the great falls of the great Kanawha river, and to render the latter river navigable from the great falls to the river Ohio; and the present General Assembly, being fully sensible of the great interest which the good people of this commonwealth have in the success of the said objects, deem it necessary to adopt a more effectual mode to give them effect, than that heretofore provided,

1. Be it therefore enacted, That from and after the commencement of this act all the powers and duties of the existing president and directors of the James river company, except as hereinafter provided, shall be superseded and annulled, and thereafter no other election of president and directors shall be made in the manner now provided by law; but the governor, lieutenant governor, treasurer and auditor of commonwealth for the time being, and the second auditor, whose office is created by this act, and their successors in office, shall be ex-officio the president and directors of the said company; of whom the governor shall be president; and the said governor, lieutenant governor, treasurer, auditor and second auditor, from the time aforesaid, as president and directors of the said company, shall succeed to and possess all the rights, powers, duties and privileges of the existing president and directors, except so far as may be otherwise provided by this act. A board for the transaction of the business of the said company shall be constituted by any three, or more of the said officers. In the absence of the governor from the board, the lieutenant governor shall be president pro tempore; and in the absence of both, the treasurer shall preside.

2. And be it further enacted, That there be appointed annually, by joint ballot of both houses of the General Assembly, an officer to be denominated the second auditor, whose duty it shall be to keep distinct accounts of the receipts and disbursements of the Literary Fund, of the fund for internal improvement, and of the fund constituted to effect the purposes of the act, the title of which is recited in the preamble to this act. He shall draw all warrants authorising the treasurer to receive monies on account of any of the fund before mentioned, after the amount shall have been adjusted by the other auditor, when by law, he is authorised to adjust the same, and audit all claims properly chargeable on them, and issue warrants to the persons entitled thereto. He shall act, ex-officio, as accountant of the Literary Fund, as clerk of the president and directors thereof, and as secretary of the Board of Public Works; and the powers and duties of the persons holding those offices, respectively, shall thenceforth cease. And the said second auditor is hereby authorised to 51 appoint a clerk should the board of directors hereby established deem one necessary, to aid him in the discharge of his duties. All books and papers in any manner connected with the constitution, administration or regulation of the funds herein before mentioned, shall be deposited with the said second auditor, who shall carefully preserve them.

3. All monies belonging to any of the funds herein before mentioned, shall be kept in the public treasury, separate from other public monies; and regular and distinct accounts shall be kept of the receipts and disbursements, and a report thereof annually made by the treasurer to the General Assembly, on or before the fifth day of its session.

4. It shall be the duty of the James river company, forthwith, to pay into the public treasury any money which may remain in their hands, whether the same has been received from loans, tolls, rents, or otherwise; and they shall file with the second auditor, an account of their receipts and disbursements since the commencement of the act herein-before mentioned, which he shall carefully preserve: And all monies hereafter accruing to the said company, whether for tolls, rents, loans, or otherwise, shall be accounted for, by the several collectors and other agents, with the second auditor, and paid upon his warrant into the treasury: Provided, however, That if existing engagements with any toll gatherer, collector, or other agent, shall require the money falling into his hands to be otherwise accounted for and paid, it shall accordingly be accounted for and paid pursuant to such engagement; and the person receiving it shall, without delay, account for it with the second auditor, and pay it into the treasury, as above prescribed.

in the preamble to this act, that is to say, to render the Great Kanawha navigable from the falls to the Ohio; to improve the navigation of James river from tide water to Pleasant's island; and to make the road from the mouth of Dunlap's creek to the Great Falls of Kanawha, together with the bridges provided for by this act; then, and in that case only, they are hereby authorised and required to borrow an additional sum not exceeding eighty thousand dollars. And to enable them the more readily to procure the said loans, they are hereby authorised and required, to cause all the monies, which shall be so loaned to them, to be paid into the public treasury, by the lender, on the warrant of the second auditor; and, upon the payment of each sum so loaned, the treasurer shall issue a certificate of stock for the amount thereof, purporting that the commonwealth owes to such lender, his executors, administrators or assigns, the sum loaned, together with interest thereon, at the rate agreed upon, not exceeding six per centum as aforesaid, and payable semi-annually, at the treasury of the commonwealth, computing the time from the date of the certificate. Such certificate shall also shew, on its face, that the loan 52 was made by authority of this act; that the principal sum loaned is irredeemable for twenty years; and afterwards to be redeemed at the pleasure of the General Assembly. It shall be signed by the treasurer, countersigned by the second auditor, and registered in a book to be kept by him for that purpose, and shall then be delivered to the lender, or his agent. Every such certificate of stock shall be transferrable on the books of the second auditor; and the semi-annual interest thereon shall be paid upon his warrant. The certificates of stock for monies heretofore borrowed by the James river company, may be produced by the owners to the second auditor, and shall thereupon be registered by him in a book to be kept for that purpose; and at all times afterwards, they shall be transferable on the books of the said auditor. The interest falling due on such certificates, after they shall have been so registered, shall be paid at the treasury, on the warrant of the second auditor, without the re-production of the certificate; and the interest, falling due on them before such registry, shall be paid at the treasury, on the warrant of the second auditor, to be granted on the production of the certificate. The tolls collected on James river since the fifteenth day of March, eighteen hundred and twenty, and those which may hereafter be collected, the nett proceeds of the tolls to be collected on the Great Kanawha river, and from the road and bridges, all water rents, and rents of land, to which the James river company is or shall be entitled, together with the annual sum of eighteen thousand dollars to be paid out of the revenue of the fund for internal improvement, are hereby pledged as a fund for the payment of the dividends to the stockholders of the James river company, and the payment of the interest on the loans heretofore made to said company pursuant to law, and hereafter to be made pursuant to this act; and no part of the said fund shall be diverted to any other purpose: And the General Assembly, moreover, pledge themselves, that they will from time to time, provide such other revenues as shall be necessary, to pay the interest on any loan authorised by law, to carry into effect the improvements mentioned in this act.

6. Nothing in this act shall be in any wise construed, so as to take away, or in any manner impair, the security or preference pledged to those who have heretofore loaned money, by authority of law, to the James river company.

7. Be it further enacted, That deeds for the transfer of any share or shares of the stock of the James river company, held by any person, body politic or corporate, executed in the manner prescribed by law for the conveyance of real estate, attested and proved by two witnesses, or certified by justices of the peace, in the manner prescribed for the authentication of deeds for real estate, and registered in the office of the second auditor, in a book to be kept by him for that purpose; also, devises of such share or shares, duly executed, proved and recorded, in some court within this commonwealth, certified and registered in the second auditor's office, in the manner aforesaid, shall be sufficient to entitle the transferree or devisee, to the dividends on such shares.

8. The dividends due, or to fall due, to the owners of the shares of the stock of said company, shall be paid at the treas- 53 ury, on the warrant of the second auditor.

9. Be it enacted, That an officer be appointed annually by joint ballot of both houses of the General Assembly, to be denominated the commissioner of the James and Jackson's river canal, whose duty it shall be to execute the provisions of the said act, so far as respects the construction of locks, navigable canals, and other necessary works, from tide-water to the mouth of Dunlap's creek, in the manner directed by the said act, and according to its true intent and meaning: and all the powers and rights heretofore vested by law in the James river company for the purposes aforesaid, and within the limits aforesaid, are hereby vested in such commissioner; and it shall, moreover, be the duty of the said commissioner to keep the bed of the river in a good and convenient state for navigation, between Crow's ferry and the point to which any new improvement shall be completed for use, and connected with the river.

in any contract, which may be made with him or any person on his behalf, for any labor, material or other thing necessary for the prosecution of the said works; and every contract, made in violation of such oath, shall be utterly void. If said commissioner shall either directly or indirectly be concerned or interested in any contract, in violation of this act, it shall be deemed and taken to be a breach of the condition of the bond herein required to be executed by him, and judgment shall be entered against such commissioner and his securities, for a sum, not less than the amount of said contract, nor more than twice the amount of said contract, at the discretion of the jury.

11. Be it further enacted, That there be appointed, in manner before-mentioned, another officer, to be denominated the commissioner of the Kanawha road and navigation; whose duty it shall be to carry into effect such of the provisions of the act herein-before-mentioned, as direct the constructing and completing a road from the mouth of Dunlap's creek, to the great falls of the great Kanawha river, and that the latter river shall be rendered navigable from thence to the river Ohio, according to the true intent and meaning of said act; and all the powers and rights heretofore vested by law in the James river company, for the purposes aforesaid, and within the limits aforesaid, are hereby vested in the said commissioner.

12. Before the last mentioned commissioner shall be authorised to execute the duties of his office, he shall enter into like bond, and take like oath or affirmation, with that directed above, in relation to the commissioner of the James and Jackson's river canal; and the said commissioner of the Kanawha road and navigation, with his securities, and the contracts made by him, shall be subject to the like rules and regulations, liabilities and recoveries, as are prescribed above in relation to the commissioner of the James and Jackson's river canal, his securities and contracts. The bonds executed by the commissioners aforesaid, and the certificate of their oath of office, which may be administered by any justice of the peace, shall be filed with the second auditor, before they shall, respectively, be authorised to enter upon the duties of their office.

13. Be it further enacted, That the said commissioners shall 54 give their constant attendance in directing and superintending the respective improvements necessary for the promotion and final accomplishment of the objects contemplated by the act herein-before-mentioned, and respectively confided to them. Each commissioner shall appoint such engineers, managers or agents, as he may think necessary, who shall be under his control, and removable at his pleasure: Provided, That the engineer appointed by the Board of Public Works, shall, whenever, upon the application of said commissioners, he shall be directed by the ex-officio members of said board, attend the commissioners of the James and Jackson's river canal, and of the Kanawha road and navigation, when previous engagements of the engineer on subjects of greater importance, do not interfere. The said commissioners shall, each respectively, on behalf and in the name of the James river company, make such contracts for labor, materials, and other thing necessary in the prosecution of the work in their several precincts, as each of them may deem expedient. And a copy of every contract shall be immediately transmitted by the commissioner making the same, to the second auditor, to be carefully filed and preserved; and all reports of engineers, or estimates of work, shall in like manner be transmitted by the commissioners, and filed and preserved.

14. All monies which may become due to any person or persons, by virtue of any contract, made with either of the said commissioners, by virtue of this act, shall be paid by the treasurer out of the fund provided for the improvement of James river, on a warrant from the second auditor, which shall be issued on the order of the commissioner who authorised the contract; in which order, the consideration on which it is founded, shall be expressly stated: Provided, however, That no warrant shall be drawn by the second auditor, on any such order of the commissioner, unless the contract on which it is founded shall be filed with the said auditor, and shall appear to justify it. And, in order to prevent, as far as possible, any failure in the payment of any such sum of money, the said commissioners, respectively, shall, from time to time, ascertain the state of the disposable funds in the hands of the treasurer, and regulate themselves accordingly in making contracts.

15. Every contract made by the James river company, with any person or persons, relating to, or connected with, the purposes of the act herein-before-mentioned, shall be as valid as if the powers of the said company had continued. And the said commissioners, respectively, shall carry the same into effect as the said company could, or ought to have done; and all claims for money which have heretofore accrued, for services, labour, materials, or other thing, shall be settled and audited by the second auditor, and he shall grant warrants for such sums as may appear to be justly due. As to all monies falling due on or before the first day of May next, upon contracts now existing, made by the James river company, or under their authority, they shall be adjusted and settled under the authority of the president and directors of said company, now in office; and warrants shall be granted by the second auditor for the amount due, upon the certificate of said president and directors: Provided, Such settlement be made or or before the first day of May. But, if such settlement be not made on or before that time, then the claims shall be settled and adjusted, by the respective commissioners aforesaid, and the warrants granted upon their certificates. All superintendents, agents, and other officers appointed by the James river company, shall continue in office, pursuant to their appointments, till they shall be superseded, by appointments under this act, or their offices annulled by the provisions thereof.

16. The said commissioners shall, each, respectively, before the fifteenth day of every session, make full and detailed reports of their transactions, to the General Assembly, stating at length the expenses incurred by their contracts, or otherwise, and the progress of the work, and any other material matter that they may deem proper.

And whereas, it is represented, that it may be necessary to erect bridges over the Greenbrier river, and also over New river or Gauley river:

17. Be it therefore enacted, That the commissioners of the Kanawha road and navigation, shall have power to erect such bridges, if the same shall be found to be practicable at a reasonable expense; and, when completed, that he cause to be collected such tolls as may be reasonable, to be revised or altered by the legislature, as they may think necessary. And it shall be the duty of the said commissioner to transmit a list of the tolls to the General Assembly, at its next succeeding session; and likewise cause a list of said tolls to be recorded in the county where the bridge or bridges may be situate.

18. And be it further enacted, That the said last mentioned commissioner shall be, and he is hereby invested with full power and authority to collect the tolls directed to be collected by the act aforesaid, on the river Kanawha, and the road between the mouth of Dunlap's creek and the great falls of the Great Kanawha river; and, to this end, all the rights and powers vested by the law in the James river company, are hereby vested in the said commissioner; and payment for tolls to be imposed for passing the bridges, may be enforced in the same manner, and under the same regulations, as tolls on turnpike roads are collected and enforced.

19. Before the said commissioner shall have power to proceed to the collection of any of the said tolls, he shall execute a separate bond, with good and sufficient security, in the penalty of forty thousand dollars, payable to the James river company; conditioned, that he will make due returns of all tolls; well and truly account for all monies which may come into his hands by virtue of this act, and regularly pay the same into the treasury, at the end of ev- 56
ery six months, commencing from the date of the bond; and if he shall fail to make such returns regularly at the end of every six months, or within twenty days thereafter, it shall and may be lawful for the general court, on the motion of the second auditor, on behalf of the James river company, to enter up judgment against the said commissioner, and his securities, for a sum not exceeding five hundred dollars, and costs; and such motion and judgment may be repeated until a compliance with the provisions of this act shall be enforced: Provided, nevertheless, That the general court, at their succeeding term, shall have power to open such judgment, if it shall appear to them that the failure complained of was owing to circumstances which justified or extenuated it, and that the commissioner had not a fair opportunity to make them known, at the term when the judgment was rendered against him; and the court may thereupon give such judgment as to the penalty, as the very right of the case may require.

21. Be it further enacted, That so much of the act herein-before mentioned, or any other act, as provides for the appointment of ten commissioners, denominated, "the commissioners for the Kanawha river and road," and for the appointment of nine other commissioners, denominated, "the commissioners for the James and Jackson's rivers," be, and the same is hereby repealed; and all the power and authority of the said commissioners shall henceforth cease and determine.

22. Be it further enacted, That, whenever it shall become necessary to subject the lands of individuals to the purposes provided for in the said act, and the consent of the proprietor cannot be obtained, it shall and may be lawful for the said commissioners, within their respective precincts, to enter upon such lands, and proceed to the execution of such works as may be requisite; and that the pendency of any proceedings, in any suit of the nature of a writ of ad quod damnum, or any other proceedings, shall not hinder or delay the progress of the work; and no order shall be made, or injunction awarded, by any court, by which the progress of the work shall be arrested; it being the true intent and meaning of this act, that all lands shall be liable to condemnation, and that the proprietor shall be compensated, in damages. And it shall be the duty of every court to give precedence to controversies which are now pending, or which hereafter may arise, relative to the condemnation of land for any public purpose whatever, and to determine them in preference to all other causes; and no abatement or dismission of any 57 cause now depending, shall take place, by reason of any thing contained in this act.

23. Be it further enacted, That it shall and may be lawful for the commissioner of the James and Jackson's river canal, to subject to condemnation any land which may be necessary for the purpose of erecting dams for feeders, or any land through which feeders may be conducted, and for the purpose of establishing reservoirs, in the same manner as lands are authorised to be subjected by law for the canal.

24. And be it further enacted, That, in any future assessment of damages, on behalf of any proprietor of land through which the canal or feeder may be conducted, no compensation for any fencing to separate the land condemned for the use of the James river company from his other lands, shall be allowed; nor shall any compensation be made to any such proprietor for any bridge or bridges over such canal or feeder, but such bridges, and such additional fencing, as shall have become necessary, by reason of such canal or feeder, shall be constructed by the commissioner of the James and Jackson's river canal, wherever he may deem them necessary; the expense of which shall be paid out of the fund provided to make the improvement on James river. If any proprietor of the lands through which the canal or any feeder may be conducted, shall believe a greater number of bridges, or bridges of a different kind, or other fencing, required for the use of his lands, than the said commissioner may deem necessary, or that they should be constructed at a different place or places from those fixed upon by the said commissioner, such proprietor, upon application to the clerk of the superior court of law for the county in which said lands lie, may obtain from said clerk a writ in nature of a writ of ad quod damnum, directed to the sheriff of said county, requiring him to summon a jury of twenty-four inhabitants of his county, being freeholders, not related to said proprietor, or commissioner, nor in any way interested, to meet on the lands through which the canal or feeder may be conducted, on a day to be expressed in the writ, not less than twenty, nor more than thirty days thereafter; and the sheriff, on receiving said writ, shall forthwith summon the jury; and, when met, shall administer to every juryman who shall appear, not being fewer than twelve in number, an oath or affirmation, that he will faithfully, justly, and impartially, determine the matters submitted to him, according to the true meaning and intent of this act, to the best of his skill and judgment; and, thereupon, the said jury shall proceed to determine how many bridges, of what description, and what fencing, may be reasonably necessary to the aforesaid proprietor, for the use of said lands, and at what places on said canal, or feeder, they should be constructed, and report, in writing, their finding on these subjects; which report shall be signed by the sheriff, and some twelve or more of the jury, and returned by the sheriff, within ten days after the execution of said writ, to the clerk of said superior court: Provided, however, That ten days previous notice be given to said commissioner of the time and place of executing said writ; and, at the next term after the return of said report, the said court, from the finding of the jury, as well as from other evidence, shall decide whether the number of bridges, their description, and the fencing, fixed by the jury, or any greater or less number, or any other kind, or any other fencing, 58 be necessary to the proprietor, for the use of his lands; and whether the place or places fixed upon by the jury for the construction of such bridge, or bridges, or fencing, be proper: and may make such other order, touching the subject, as shall seem just and right; and the said commissioner shall cause a bridge, or bridges, and fencing, to be constructed, according to the judgment of the court; the expense of which shall be paid out of the funds provided for the improvement on James river. All bridges and fencing, to be constructed according to the provisions of this act, shall, at all times, be kept in good repair by the commissioner of the James and Jackson's river canal; and the expense thereof paid out of the tolls collected on James river.

2. Be it further enacted, That so much of the said sum as shall be necessary, shall be and is hereby appropriated to re-building the bridge across Gauley river, to be expended for that purpose under the direction and superintendence of the commissioner of the Kanawha road and navigation, who shall cause the said bridge to be built upon such model, as in his opinion will combine economy with public utility.

3. Be it further enacted, That the sum of twenty-eight thousand dollars of the aforesaid sum, shall be and is hereby appropriated for the purpose of enabling the James River Company, and the commissioner of the Kanawha road and navigation, to complete the works already contracted for and remaining unfinished, and to pay what may be now due on existing contracts.

CHAPTER 71.—An act providing for the extension of the Kanawha turnpike road to Big Sandy river.

(Passed January 30th, 1829.) 45

1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly, That the President and Directors of the James River Company be, and they are hereby authorised and required to cause the present Kanawha turnpike road to be extended from the western termination thereof, to the mouth of Big Sandy river, and for defraying the expense that may be incurred under this act, the said President and Directors 46 are hereby authorised and empowered to borrow on the credit of the Commonwealth, at such time or times as they may deem proper, any sum or sums of money not exceeding fifty thousand dollars, provided the same can be obtained at a rate of interest not exceeding six per centum per annum, payable half yearly, and to issue to the loaners of the said money, certificates in the same form, transferable in the same manner, and redeemable at the same periods, with those which have been heretofore authorised and employed in the negotiations of the last loans obtained by the State for the purposes of internal improvement: and that the tolls hereafter raised upon the Kanawha turnpike road heretofore finished, as well as the tolls which may arise from the road hereby authorised to be made, after keeping the said road in repair, shall be, and the same are hereby pledged for the payment of the interest which may accrue on the money to be borrowed under the authority of this act, and for the final redemption of the stock which may be created under the provisions herein contained; and if the tolls shall be found inadequate to the payment of the said semi-annual interest, then, such deficiency shall be paid out of any monies belonging to the fund of internal improvement.

2. Be it further enacted, That the Principal Engineer as soon as may be after the passage of this act, shall proceed to lay out and locate the said road from the western termination of the said Kanawha turnpike road, to the mouth of Big Sandy river, of the same width of location, and of construction with the best parts of the road heretofore made: In the performance of which duty, he is hereby required to graduate the same as near a horizontal line as the inequalities of the ground may admit of, but so that the said road when formed shall in no instance diverge more than five degrees from a horizontal line: That in making such location he shall so mark his stations, and levels, and indicate the sites of the bridges and culverts which he may deem necessary, that the superintendents of the work with the aid of his field notes, may be readily enabled to execute the same, according to the designs and plans of the said Principal Engineer.

3. Be it further enacted, That the Principal Engineer shall, in locating the said road, and in his report thereof, carefully estimate and describe the quantity and kind of labour to be done on each mile thereof, and the reasonable cost of the same. He shall also describe the number, kind and situation of the bridges, culverts and drains which he may deem necessary, accompanying his descriptions with profiles or drawings when he may deem the same useful; so that such report may form the basis of contracts for the execution of the entire work. And it shall be the further duty of the said Engineer, to deliver to the clerks of the county courts of Kanawha and Cabell counties, plats or maps of so much of the said road as may be within their respective counties, to be by them respectively recorded, and thereupon the land over which the said road shall be located shall become, ipso facto, vested in the Commonwealth for the use of the said road.

4. Be it further enacted, That if any person shall conceive himself, herself, or themselves, aggrieved by the location of the said road, and the investment of the land in the Commonwealth, over which the same shall pass, or by the erection of any bridges, abutments or other necessary work or building, in the formation and construction of the said road, it shall be lawful for such person or persons, within one year from the recording of the maps or plats as herein provided for, to file a suggestion before the superior or county court of the county where such land may be situated, setting out the grounds of the injury complained of, and for which damages are claimed, of which suggestion the person complaining shall give to the President of the James River Company at least thirty days notice, by serving him with a copy thereof; whereupon, the court before whom the suggestion may be filed, shall cause an issue to be made up and tried at the bar of the said court, as other issues of fact are tried, for ascertaining what damages the complainant hath sustained by reason of the matters alleged in his suggestion, over and above the advantages and benefits accruing to the complainant, by the opening and constructing the said road. And upon the certificate of the court trying such issue, the President and Directors of the James River Company shall pay the amount of the damages which may be so found, to the party appearing by said verdict to be entitled to the same, out of any unexpended funds in their hands: but all persons failing to file suggestions as herein provided, for the space of one year from the time at which such maps or plats shall be delivered for recording, shall be held and deemed to have relinquished to the Commonwealth all claim to damages arising or supposed to arise from the execution of this act.

5. Be it further enacted, That the President and Directors of the James River Company, by themselves, their agents and servants, and the Principal Engineer, with the surveyors and assistants, shall have full power and authority to enter upon all lands and tenements, through which they may think it necessary to make examinations, and to lay out the said road as the Principal Engineer may judge most for the public advantage and benefit. And in the opening and constructing the said road, the President and Directors of the James River Company, their agents and servants, shall have the same power and authority, and be subject to the same limitations and restrictions as are provided in the twelfth and thirteenth sections of the "act prescribing certain general regulations for the incorporation of turnpike companies," passed February the seventeenth, in the year eighteen hundred and seventeen.

6. Be it further enacted, That the President and Directors of the James River Company be, and they are hereby authorised to select and appoint an able, capable, discreet superintendent of the road hereby directed to be made, and to allow him such salary as they may judge reasonable, not exceeding seven hundred and fifty dollars per annum. It shall be the duty of the said superintendent to make all contracts for the opening and constructing the said road, erecting bridges, and whatever else may be necessary for the fully finishing and completing the same, under the direction of the said President and Directors, and subject to their approbation and ratification. It shall also be his duty strictly and constantly to superintend the execution of all the works upon the said road, and perform such other duties as the President and Directors of the James River Company may from time to time appoint and direct; and the said President and Directors shall have full power and authority to re- 48 move from office, for any cause by them deemed sufficient, any superintendent by them appointed, and to appoint another in his place.

7. Be it further enacted, That as soon as a section of fifteen miles of the said road shall be completed, and as often as sections of that length shall be finished, it shall be lawful for the President and Directors of the James River Company to cause a gate or gates to be erected across the said road; to appoint receivers of tolls at said gates, and to exact and receive for the use of the said road, the same rates of toll as are now paid for the use of an equal distance of the Kanawha turnpike. And all the laws and regulations heretofore enacted in relation to the Kanawha turnpike, shall be held and taken as equally applying to the extension hereby directed to be made, so far as the same remains unchanged by the provisions of this act.

8. Be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of the owners and proprietors of the ferries over water-courses on the line which may be selected for the road, to graduate the banks to the angle hereby prescribed, and by permanent and sufficient wharfing to secure the same from abrasions, of such width, and in such manner and time, as the Principal Engineer shall prescribe, and at all times shall keep the same so covered with stone or gravel when necessary, as to render the approach to the ferry boat firm and dry; and every keeper or owner of a ferry over which the said road may pass, who shall fail to comply with any of the requisitions of this act, shall be subject to a fine of not less than twenty dollars, nor more than one hundred dollars, to be recovered by indictment or information in any court having jurisdiction thereof, for the use of the President and Directors of the James River Company; but nothing in this section contained, shall be so construed as to prevent the President and Directors of the James River Company from erecting bridges at any time hereafter over such water courses, reserving to the owners or proprietors of such ferries, all the rights and remedies given to the owners and proprietors of the land over which the road may be made.

9. This act shall commence and be in force from and after the passing thereof.

CHAPTER 72.—An act concerning the Kanawha Road and Bridges, and for other purposes.

4. Be it further enacted, That for the purpose of discharging the unsatisfied demands against the company, for the construction of the public improvements under their direction, it shall be lawful for the President and Directors of the James River Com- 49 pany, and they are hereby authorised and required, to borrow a sum not exceeding ten thousand dollars, on the same terms and conditions, and on the same pledges, as are specified for the loan authorised by the act passed on the first day of March, one thousand eight hundred and twenty-six, entitled, "an act authorising a loan for the purposes of internal improvements," which sum, or any part thereof which may be borrowed, is hereby appropriated to the discharge of the demands aforesaid.

* * * * *

9. Be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of the President and Directors of the James River Company to cause buoys to be placed in the Great Kanawha river, so as readily and clearly to indicate and point out to navigators all the entrances and lines of the sluices, the wing-dams and the jetties, and generally the course of the channels. The said President and Directors shall also cause beacons to be placed on the bars, rocks and other obstructions to the navigation, not within the sluices or channels, but which, from their positions, or from other causes, are likely to endanger the safety of vessels or boats navigating the said river; which buoys and beacons shall be so constructed as to be visible, until the water of the river shall rise five feet above its ordinary lowest level. For the greater safety and convenience of the ascending trade of the said river, it shall be the further duty of the said President and Directors to cause large rings to be attached by suitable bolts to rocks or other stable bodies, along the sluices and at the ends of the wing-dams and jetties, for the better enabling the ascending boats to overcome the force of the currents, by warps and cords.

10. Be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of the said President and Directors, to cause all depositions of sand, gravel, timber or other obstructions in the channels, sluices or passages of the said river, to be removed therefrom, so as to restore to the said channels, sluices and passages, the width and depth of water produced therein by the works recently constructed on the said river, and at all times to keep the said channels, sluices and passages, free from depositions or other obstructions which may impair or impede the navigation: Provided, That nothing in this act contained shall authorise the expenditure of a sum exceeding one thousand dollars.

11. Be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of the Principal Engineer of this Commonwealth, and he is hereby required to attend during some dry season, to view the several improvements made on the said river and make report on their defects and the remedies necessary therefor, to the Board of Public Works at its next session.

12. This act shall be in force from and after the passing thereof.

prietors of the land over which the road shall pass near the river, shall release all damages or claims to remuneration for the land over which the said road may be conducted.

2. Be it further enacted, That on such re-location being made, the said President and Directors shall cause to be recorded in the office of the clerk of the county court of Kanawha, a map or drawing of the re-located section of road, which shall have the same legal effects, and operate upon the land over which the road shall pass, in the same manner, and to the same extent, as if such location had been there made in the first instance, and the surveys and drawings thereof had been reported and recorded by the Principal Engineer.

3. This act shall commence and be in force from and after the passing thereof.

CHAP. LXXXII.—An act incorporating the stockholders of the James river and Kanawha company.

(Passed March 16th, 1832.) 73

Whereas the measures hitherto adopted by the general assembly for the purpose of connecting the tide water of James river with the navigable waters of the Ohio, have been found inadequate to effect that object, by such line of transportation as the public interest requires; and it is now deemed expedient for that purpose to incorporate a joint stock company, to which the interest of the commonwealth in the James river company shall be transferred at a fair value: Therefore, days previous notice in some newspaper published most convenient to each place of subscription, and in such other newspapers as may be deemed proper, shall be given of the time and places of opening the books. The books shall be kept open for twenty days; and if within that time three-fifths of the capital stock shall not have been subscribed by persons, bodies politic or corporate, other than the commonwealth, they shall be again opened and may be continued open, if necessary, until the second Monday in December next. All subscriptions must be for one or more whole shares; none being allowed for any part of a share.

2. When the books are opened the state shall be regarded as a subscriber for ten thousand shares of the stock; to be paid for by a transfer of her whole interest in the works and property of the present James river company, and when they are finally closed they shall be returned to the second auditor, verified by the signatures of the commissioners, or some of them, and be laid before the president and directors of the James river company, in order that the amount of valid subscriptions may be ascertained and proper measures taken thereupon.

3. The second auditor shall forthwith give public notice, in such newspapers as he may think proper, or as the president and directors of the James river company shall direct, of the return of the books and of the amount of subscriptions appearing upon them; and after the expiration of twenty days from the publication of such notice, the president and directors shall proceed to ascertain the amount of valid subscriptions, regarding no person, body politic or corporate, other than the commonwealth, as a subscriber for any share, unless he shall have paid thereupon, into the bank of Virginia, or Farmers' bank of Virginia at Richmond, at least five dollars, to the credit of the James river company, and have furnished a certificate of such payment to the second auditor. If it be ascertained that three-fifths of the capital stock have not been subscribed by persons, bodies politic or corporate, other than the commonwealth, then the president and directors of the James river company shall direct the certificates of payment aforesaid to be returned to the subscribers, with the second auditor's warrant on the back thereof, for the re-payment of the money; and they shall report to the next general assembly the failure of the subscription, suggesting the probable causes thereof, and the means, if any, of obviating them.

ing off the surplus from the highest subscriptions, other than that of the commonwealth; and when it shall happen that two or more of the highest subscriptions are equal, and the desired reduction cannot be made by subtracting equally from each, then it shall be decided by lot, from which subscription or subscriptions the greater number shall be subtracted; and the president and directors of the James river company shall order it accordingly.

5. When three-fifths or more of the capital stock shall have been so subscribed, by persons, bodies politic or corporate, other than the commonwealth, having paid as aforesaid, five dollars upon each share, then the subscribers, their successors, heirs and assigns, shall be a body politic and corporate, by the name of "The James River and Kanawha Company," and by that name shall have perpetual succession and a common seal, may sue and be sued, plead and be impleaded, purchase and hold, sell and convey real and personal property; and shall be, to every intent and purpose in law, the successors of the present James river company: provided, however, that they shall hold no real estate, except that which by this act, or some other act of the general assembly, may be specially vested in them, or they may be expressly authorized to acquire for the purpose of the improvements which they are required to make; and that they shall in no wise deal as bankers or merchants, or in buying and selling any produce or commodities whatsoever, except such as it is obviously convenient and proper for them to purchase and sell in the regular performance of the duties required of them by this act; and that they shall not be engaged in the establishment or conduct of manufactures, further than for the supply of their own consumption and that of the persons in their service, and in letting to farm or lease sites for mills and other machinery and water for their use.

6. The president and directors of the James river company, as soon as they shall have ascertained that three-fifths of the capital stock have been subscribed as aforesaid, so that the subscribers have become a body corporate, shall make publication of the fact in such newspapers as may be best suited to give notice to the stockholders, and shall appoint a day not more distant than thirty days for a general meeting of the stockholders, at some fit place in the city of Richmond, to the end that the company may be organized by the appointment of proper officers and agents. If on the day appointed a sufficient number of stockholders do not attend to constitute a general meeting, those present may adjourn from time to time till a sufficient number shall attend. To this meeting the second auditor shall deliver the original books of subscription, together with the certificates of payment into the banks by the subscribers, endorsing thereon his warrants for their payment to the order of the new company.

7. To constitute a general meeting, there must be present, either in person or by proxy, a number of stockholders, having a right to give a majority of all the votes which could be given at a meeting of all the stockholders.

8. Each stockholder shall be entitled to one vote for each share held by him, as far as ten shares, and to one vote for every five shares above ten.

10. The stockholders, in general meeting, shall have power to make all such by-laws, rules and regulations, not inconsistent with the constitution or laws of the land, as they may deem proper, for the well ordering of the affairs of the company, for the protection and preservation of their property, and for the maintenance of good order and good police among their officers, agents, servants and labourers, and among the boatmen and others who use their canal and other works.

11. At the first general meeting and at each stated annual meeting thereafter, the stockholders shall appoint a president and seven directors of the company, who shall hold their offices for one year and thereafter, until their successors shall be appointed, unless sooner removed by the stockholders in general meeting. Vacancies in the office of president or director shall be supplied by the stockholders in general meeting, or in such other manner as the by-laws may prescribe.

12. There shall be such other officers and agents of the company as they may think proper. Their duties, the tenure of their office and the mode of their appointment shall be prescribed by the by-laws; and bond with security for the performance of their duties may be required from any of them. The salary, pay and emoluments of the president, directors and all other officers and agents, shall be regulated by the by-laws.

13. Minutes of the proceedings of the stockholders at all general meetings, verified by the signature of the chairman or other presiding officer, shall be regularly kept and carefully preserved, in well bound books; and the names of all the stockholders present, whether in person or by proxy, shall be always entered on the minutes.

14. The president and directors of the company, subject to the control of the by-laws, shall be charged with the imme- 76 diate care and superintendence of the affairs of the company; with making and executing their contracts, either by themselves, or by their lawful agents; with constructing and preserving their works; with the custody and preservation of all the property of the company; and with the control and direction of all their agents. A quorum for the transaction of business, shall consist of the president and a majority of the directors; or when the president is absent, of the directors, or any five of them, one of whom shall be appointed president, pro tempore.

16. They shall keep a regular roll of their stockholders, and shall furnish to each one or more certificates of his stock as may be required, verified by the seal of the corporation, and the signature of the president. The stock shall be deemed personal estate, and as such, shall pass to purchasers, executors or administrators. Before the dividends on such stock shall be paid to any purchaser, executor or administrator, regular evidence of title shall be exhibited to the president and directors, and the original certificate of stock, or satisfactory proof of its loss, shall be produced; whereupon, the stock shall be transferred upon the books, and a new certificate or certificates granted. Until such evidence of title shall be produced to the president and directors, or they shall be restrained by legal process, they shall be justified in paying the dividends to the persons in whose name the stock stands upon their books; and the company shall not be chargeable therefor to any other claimant.

17. Within thirty days after the adjournment of the first general meeting of the stockholders, of which public notice shall be given in such newspapers as the president and directors may think proper, the stockholders other than the commonwealth, shall pay into one of the banks aforesaid, or into one of their offices of discount and deposit such as the president and directors may designate, the further sum of five dollars on each share of their stock; and they shall pay the residue of their subscriptions in such sums, at such times and in such manner, as the exigencies of the company may demand, and as the president and directors may from time to time require.

18. If any stockholder shall fail to pay the sum required of him by this act, within thirty days after the adjournment of the first general meeting, public notice having been given thereof in the manner above required, or shall fail to pay any other part of the subscription lawfully required of him by the president and directors, after such requisition shall have been advertised four weeks in some public newspaper printed in the city of Richmond, it shall be lawful for the president and directors, after advertising the time and place of sale for four weeks, in some newspaper so published, to sell at public auction for cash, the share or shares of the delinquent stockholder, and to convey and transfer the same to the purchaser. And the said president and directors, after retaining from the purchase money the costs and charges of the sale, and the amount in arrear, and due to the company, shall pay over the surplus, if any, to the said stockholder, or his legal representative. If the purchase money shall be insufficient to pay the cost and charges of the sale, and the sum in arrear and due to the company, then the delinquent stockholder, as well as the original subscriber for the stock, and the heirs, executors and administrators of each of them shall be liable for the payment of the balance; and such balance may be recovered of the original subscriber and delinquent stockholder, jointly or severally, or from the heirs, executors or administrators of either, upon motion on ten days previous notice, in the inferior or superior court of the county or corporation in which the defendants, or either of them, may be found, or by warrant before a justice of the peace, where the sum to be recovered is within the jurisdiction of a single magistrate, or by any other proper action before any court having cognizance thereof. The purchaser at such sale shall be regarded as an original subscriber, and as such, he, his heirs, executors and administrators, shall be liable for all subsequent delinquencies.

19. When the other stockholders shall have paid such proportion of their subscriptions as will be equal to the proportion of the state's subscription paid by the transfer of their property as aforesaid, then the residue of the state's subscription shall be paid from to time, as nearly as may be, in the proportions in which the other stockholders shall be required to pay the residue of their subscriptions.

20. At the expiration of thirty days from the adjournment of the first general meeting of the stockholders as aforesaid, the whole interest of the commonwealth in the works and property of the present James river company, shall be, and the same is hereby transferred to the James river and Kanawha company, hereby incorporated, to be held by them forever, for the sole use and benefit of the stockholders; and from thenceforward, the company hereby incorporated shall be entitled to all the tolls, rents, and other emoluments, rights, privileges and immunities, which are now enjoyed by the James river company, subject however to the incumbrances, limitations and restrictions in this act declared. The president and directors of the new company, their officers and agents, at the expiration of the said thirty days, shall take possession of the property and works hereby transferred, and enter upon the receipt of the tolls, rents, and other emoluments thereof, for the benefit of the stockholders: but until the expiration of the said thirty days, the said property and works, the tolls, rents, and other emoluments thereof, shall be and remain for the use of the commonwealth, in the same manner as if this act had never passed.

21. The James river and Kanawha company shall take the property hereby transferred to them, subject to the payment of the dividend of fifteen per centum per annum forever, to the stockholders of the old company, and subject moreover to the pledge of the surplus tolls of the company made by former laws, for the security of those public creditors, who on the faith of that pledge have lent money to the James river company, for the use of the commonwealth; but the general assembly hereby pledges the faith of the commonwealth to the new company, that they shall be 78 protected from the payment of any part of the principal or interest of the debt contracted by the loans aforesaid; and to this end the profits of the commonwealth's stock in the new company, and so much of the revenue of the fund for internal improvement, as now stands pledged for that purpose, shall be faithfully applied to the payment of the interest on the said loans; and if this should prove inadequate, other sufficient funds shall be provided.

22. The James river and Kanawha company are charged with the duty of connecting the tide water of James river with the navigable waters of the Ohio by one of three plans of improvement, at their election; that is to say, either by a continuation of the lower James river canal to some suitable point on the river not lower than Lynchburg, a continued rail-road from the western termination of that canal to some convenient point on the Great Kanawha river below the great falls thereof, and an improvement of the Kanawha river from thence to the Ohio, so as to make it suitable for steam boat navigation: or secondly, by a continuation of the James river canal as aforesaid, and a continued rail-road from its western termination to the Ohio river: or thirdly, by a continued rail-road from Richmond to the Ohio river. And whether they elect one or another of these plans of improvement, that which they elect shall be executed in a substantial, durable and workmanlike manner; their improvements shall be kept permanently in good repair, free and fit for public use, according to the provisions of this act; and the works which they shall construct, and the property which they shall acquire by purchase or condemnation, under the authority of this law, shall be vested in them and their successors forever, for their own use and benefit, exempt from all public taxes, burdens or charges, other than those which may be imposed or authorized by this act.

23. If the company elect to continue the lower James river canal to Lynchburg, or beyond it, as part of their improvement, then that canal in all its parts from Richmond to its western termination, shall be at least forty feet wide at top, and twenty-eight feet wide at bottom, with not less than four feet depth of water at all seasons of the year, shall be provided with a convenient tow-path, and adapted throughout its whole extent to the navigation of boats of not less than thirty-five tons burden, propelled by horses. To avoid very great expense at difficult passes, and to furnish proper accommodation to the trade on both sides of the river, the bed of the river shall occasionally be used as part of the line of navigation, when the refluent water from the dams will admit the convenient application of horse power, and the safe and easy passage of the usual canal boats. The canal at its lower termination shall be connected with the tide-water, so as to enable the boats which usually navigate it with their cargoes, at all times conveniently to pass into tide water, and descend the river or return.

24. From the highest point on James or Jackson's river to which the navigation shall be carried as aforesaid, a rail-road shall be extended by the most convenient route, either to the Ohio river, or to some suitable point on the Kanawha river, below the great falls thereof, as the company may elect. Such rail-road shall be graduated, so as to be convenient for transportation both eastward and westward, and shall be furnished with two sets of tracks, and all other works and fixtures necessary for the accommodation of the trade thereon.

25. If the company should not choose to extend the lower James river canal, but should elect a continued rail-road from Richmond, then they shall construct a rail-road from the tide water at Richmond, following the course of James river beyond the Blue Ridge, and thence by the most convenient route to the Kanawha river, terminating either at the mouth of that river, or at some other convenient point below the great falls, or at some convenient point on the Ohio river. And for the accommodation of the trade on both sides of James river, they shall extend proper arms of the road across the river, to all towns, and other convenient places of deposit on the opposite shore thereof.

26. If the western termination of the rail-road should be at any point of the Kanawha above its mouth, then the navigation of the Kanawha river from thence to the Ohio, shall be improved by locks and dams, or otherwise, so that at all seasons of the year, it may be conveniently and safely navigated by steam-boats of not less than one hunderd tons burden.

27. The works hereby required of the James river and Kanawha company, shall be executed with diligence, and if they be not commenced within two years after the passing of this act, and finished within twelve years after the first general meeting of the stockholders, then their charter shall be forfeited, and all the works of the company, with the land on which they are situated, and all the rights, privileges and immunities hereby granted to them, shall be vested in the present James river company, for the benefit of the commonwealth; and in that event, the present James river company shall be regarded, to all intents and purposes, as the successors of the company hereby incorporated, in no manner, however, liable for any debts which they may have contracted, or entitled to any part of their personal property.

28. If the capital of five millions of dollars shall be found insufficient to complete the works required of the company, they shall be at liberty to enlarge their capital to any amount which may be found necessary to that end. The commonwealth shall be at liberty to take two-fifths of the additional capital, or any portion thereof, and the other stockholders to take the residue. So much thereof as shall not be voluntarily taken by the commonwealth and the other stockholders, may be raised by opening new books, and receiving new subscriptions, under the superintendence and control of the president and directors. The additional capital shall be taken in whole shares of a hundred dollars each; and the subscribers, their successors, heirs and assigns, shall be thenceforth, to all intents and purposes, members of the company in like manner as if they had been subscribers to the original capital; and shall, in like manner, be compelled to pay the amount of their subscriptions, upon the requisition of the president and directors, be subject to all the burdens, and entitled to all the privileges of the original subscribers.

days previous notice of the application shall have been given to the owner of the land, or to the guardian, if the owner be an infant, or to the committee, the owner being non compos mentis, if such owner, guardian or committee, can be found within the county; or if he cannot be so found, then such appointment shall not be made, unless notice of the application shall have been published at least one month next preceding, in some newspaper printed as convenient as may be to the courthouse of the county, and shall have been posted at the door of the courthouse on the first day at least of the next preceding term of the said court. A day for the meeting of the said freeholders to perform the duty assigned them, shall be designated in the order appointing them; and any one or more of them attending on that day, may adjourn from time to time, until their business shall be finished. Of the five freeholders so appointed, any three or more of them may act after having been duly sworn or solemnly affirmed before some justice of the peace, that they will impartially and justly, to the best of their ability, ascertain the damages which will be sustained by the proprietor of the land from the condemnation thereof, for the use of the company, and that they will truly certify their proceedings thereupon to the court of the said county.

30. It shall be the duty of the said freeholders, in pursuance of the order appointing them, to assemble on the land proposed to be condemned, and after viewing the same, and hearing such proper evidence as either party may offer, they shall ascertain, according to the best of their judgment, the damages which the proprietor of the land will sustain, by the condemnation thereof for the use of the company. In performing this duty, they shall consider the proprietor of the land as being the owner of the whole fee simple interest therein: they shall take into consideration the quantity and quality of the land to be condemned, the additional fencing which will be required thereby, and all other inconveniences which will result to the proprietor from the condemnation thereof, and shall combine therewith a just regard to the advantages which the owner of the land will derive from the construction of the road or 81 canal, for the use of which his land is condemned.

31. When the said freeholders shall have agreed upon the amount of damages, they shall forthwith make a written report of their proceedings under their hands and seals, in substance as followeth:

"We, freeholders, appointed by an order of the county court of for the purpose of ascertaining the damages which would be sustained by , the proprietor of certain lands in the said county, which the president and directors of the James river and Kanawha company propose to condemn for their use, do hereby certify, that we met together on the land aforesaid, on the day of , the day appointed therefor by the said order, (or the day to which we were regularly adjourned, from the day appointed for our meeting by the said order.) and that having been first duly sworn, and having viewed the premises, we proceeded to estimate the quantity and quality of the land aforesaid, the quantity of additional fencing, which would probably be occasioned by its condemnation, and all other inconveniences which seemed to us likely to result therefrom to the proprietor of said land: that we combined with these considerations, as far as we could, a just regard to the advantages which would be derived by the proprietor of the said land, from the construction of the rail-road, (or canal,) for the use of which the said land is to be condemned: that under the influence of these considerations, we have estimated, and do hereby assess the damages aforesaid, at the sum of . Given under our hands and seals this day of ." At the foot of the report so made, the magistrate before whom the said freeholders were sworn, shall make a certificate, in substance as follows: "County, set: I, a justice of the peace for said county, do hereby certify, that the above named freeholders, before they executed their duties as above certified, were solemnly sworn (or affirmed) before me, that they would impartially and justly, to the best of their ability, ascertain the damages which would be sustained by the above named , from the condemnation of the above mentioned land, for the use of the James river and Kanawha company, and that they would certify truly their proceedings thereupon to the court of the said county. Given under my hand this day of ."

32. The report of the freeholders so made, together with the certificate of the magistrate as aforesaid, shall be forthwith returned by the said freeholders, to the court of the county; and unless good cause be shewn against the report, it shall be confirmed by the court, and entered of record: but if the said report shall be disaffirmed, or if the said freeholders, being unable to agree, should report their disagreement, or if from any other cause, they should fail to make a report, within a reasonable time after their appointment, the court may at its discretion as often as may be necessary, supersede them, or any of them, appoint others in their stead, and direct another view and report to be made, in the manner above described.

enter upon the lands laid out by them as aforesaid, and which they desire to condemn, and apply the same to the uses of the company. If when they so take possession, proceedings to ascertain the damages as aforesaid shall be pending, it shall be their duty diligently to prosecute them to a conclusion; or if none be then pending they shall without delay institute them, and diligently prosecute them to a conclusion. And when the report of the freeholders ascertaining the damages shall be returned and confirmed, the court shall render judgment in favour of the proprietor of the land for the amount thereof, and either compel its payment into court, or award process of execution for its recovery as to them shall seem right.

35. In the mean time no order shall be made and no injunction shall be awarded by any court or judge to stay the proceedings of the company in the prosecution of their works, unless it be manifest that they, their officers, agents or servants are transcending the authority given them by this act, and that the interposition of the court is necessary to prevent injury that cannot be adequately compensated in damages.

36. If the president and directors shall take possession of any land before the same shall have been purchased by them or condemned and paid for according to the provisions of this act, and shall fail for forty days to institute proceedings for its condemnation as aforesaid or shall not prosecute with due diligence the proceedings commenced for that purpose, it shall be lawful for the proprietor of the land, upon giving to the said president and directors, or any one of them, ten days previous notice, to apply to the court of the county in which the land or the greater part thereof shall lie; and upon such application the court shall appoint five discreet, intelligent, disinterested and impartial freeholders to assess the damages to the owner from the condemnation of his land for the use of the company, shall appoint a day for their meeting, to perform the duties assigned them, and shall dismiss at the costs of the company any proceedings then depending on their behalf for the condemnation of the said land. The freeholders so appointed, any three or more of whom may act, shall proceed in the performance of their duties in all respects in the same manner as if they had been appointed on the application of the president and directors of the company. And the court shall in like manner confirm or disaffirm their report, supersede them or any of them, and appoint others in their stead, or direct another view and report to be made as often as may be necessary. And when any such report ascertaining the damages shall be confirmed, the court shall render judgment in favour of the proprietor for the damages so assessed, and double costs, and shall thereupon either compel the company to pay into court the damages and costs so adjudged, or award process of execution therefor as to them shall seem right.

37. When the judgment rendered for the damages assessed and costs, shall be satisfied by the payment of the money into court, or otherwise, the title of the land for which such damages were assessed, shall be vested in the company in the same manner 83 as if the proprietor had sold and conveyed it to them.

38. The said president and directors, for the purpose of constructing their canals, feeders, dams and rail-road aforesaid, and the works necessarily connected therewith, or of repairing the same after they shall have been made, or of enlarging or otherwise altering or repairing their canals, and other works now in existence, shall be at liberty by themselves, their officers, agents or servants, at any time to enter upon any adjacent lands, and to cut, quarry, dig, take and carry away therefrom, any wood, stone, gravel or earth, which they may deem necessary: Provided, however, That they shall not, without the consent of the owner, cut down any fruit tree, or any tree preserved in any field or lot for shade or for ornament, or take any timber, gravel, stone or earth, constituting any part of any fence or building. For all wood, stone, gravel or earth taken under authority of this act, and for all incidental injuries done to the enclosures, crops, woods or grounds, in taking or carrying the same away, the said president and directors shall make to the owner a fair and reasonable compensation, to be ascertained, if the parties cannot agree, by any three impartial, intelligent and disinterested freeholders, who, being appointed for that purpose by any justice of the peace thereto required by the owner, shall be sworn by him, and shall then ascertain the compensation upon their own view of the wood, stone, gravel or earth taken, and of the injury done as aforesaid in taking them.

other. And if, by the enlargement or alteration of the canals now in existence, any bridge thereon, which the present James river company is bound to maintain for the use of the owner of the adjoining lands, should be destroyed or injured, the new company shall, without delay, re-build or repair it, so that the owner of the adjoining lands may sustain no detriment.

41. The general assembly will be at full liberty, at any time hereafter, to authorize any other rail-road to be joined to the rail-road of the James river and Kanawha company, or be conducted across it, on such terms as may be just, and in such manner as not to injure the works of the James river company, or obstruct the use of their road. 84

42. The present improvements on James river shall, as far as practicable, be kept in good repair by the company, and free for use, on the payment of the tolls now allowed, except so far as they may be substituted by the new works required by this act.

43. The James river and Kanawha company shall at all times keep open and in good repair, the present Kanawha turnpike, hereby to be transferred to said company, as well as the extension thereof to the mouth of Big Sandy river, from the time of the completion of the same, and shall be authorized to receive, for the use of the said road, and the extension thereof, such tolls as they may assess, provided they do not exceed those now imposed by law. In the mean time, the extension to the mouth of Big Sandy river shall be completed in the manner now required by law, under the direction of the James river company, or such other agent as the general assembly shall direct; and so soon as the same shall be completed, it shall be transferred to the possession and controul of the James river and Kanawha company.

44. When the improvements in the navigation of the rivers hereby authorized, shall have been made, their navigable waters shall be deemed public highways, free for the use of all persons whatsoever, paying the lawful tolls, and conforming to the lawful rules and regulations of the company; and the tolls shall be as follows: Upon James and Jackson's rivers, the company may demand and receive, on all articles transported by water on their line of improvement, such tolls as they may assess, provided they do not exceed an average of three cents per ton of two thousand two hundred and forty pounds, per mile, upon either the ascending or descending navigation, and that the tolls upon indian corn, wheat, rye, and other grains, and grass seeds; upon flour, corn meal and other meal; upon hemp, flax, cotton, tobacco, and all agricultural productions, shall not exceed two and a half cents per ton per mile; that the tolls upon salt, bar iron, pig iron, iron castings, and all other minerals and fossils, shall not exceed two cents per ton per mile; that the toll upon coal shall not exceed one cent per ton per mile; and that the tolls upon lime, lumber and gypsum, shall not exceed one half a cent per ton per mile. These tolls shall be in lieu of the tolls now allowed by law.

45. When the improvements in the navigation hereby required shall be completed as far as Lynchburg, the tolls hereby allowed may be demanded and received upon the transportation between Lynchburg and Richmond, and shall be in lieu of the tolls now allowed on the lower canal: Provided, however, That until the improvements aforesaid shall be completed to the mouth of the North river in Rockbridge, the tolls from Lynchburg downward, on such articles as shall have passed the locks on the mountain canal, shall not exceed two cents per ton per mile. When the improvements shall be completed to the mouth of the North river in Rockbridge, the new tolls may be demanded and received upon the transportation below that point, in lieu of the tolls now allowed on the mountain canal: and if the aforesaid improvements shall be extended above the mouth of the North river, then the new tolls may be demanded and received upon the transportation on such parts of the extended line of improvement above that point, as may from time to time be completed and fit for use: Provided, That no such 85 tolls shall be received on parts of such extended line, until it shall be completed as far as Crow's ferry, and that none such shall be received on the transportation above Crow's ferry, on parts of such extended line, less than ten miles in extent.

46. Upon the Kanawha river, when the improvements on the same shall have been fully completed, as herein-before authorized and directed, from the point on said river where the rail-road may terminate, to the mouth thereof, the company may demand and receive, on all articles transported by water, on their line of improvements, in lieu of the tolls now allowed, such tolls as they may assess, provided they do not exceed one cent per ton per mile; but the tolls on salt, bar iron, pig iron and castings, shall not exceed one half of a cent per ton per mile; and upon lumber, lime, coal and gypsum, shall not exceed one-fourth of a cent per ton per mile: Provided, That all canoes and other small craft going to or returning from mill, shall be exempt from the payment of tolls. Until said river is rendered navigable in the manner above prescribed, from the termination of said rail-road to the mouth of the river, the James river and Kanawha company may demand and receive such tolls upon said river as they may assess, provided they do not exceed those now allowed by law.

47. Upon the rail-road hereby authorized, the company shall have the exclusive right of transportation. When it is completed, they shall at all times furnish and keep in good repair the necessary carriages and other requisites for the safe and convenient transportation of persons and property; and it shall be their duty at all times upon the payment or tender of the tolls hereby allowed, to transport to any convenient place of delivery on the road which the owner of the goods may indicate, and there to deliver all articles which shall be delivered to them for transportation, or offered to them in proper condition to be transported at some place on the road convenient for the reception thereof. They shall give no undue preference in transportation to the property of one person over that of another, but as far as practicable shall carry each in the order of time in which it shall be delivered or offered for transportation, with the tolls paid or tendered. If the company, or any of its officers or agents, shall fail to receive, transport or deliver, in due time, any property so offered or delivered to them for transportation, they shall forfeit and pay to the party injured double the amount of the lawful tolls paid or tendered; and shall moreover be liable to an action on the case, in which full damages and double costs shall be recovered. The company shall be liable as common carriers for any loss or injury happening to goods in their possession, or in possession of their agents for transportation.

48. If the rail-road be not extended farther east than the western termination of the James river canal, at or above Lynchburg, then the company may demand and receive for transportation thereupon, such tolls as they may assess, provided they do not exceed an average of eight cents per ton per mile; and for the transportation of persons four cents each per mile. But if the rail-road should be continued from Richmond to the Kanawha, then they may demand and receive the same tolls per mile for carriage west of Crow's ferry, at the mouth of Looney's creek, and may demand and receive east of the said Crow's ferry at the mouth of Looney's creek for the carriage of all articles of property 86 from west to east, tolls not exceeding an average of four cents per ton per mile; for the carriage of all articles of property from east to west, tolls not exceeding an average of six cents per ton per mile; and for the carriage of persons, whether eastward or westward, they may demand and receive four cents each per mile: Provided, however, That the tolls upon lumber, salt and the other mineral and agricultural products above enumerated, shall not exceed the respective averages above declared; that the tolls on coal shall not exceed three-fourths of these averages; and the toll on gypsum shall not exceed one-half of these averages. The tolls hereby allowed are in full for all transportation on the rail-road; and no other compensation shall be demanded or received by the company.

49. Tolls on the rail-road may be demanded and received as soon as any part thereof shall have one set of tracks completed, and shall be prepared with the necessary carriages and other requisites for safe and convenient transportation. The company, if they deem it expedient, may defer laying down the second set of tracks until one set shall be completed throughout the whole extent of the road: but they shall thereafter lay down the second with all practicable dispatch.

50. While the works are in progress, and after they are completed, the president and directors of the company shall declare and make semi-annual dividends of so much of the surplus profits of the stock, after paying the dividends due to the old stockholders, as they may deem it prudent to divide. The dividends on the commonwealth's stock, or so much thereof as may be required, shall be applied towards the payment of the interest on the loans to the James river company, and the dividends on the stock of the other stockholders, shall be paid to their order in such manner as the by-laws may prescribe.

51. The annual nett profits of the company proceeding from tolls, rents, and all other emoluments, shall never exceed fifteen per centum upon their capital stock; and the tolls shall be regulated from time to time, so as to restrain the profits within that limit. All reductions of the tolls made for that purpose shall be made rateably, on the Kanawha river, on the line between that and Crow's ferry at the mouth of Looney's creek, and on the line from thence to Richmond. To the end, that this regulation may be enforced, and that the general assembly may always be informed of the condition of the company, it shall be the duty of the president and directors of the company, annually, to report to the board of public works, or to such other public authority as the law may prescribe, the true state and condition of the company, its income from tolls, rents and other emoluments, its expenditures, and its nett profits, to the end that the commonwealth and the other stockholders may enjoy the profits of the stock in proportion to the amount of their respective capitals; the dividends declared as aforesaid upon each share, shall always be in proportion to the amount actually paid thereupon by the stockholders; and the commonwealth shall be regarded as having paid the full amount of her original subscription, from the time when her interest in the property and works of the present James river company shall have been transferred to the new company.

52. If any person shall wilfully trespass on the possessions, or do injury to the works or other property of the company, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and be punished accordingly; except in those cases in which the offence is of a higher grade, or otherwise specifically punished by law. 87

53. In the event of the said company's constructing a road for the passage of carriages and heavy loaded waggons, and keeping the same in good repair, from a suitable point at or near the lower end of the existing canal at the mountain section, to a point on or near the North river, they shall be, and are hereby authorized to erect a gate thereon, and to demand and receive such tolls as are allowed by the act passed February the seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventeen, entitled "an act prescribing certain general regulations for the incorporation of turnpike companies."

54. This act shall commence and be in force from and after the passing thereof.

2. Be it further enacted, That in order to enable the president and directors of the James river company to repair and improve the said turnpike, and to re-build or repair the bridges belonging to the same, in a complete and effectual manner, they are hereby authorized and empowered to borrow on the credit of the state, a sum of money not exceeding ten thousand dollars, on the same terms, conditions and pledges as are prescribed for the loan authorized by the first and second sections of the act, entitled, "an act authorizing a loan for the purposes of internal improvement," passed on the first day of March, eighteen hundred and twenty-six, and so much of the said sum as shall be necessary, is hereby appropriated for the purposes above mentioned.

Passed February 15, 1858. 91

1. Be it enacted by the general assembly, that the number of directors in the James river and Kanawha company shall be increased by the appointment of six additional directors, three of whom shall be appointed by the Board of public works, and three by the stockholders in general meeting. Two of said directors to be elected by the stockholders in general meeting, shall be elected by the stockholders other than the state, and the third by the stockholders, including the state. That the three additional directors to be appointed by the Board of public works, and two of those to be appointed by the holders, shall be residents of the Kanawha valley, and shall, with the president of the company, constitute a board to be known as The Kanawha Board; which shall be entrusted with the control, management and supervision of the Kanawha improvement; subject, however, to the instructions of the stockholders of said company. All the authority now vested in the present board of directors over the Kanawha river, shall be vested in the Kanawha board 92 of directors herein authorized to be appointed; but said Kanawha board of directors shall have no control over any of the other works or affairs of said company. The Kanawha board may elect one of their number to act as president pro tempore, who shall preside, and discharge the other duties of president of the company, relating to the Kanawha river, in the absence of the president. Three of said directors, with the president of the company, shall constitute a quorum, and in the absence of the president, four of said directors shall constitute a quorum. The said Kanawha board shall have power to adopt such by-laws and regulations and to appoint such officers and agents as they may deem necessary for the management of the Kanawha improvement: provided, that in case the president of the company shall differ with the Kanawha directors in any matter involving in his opinion the general interests of the company, he shall have authority to call a meeting of the two boards of directors together, and submit such matter to them as one board; and their decision shall be carried into effect. The third director to be elected by the stockholders, including the state as aforesaid, shall be a member of the board of directors of the James river and Kanawha company as at present constituted, and invested with full powers as such.

2. The James river and Kanawha company are hereby authorized to borrow on the credit of their works on the Kanawha river, now existing and hereafter to be constructed under this act, and the net revenues now on hand or due and unpaid, and that may hereafter accrue therefrom, a sum or sums of money sufficient to improve the navigation of the Kanawha river, from the mouth thereof to Loup creek shoals, and are hereby authorized to issue their bonds or certificates of debt, payable at a period of not less than twelve years from the issuing and date thereof, unless the company shall think proper to pay them at an earlier time. Such bonds or certificates of debt shall bear interest at a rate not exceeding the rate of interest allowed by an act of the general assembly passed March fifteenth, eighteen hundred and fifty-six, entitled an act for the relief of rail road and other companies, and to regulate the terms on which they may borrow money; and the company shall not sell the said bonds or certificates at a less rate than that allowed in the said act. The company are also authorized to apply the net revenues derived from their works on the Kanawha river from its mouth to Loup creek shoals, directly to the improvement of said river.

3. The James river and Kanawha company are authorized and empowered to give a mortgage upon their said works on and rights in the said Kanawha river from Loup creek shoals to its mouth, as well as the works hereafter to be constructed under this act, and upon their net revenues now due or in hand, and which may hereafter accrue from the said works, for the purpose of securing the payment of the interest and the ultimate redemption of the principal of said bonds or certificates of debt; but the said mortgage shall give the power to sell the said property thereby conveyed, only in case of default in the payment of the principal of the said bonds or certificates of debt, when they shall become due, and provide for the payment of the accruing interest thereon only from the accruing net revenue from said work, except such arrears of interest as may be unpaid, if any, when the company may make default in the payment of the principal; which arrears may be provided to be then paid, together with the principal, from the proceeds of the sale of the property conveyed by the said mortgage. And a sale of the property shall not then be made, unless it shall appear that the payment of the principal of said bonds cannot be made within five years out of the revenues to be derived from said improvement. Neither the said bonds nor any other contract of the Kanawha board shall be a charge upon or in any manner enforced against the other property, resources or credit of the company. Any liens or prior claims that the state may hold on said works, rights and revenues, are hereby suspended in favor of such parties as may loan money to said company for the purposes of this act, or become the holders of said bonds, until such loan or loans, with the accruing interest thereon, have been fully paid and discharged: provided, however, when the debt with its accruing interest, which is herein authorized to be contracted for the improvement of the Kanawha river, shall have been fully paid and discharged, the state shall be reinstated to all the rights, privileges and priorities to which she was entitled previous to the passage of this act.

4. The James river and Kanawha company are hereby authorized, when the improvement of the Kanawha river has been commenced, to collect on all articles transported on the Kanawha river, in lieu of the tolls now authorized by law, such tolls as they may assess: provided they do not exceed four cents per ton per mile, but the toll on timber, lumber and coal shall not exceed one-fourth of one cent per ton per mile; upon salt, one-half of one cent per ton per mile; and upon bar iron, pig iron, grain and flour, one cent per ton per mile; and said company are also authorized to collect a rate of toll not exceeding one cent per passenger per mile for each person traveling on steam boats on said river.

5. The James river and Kanawha company shall not be liable for injury to boats, cargoes or other property at the points undergoing improvement, unless such injury be caused by a want 93 of ordinary care by the company or its agents in constructing the work.

6. The act of assembly passed February fifth, eighteen hundred and fifty-six, entitled an act authorizing the James river and Kanawha company to borrow money to improve the Kanawha river, and to pledge the tolls on said river for that purpose, so far as its provisions are inconsistent with or are changed by the provisions of this act, is hereby repealed: provided, however, that such repeal shall not affect the validity of the pledge heretofore made by the company, in pursuance of said act, of the tolls from the Kanawha river for the improvement of the said river.

after, unless the stockholders shall determine in general meeting, before the expiration of such period, to extend the said period for completing the work: provided, however, that if this act should be permitted to expire under the foregoing limitations, the rights and liens of the holders of bonds that shall have been issued and sold in pursuance thereof, shall not be affected thereby.

8. This act shall be in force from and after the time that the stockholders of the company shall accept the same in general meeting: provided, that the legislature hereby reserves the right at any time hereafter to modify, amend or repeal the powers and privileges hereby conferred, but the right of parties who may loan money under the provisions of this act for the improvement of the Kanawha river, shall not be affected or impaired by any such amendment, modification of repeal.

3. Upon the receipt of the certificates for the said seventy-two thousand shares of stock, the Board of public works shall give to the James river and Kanawha company a receipt in full for the said several debts due to the state, and for any claims against the company on account of the debts for which the state is responsible as security of the company, or on account of the annuity to the old James river company; and shall, by proper deeds, release to said company all liens, whether by deeds of trust, mortgages or otherwise, held by the state upon the works and property of the company, to secure any debt due to the state, or which may be guaranteed by the state.

4. Upon the receipt of the certificates for the said seventy-two thousand shares of the stock, the Board of public works is hereby directed, upon the surrender by the holders thereof, of any of the bonds of the James river and Kanawha company, for the payment of which the state is responsible, to issue to said holders a corresponding amount of the bonds of the state, made in the manner prescribed by law, payable thirty-four years after their date, and bearing interest at the rate of six per centum per annum, payable semi-annually. And the board shall thereupon cancel and file the bonds so surrendered, and deliver to the James river and Kanawha company a statement thereof, with the number, amount and date of each bond.

5. And upon the receipt of the certificates of the residue of two thousand shares of said stock, the Board of public works is directed to issue and deliver to the company the bonds of the state for the aggregate amount of two hundred thousand dollars, to be applied to the extinguishment of the floating debt of the company.

6. The James river and Kanawha company shall have authority to borrow money, at a rate of interest not exceeding 115 seven per centum per annum, payable semi-annually, and not exceeding two million five hundred thousand dollars, for the purpose of completing the canal to Covington, carrying on their other works and paying the residue of their floating debt, and to execute bonds for the amount borrowed, and deeds of trust or mortgages, pledging their works, property and net revenues for the payment of the same: provided, that they shall not borrow in any one year a greater amount than five hundred thousand dollars. The said interest shall be paid semi-annually into the treasury of the commonwealth, for the benefit of the holders of said bonds, on or before the first day of January and July in each year; and the same shall be paid to the holders thereof, upon the warrant of the second auditor, out of said funds so paid into the treasury by said company.

7. The said company, after they may have issued such bonds, shall set apart, on the first day of January and July in each year, a fund not less than the rate of one per centum per annum for a sinking fund for the payment of the principal of such bonds, or such larger rate as may be necessary to provide a fund sufficient for such redemption, at the maturity of such bonds. And the amount to be set apart annually as a sinking fund, shall be paid by the company, one-half thereof on or before the first day of January and July in each year, to the commissioners of the Sinking fund, and invested by them in stocks, as required by the general law regulating the action of said commissioners; and the said commissioners shall keep an account of, and hold and apply the same to the redemption of said bonds, in pursuance of this act: and shall make report to the general assembly, at each session, of their proceedings under this act.

8. Nothing in this act contained shall be so construed as to render the state liable, in any manner whatever, otherwise than as a stockholder of the company, to the holders of any bonds executed for money borrowed under this act.

9. Be it further enacted, that there shall be issued to, and placed under the exclusive control of the Kanawha board of 116 directors of said company, or their successors, as constituted under the act of the general assembly entitled an act providing more effectual means for the improvement of the navigation of the Kanawha river, passed fifteenth of February one thousand eight hundred and fifty-eight, three hundred thousand dollars of the six per cent. registered stock of the commonwealth, to be issued in the mode now provided by law, and the said stock so issued shall be used by said Kanawha board of directors for the improvement of the navigation of said river, from the mouth thereof to Loup creek shoals: provided, however, said Kanawha board shall not dispose of said registered stock at less than par. And said registered stock shall not be issued for an amount exceeding one hundred and fifty thousand dollars in any one year, nor exceeding twenty thousand dollars in any one month: But before any of said stock shall be issued, the said James river and Kanawha company, by the president thereof, shall execute a deed of trust or mortgage upon the works, property and net revenue of said Kanawha line of improvement, from the mouth thereof to said Loup creek shoals, to the commonwealth, for the payment of the principal and interest of said three hundred thousand dollars: or upon the failure or refusal of said company to execute such deed of trust or mortgage, when required by the Kanawha board, then the said Kanawha board, by their president pro tempore, or other agent, may execute such deed of trust or mortgage: and the same shall be deemed to have the same effect as though it had been executed by said company: and such lien shall take precedence over any lien created by said company, to secure their bonds authorized to be issued by this act. The said Kanawha board shall pay into the treasury of the commonwealth three and one-half per centum on or before the fifteenth day of June and December of each year, on such amount of said registered stock as may be issued under this section, for interest and to provide a sinking fund. the "Eastern board," and shall have the entire control and management of the same, free from such control and direction.

10. The debts of said company, which may not be paid as authorized by this act, or if the holders thereof shall refuse to receive in payment thereof the seven per centum bonds of said company, authorized to be issued by this act, shall not, by reason of the passage of this act, be in any better condition for enforcing the payment theerof; but the liens of the commonwealth existing before the passage of this act, on the works, property and revenue of said improvement, shall, as to them, be deemed to be in full force.

11. The Board of public works shall appoint three proxies to represent the state at the meetings of the stockholders; and the proxies so appointed shall have power to cast three-fifths of all the votes cast in the appointment of the president and other officers elected by the company, except directors of said company, and in fixing the salaries of officers, and in all other questions arising in a meeting of stockholders, and shall allow to said proxies a reasonable compensation for their services. And authority is hereby given to the Board of public works to revise and alter the rates of toll charged by said company, and are directed so to do, so as to adapt them to a remunerative standard. If the location proposed for the line of the canal between the present terminus of the Virginia Central rail road at Jackson's river and the town of Covington, will interfere at any point with any proposed location of the extension of said railroad, and the engineers representing respectively the canal and the rail road cannot agree upon an independent location for each work at such points, then the Board of public works shall determine such location, having due regard to the interest of the commonwealth as a stockholder in each company; and their decision shall be binding.

12. In addition to the rights and powers heretofore granted to and conferred upon the James river company 118 and the James river and Kanawha company, for the collection of tolls on the Kanawha river, the said James river and Kanawha company, their collectors and agents, are hereby authorized and empowered to sue out an attachment before any justice of the peace, against boats and cargoes upon the Kanawha river, for tolls due and unpaid by said boats and cargoes, their owners, masters or shippers.

act shall take effect or the Board of public works shall make the subscription to the stock of said company, authorized by it, or release or discharge the liens which the commonwealth holds on the property of the said company, the private stockholders of said company shall, in general meeting assembled, accept the provisions of this act, and duly certify their acceptance thereof to the Board of public works.

14. Be it further enacted, that before the provisions of this act shall take effect, the said James river and Kanawha company shall, in general meeting of the stockholders, accept the same, and such acceptance shall be deemed an acceptance of all the provisions of this act, and as a complete acquiescence in and recognition of all the authority and independent and other powers conferred upon the said Kanawha board by this act.

3. And the said Kanawha board shall also have full control over the Kanawha road, and shall appoint a general superin- 38

CHAP. 18.—An ACT to amend and re-enact the act passed February 8th, 1862, entitled "An act to reorganize the Kanawha Board."

Passed May 15, 1862. 14

1. The said board of directors shall hold their offices for one year, or until their successors are appointed, and shall have all the powers pertaining to the said board, as fully as if they had 15

That the said collectors shall give bond and security to the Kanawha board, in such sum, in each case, as the said board shall prescribe, for the faithful performance of the duties of their respective offices, as well as to account for the tolls collected by them respectively. The said collectors shall collect all tolls, which shall have accrued on the river in their respective districts prior to, and since the twenty-fourth of May, eighteen hundred and sixty-one, to the time of their qualification, and for this purpose may require manifests of the subjects of toll, from the parties who may owe them, to be made out on oath; and may also require such manifests of all steam boats, and other vessels navigating and carrying freight on the Kanawha river; and the said collectors shall make full report of all tolls collected, and from whom, and account quarterly to the board aforesaid for all monies collected by them and pay the same promptly to the said board or its order.

4. And the said Kanawha board shall also have full control over the Kanawha road, and shall appoint a general superintendent, who shall have supervision of both the Kanawha river and road, whose duty it shall be to collect from the gate-keepers, quarterly, the net proceeds of the tolls collected by said gate-keepers, and keep such road in repair by the use of said tolls, and pay over the residue to the said board for the river improvement; also to take charge of and secure for the use of the board, all the boats, tools and other property now on the river, which was procured by the late Kanawha board, in and for the improvement of the Kanawha river and road; and manage and superintend the improvement of the river, subject to the control of said board, and shall make quarterly returns to said board of his collections and disbursements, and shall receive for his services annually, a sum not exceeding twelve hundred dollars.

6. All former laws, in conflict with the provisions of this act, are hereby repealed.

7. This act shall be in force from its passage.

ACTS OF THE RESTORED GOVERNMENT OF VIRGINIA, ACTS AND CONSTITUTIONAL PROVISIONS OF WEST VIRGINIA, AND ACTS OF UNITED STATES CONGRESS IN CONNECTION WITH THE FORMATION OF THE STATE OF WEST VIRGINIA.

[Wheeling Acts, Session June 11, 1861, p. 5.]

A DECLARATION OF THE PEOPLE OF VIRGINIA, REPRESENTED IN CONVENTION, AT THE CITY OF WHEELING, THURSDAY, JUNE 13, 1861.

The true purpose of all government is to promote the welfare and provide for the protection and security of the governed, and when any form or organization of government proves inadequate for, or subversive of this purpose, it is the right, it is the duty of the latter to abolish it. The Bill of Rights of Virginia, framed in 1776, reaffirmed in 1830, and again in 1851, expressly reserves this right to a majority of her people. The act of the General Assembly, calling the Convention which assembled at Richmond in February last, without the previously expressed consent of such majority, was therefore a usurpation; and the Convention thus called has not only abused the powers nominally entrusted to it, but, with the connivance and active aid of the executive, has usurped and exercised other powers, to the manifest injury of the people, which, if permitted, will inevitably subject them to a military despotism.

The Convention, by its pretended ordinances, has required the people of Virginia to separate from and wage war against the government of the United States, and against citizens of neighboring States, with whom they have heretofore maintained friendly, social and business relations:

It has attempted to subvert the Union founded by Washington and his co-patriots, in the purer days of the republic, which has conferred unexampled prosperity upon every class of citizens, and upon every section of the country:

It has attempted to transfer the allegiance of the people to an illegal confederacy of rebellious States, and required their submission to its pretended edicts and decrees:

It has attempted to place the whole military force and military operations of the Commonwealth under the control and direction of such confederacy, for offensive as well as defensive purposes:

It has, in conjunction with the State executive, instituted wherever their usurped power extends, a reign of terror intended to suppress the free expression of the will of the people, making elections a mockery and a fraud:

The same combination, even before the passage of the pretended ordinance of secession, instituted war by the seizure and appropriation of the property of the Federal Government, and by organizing and mobilizing armies, with the avowed purpose of capturing or destroying the Capital of the Union:

They have attempted to bring the allegiance of the people of the United States into direct conflict with their subordinate allegiance to the State, thereby making obedience to their pretended ordinances, treason against the former.

We, therefore, the delegates here assembled in Convention to devise such measures and take such action as the safety and welfare of the loyal citizens of Virginia may demand, having maturely considered the premises, and viewing with great concern the deplorable condition to which this once happy Commonwealth must be reduced unless some regular adequate remedy is speedily adopted, and appealing to the Supreme Ruler of the Universe for the rectitude of our intentions, do hereby, in the name and on the behalf of the good people of Virginia, solemnly declare that the preservation of their dearest rights and liberties and their security in person and property, imperatively demand the reorganization of the government of the Commonwealth, and that all acts of said Convention and Executive, tending to separate this Commonwealth from the United States, or to levy and carry on war against them, are without authority and void; and that the offices of all who adhere to the said Convention and Executive, whether legislative, executive or judicial, are vacated.

[Wheeling Acts, Session June 11, 1861, p. 6.]

An ORDINANCE for the Reorganization of the State Government.

Passed June 19, 1861.

The People of the State of Virginia, by their Delegates assembled in Convention at Wheeling, do ordain as follows:

1. A governor lieutenant governor and attorney general for the state of Virginia, shall be appointed by this convention, to discharge the duties and exercise the powers which pertain to their respective offices by the existing laws of the state, and to continue in office for six months, or until their successors be elected and qualified; and the general assembly is required to provide by law for an election of governor and lieutenant-governor by the people as soon as in their judgment such election can be properly held.

3. The delegates elected to the general assembly on the twenty-third day of May last, and the senators entitled under existing laws to seats in the next general assembly, together with such delegates and senators as may be duly elected under the ordinances of this convention, or existing laws, to fill vacancies, who shall qualify themselves by taking the oath or affirmation hereinafter set forth, shall constitute the legislature of the state, to discharge the duties and exercise the powers pertaining to the general assembly. They shall hold their offices from the passage of this ordinance until the end of the terms for which they were respectively elected. They shall assemble in the city of Wheeling on the first day of July next, and proceed to organize themselves as prescribed by existing laws, in their respective branches. A majority in each branch of the members qualified as aforesaid, shall constitute a quorum to do business. A majority of the members of each branch thus qualified, voting affirmatively, shall be competent to pass any act specified in the twenty-seventh section of the fourth article of the constitution of the state.

4. The governor, lieutenant-governor, attorney-general, members of the legislature, and all officers now in the service of the state, or of any county, city or town thereof, or hereafter to be elected or appointed for such service, including the judges and clerks of the several courts, sheriffs, commissioners of the revenue, justices of the peace, officers of the city and municipal corporations, and officers of militia, and officers and privates of volunteer companies of the state, not mustered into the service of the United States, shall each take the following oath or affirmation before proceeding in the discharge of their several duties:

"I solemnly swear (or affirm,) that I will support the constitution of the United States, and the laws made in pursuance thereof, as the supreme law of the land, anything in the constitution and laws of the state of Virginia, or in the ordinances of the convention which assembled at Richmond on the thirteenth of February, eighteen hundred and sixty-one, to the contrary notwithstanding; and that I will uphold and defend the government of Virginia as vindicated and restored by the convention which assembled at Wheeling on the eleventh day of June, eighteen hundred and sixty-one."

5. If any elective officer, who is required by the preceding section to take such oath or affirmation, fail or refuse so to do, it shall be the duty of the governor, upon satisfactory evidence of the fact, to issue his writ declaring the office to be vacant, and providing for a special election to fill such vacancy at some convenient and early day to be designated in said writ; of which due publication shall be made for the information of the persons entitled to vote at such election; and such writ may be directed, at the discretion of the governor, to the sheriff or sheriffs of the proper county or counties, or to a special commissioner or commissioners to be named by the governor for the purpose. If the officer who fails or refuses to take such oath or affirmation be appointed by the governor, he shall fill the vacancy without writ, but if such officer be appointed otherwise than by the governor or by election, the writ shall be issued by the governor, directed to the appointing power, requiring it to fill the vacancy.

9. The new state shall take upon itself a just proportion of the public debt of the commonwealth of Virginia prior to the first day of January, 1861, to be ascertained by charging to it all state expenditures within the limits thereof, and a just proportion of the ordinary expenses of the state government, since any part of said debt was contracted; and deducting therefrom the monies paid into the treasury of the commonwealth from the counties included within the said new state during the same period. All private rights and interests in lands within the proposed state, derived from the laws of Virginia prior to such separation, shall remain valid and secure under the laws of the proposed state, and shall be determined by the laws now existing in the state of Virginia.

Passed January 23, 1860.

1. Be it enacted by the general assembly, that the secretary of the commonwealth, the auditor of public accounts and the adjutant general, any two of whom may act, shall be and are hereby appointed commissioners, with authority to audit and settle all accounts for expenses incurred in assembling, arming, equipping and maintaining troops, and for transportation and pay of same, and for the purchase of arms and munitions, and for other incidental expenses incurred in the defence of the state, and in the execution of prisoners under sentence of the circuit court of Jefferson county.

†In the first edition this sum was "seventy" thousand dollars: by act of 1850 51, p. 33, c. 41, §9, it was increased to seventy-five thousand; and by act of 1853-4, p. 25, c. 33, §1, the sum of five thousand dollars additional was annually appropriated.

Said accounts, before being allowed, shall be sustained by proper vouchers, verified by officers in command, or shall be such accounts as were incurred in the execution of legal orders issued by competent authority. And when the said accounts are so sustained and allowed, the said commissioners are hereby authorized to direct the auditor of public accounts to issue his warrants for the several amounts thereof in behalf of those severally entitled thereto; to be paid out of any money in the treasury not otherwise appropriated: provided, however, that no account claimed by or due to any general, field or staff officer or rail road company, shall be paid by the commissioners aforesaid; but the same shall, when audited, be reported by them to the general assembly; and in auditing any account or accounts due to any rail road company in arrear or indebted to the commonwealth, the amount due from said rail road company to the state shall be first deducted: and provided further, that if the commissioners aforesaid deem it doubtful what law of congress, under the Code of Virginia, fixes the pay of company and non-commissioned officers, musicians and privates, they shall report the fact to the general assembly: provided, however, that the appropriation hereby authorized shall not exceed the sum of one hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

2. The said commissioners shall keep an accurate account 129 of all moneys allowed by them, and paid by their order. They shall ascertain also the accounts heretofore paid by orders of the executive for similar expenditures; and it shall be their duty to report both amounts to the general assembly as soon as practicable.

3. Immediately after the passage of this act, the commissioners shall advertise for the presentation of claims; and unless the same are presented within six months from the passage of this act, they shall not be considered by said commissioners.

4. The commissioners aforesaid are authorized to employ a clerk.

5. This act shall be in force from its passage.

CHAP. 28.—An ACT making an additional Appropriation to defray the Expenses incurred for the Defence of the Commonwealth.

Passed March 6, 1860 129

1. Be it enacted by the general assembly, that the board created by the act entitled an act appointing commissioners to audit and pay the expense incurred by the executive for the purchase of arms and for the defence of the commonwealth, passed twenty-third January eighteen hundred and sixty, shall continue to audit the claims which they are authorized to audit and pay by said act, and to issue warrants on the treasury for the amount due and unpaid, under the limitations and restrictions imposed by said act; and for that purpose, an additional sum of seventy-five thousand dollars shall be and the same is hereby appropriated, to be paid out of any money in the treasury not otherwise appropriated.

2. In the payment of any claim hereafter presented to the auditor, which has been allowed under this or the act aforesaid, no claim which shall have been assigned by the original claimant to another person prior to the passage of the joint resolution authorizing extra pay, shall be paid to any person but to the said original claimant, or his authorized agent, by an order given subsequent to the passage 130 of said resolution. But the general assembly disapprove of the principle adopted by the commission on the Harpers Ferry accounts in auditing the accounts of officers, insomuch as the allowances for horses and servants not in the service of such officers are concerned, and hereby direct the said commission to reaudit the said accounts so far as that point is concerned, and to exclude from their settlement all allowances of any kind for horses and servants not actually in the service of any officer, and all allowances for any service of a constructive nature, and not actually rendered by the officer making the claim.

3. This act shall be in force from its passage.

CHAP. 29.—An ACT making further Appropriations to pay Expenses for the Defense of the Commonwealth.

2. The commissioners appointed by the act to audit and pay the expenses incurred by the executive for the purchase of arms and for the defence of the commonwealth, passed January twenty-third, eighteen hundred and sixty, shall be and they are hereby authorized to pay all claims of officers and rail road companies which have been heretofore reported by them to the general assembly, and all claims of officers and rail road companies which may be hereafter audited by them, upon the principles and under the limitations and restrictions imposed by the said act, and by the act making an additional 131

3. This act shall be in force from its passage.

1. Be it enacted by the general assembly, that the governor be and he is hereby authorized and required to appoint a commissioner, who, together with the commissioner who may be appointed on the part of North Carolina, shall cause the said line to be accurately surveyed, traced, and marked with stone monuments, not exceeding five miles apart, beginning at the county line dividing Pittsylvania and Henry counties, where it intersects with the North Carolina line, and thence running west to the intersection of the line of the state of Tennessee.

2. It shall be the duty of the commissioners, after running, locating, establishing and marking the said line, to make a report, setting forth all the facts touching the same, and to forward copies of the joint report to their respective legislatures. And upon ratification of such report by the legislatures of the states of North Carolina and Virginia, the said boundary line shall be fixed and established; to remain forever, unless changed by the mutual consent of the said states.

3. That the governor shall be and is hereby authorized to pay one-half of all the expense which may be incurred in running and marking said line as aforesaid, and also the sum of five dollars per day to the commissioner appointed by the executive of this state, for each day he may be engaged in performing the service, and ten cents per mile for each mile he may travel to and from his residence in going to and returning from the line aforesaid; to be paid, upon the order of the governor, out of any money in the treasury not otherwise appropriated.

4. This act shall be in force from its passage.

Adopted March 10, 1860. 699

Whereas the legislatures of Maryland and Virginia have each passed an act (the former, March twenty sixth, A. D. eighteen hundred and fifty-two, and the latter, March twenty-ninth, A. D., eighteen hundred and fifty-eight), providing for the surveying, retracing and marking of the boundary line between the two states, which runs from Watkins' Point, on the Eastern Shore, to the Atlantic ocean:

And whereas, in accordance with the provisions of said acts, Colonel Thomas J. Lee, on the part of Maryland, and Colonel Angus W. McDonald, on the part of Virginia, were appointed commissioners, jointly to have (among other things) the said line retraced, surveyed and marked, and have, with the assistance of Lieutenant N. Michler of the United States corps of engineers, assigned to that service by the war department, caused said line to be retraced, surveyed and marked, and full and elaborate plats and maps of the same made and returned to each of said states: Therefore.

1. Resolved, that suitable and permanent monuments should be erected at the termini and along said line, to perpetuate the location of the same, at the joint cost of said two states, and that Virginia's portion of such cost is provided for by the said act of March twenty-ninth, eighteen hundred and fifty-eight.

2. And be it further resolved, that the governor of this commonwealth, if he deem it expedient, be, and he is hereby authorized and requested to send to England a competent agent, and obtain from thence all record and documentary evidence tending to ascertain and establish the true lines of boundary between Virginia and the states of North Carolina, Tennessee and Maryland: The cost of such agency not to exceed two thousand dollars; provision for which is also made by said act of March twenty-ninth, eighteen hundred and fifty-eight.

4. The said visitors shall be charged with the erection, preservation and repair of the buildings, the care of the grounds and appurtenances, and of the interests of the institution generally. They shall have power to employ all necessary agents; to appoint and remove professors (two-thirds of the whole number concurring in every case of removal); to fix their compensation; prescribe their duties and the course of education in each school; to establish rules for the government and discipline of the pupils; to regulate tuition fees; to prescribe and control the duties and proceedings of all officers, servants and others, with respect to the buildings, 32 lands, appurtenances and other property and interests of the institution; to draw from the literary fund or the treasury, such moneys as are or shall be charged by law on either for the benefit and support of the institution; and in general, to direct and do all matters and things, which, not being inconsistent with the constitution and laws of the United States or of this state, shall seem to them most expedient for promoting the purposes and fulfilling the objects of said institution; which several functions they shall be free to exercise in the form of by-laws, rules, resolutions, orders, instructions or otherwise, as they shall deem proper.

International Exchanges.

No 1.—Preamble and resolutions relative to a national interchange of productions of art, science, industry and natural history. —[Adopted March 23, 1848.] 353

Whereas the legislature of Virginia regards with interests the noble design of a national interchange of productions of art, science, industry and natural history, projected by Mons. Alexandre Vatte-mare, and patronized with such munificence by the French government, and is desirious of contributing to a work so important:

2. Resolved, That the legislature has learned with gratitude that France, of whose prosperity we always hear with pleasure, and in whose misfortunes we always sympathize, has presented to Virginia, literary works of a rare, useful and costly character, for which it is incumbent to make some return even if inadequate.

3. Resolved, That the state librarian be instructed to forward to the agent of international exchanges such copies of the code and of the law reporters, of the journals and other legislative documents, or other works as may be spared without detriment to the library; he shall forward such reports of the moral, social and political statistics of Virginia as may tend to diffuse amongst other nations a correct knowledge of her institutions, her condition and her capacities; that he shall likewise forward any private donations intended for the department of international exchanges; and that he be required to report annually to the joint committee of the library.

2. The said treasury notes shall be made payable to the order of the person or persons to whom they are given in evidence of money borrowed, and shall also be payable at the treasury of the commonwealth not more than one year after their respective dates. From which dates, until the dates at which they are severally payable and no longer, they shall bear such interest as shall be expressed on the face of the said notes. Which rate of interest upon each several issue of the said notes shall be fixed by the governor, with the advice of the auditor of public accounts; but shall in no case exceed the rate of six per centum per annum. The said notes shall be redeemed and paid at the treasury to the holders respectively, upon the warrant of the auditor of public accounts; and the said redemption and payment shall include the principal of each note, and the interest which may be due thereon at the time of payment. For this payment and redemption, at the times and place herein specified, the faith of the commonwealth of Virginia is hereby solemnly pledged.

9. The said treasury notes shall be prepared under the di- 19
rection of the governor, and shall be signed, on the part of the commonwealth, by the treasurer, and countersigned by the auditor of public accounts, from time to time, as they are delivered to the parties from whom money is borrowed, and to whose order they are made payable. And those officers respectively shall, as checks upon each other, and to secure the public safety, keep separate, full and accurate accounts of the number, date, denomination and amount of all the notes signed and countersigned by them respectively, and of the names of the persons to whose order the said notes are severally made payable. Which said amounts shall be carefully preserved and kept on file in their respective offices, and also similar accounts kept and preserved in the same manner of all the said notes redeemed, as the same shall be returned and canceled. The auditor of public accounts shall further account monthly for all notes delivered to him by the treasurer, to be countersigned for delivery. The said auditor is authorized, with the consent of the governor, to employ such additional temporary clerks as the duties enjoined on him hereby may render necessary: provided, that the expense of such clerks shall not exceed, in the aggregate, nine hundred dollars per annum.

12. A sum not exceeding five hundred dollars, to be paid out of any money in the treasury not otherwise appropriated, is hereby appropriated annually for three years, for defraying the expense of preparing, printing, engraving and signing the treasury notes hereby authorized, and other expenses incident thereto. The plate or plates for such engraving shall be carefully preserved, as the governor may direct, and shall be destroyed when the issue of the said notes shall cease.

of the subscription authorized and directed as aforesaid: And provided, moreover, That the said president and directors shall agree to appropriate a sum not exceeding in amount eighty thousand dollars, towards the construction of suitable locks to enable the river boats to reach the canal, and to return from it to the river again, at or near each of the following points on the river Potomac, to wit: the mouth of Goose creek and the base of the Ketocton mountain, in the county of Loudoun, the ferry across the Potomac at Shepherdstown, in the county of Jefferson, and the ferry across the same river at Light's, or at the mouth of the Opequon, in the county of Berkeley, and to cause the said locks to be constructed by the first of November, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-five, and sooner if practicable.

2. Be it further enacted, That the treasurer be, and he hereby is authorized and required, if the certificates directed by this act to be delivered to the treasurer or other proper agent of the Chesapeake and Ohio canal company, can be sold at a premium, or above their par value, to sell the same for the best price to be had, after advertising the time and place of sale for six weeks, in such newspapers as he may think expedient, and pay to the treasurer or other proper officer of said company, so much money as may be due and payable on account of the subscription of the state to the stock of said company, according to the provisions of this act; and pay the balance into the treasury to the credit of the fund for internal improvement.

3. This act shall commence and be in force from the passing thereof.

CHAP. 97.—An ACT to provide for the appointment of a proxy to represent the state in the Chesapeake and Ohio canal company, and for other purposes.

(Passed March 8, 1834.) 110

1. Be it enacted by the general assembly, That the stock held by the state in the Chesapeake and Ohio canal company, under the provisions of an act passed the twentieth of February, eighteen hundred and thirty-three, entitled, "an act authorizing a subscription by the state of Virginia to the stock of the Chesapeake and Ohio canal company," together with the dividends and other income which shall hereafter accrue thereon, shall be, and they are hereby transferred to, and vested in the president and directors of the board of public works, as a part of the fund for internal improvement: Provided, however, That the said stock, its dividends and other income, shall be subject to such future disposition as may by law be directed for the payment of the interest and redemption of the principal of the sums borrowed under the act aforesaid.

2. Be it further enacted, That the appointment of proxy to represent the state in all meetings of the stockholders of the Chesapeake and Ohio canal company, shall henceforth be made by the board of public works, until otherwise provided by law. And it shall be the duty of the said proxy, if in his power, to cause to be transmitted to the said board copies of the annual and other reports of the president and directors of said company, the proceedings of the stockholders, and other interesting documents relating to the said improvement.

CHAP. 12.—An ACT providing for the negotiation of loans for purposes of internal improvement.

(Passed April 9, 1838.) 24

1. Be it enacted by the general assembly, That all loans hereafter authorized by law for the payment of subscriptions on behalf of the commonwealth to the capital of joint stock companies incorporated for purposes of internal improvement, or for defraying the expense of any work of internal improvement in which the state is or may be interested, as well as all such loans heretofore authorized, shall be negotiated according to the provisions of this act, except so far as may be otherwise specially provided by the acts authorizing the loans.

2. The board of public works, in effecting such loans, shall borrow upon the credit of the commonwealth, at the lowest rate of interest at which the necessary amount can be obtained, not exceeding in any case five per centum per annum. Upon the payment of the money so borrowed into the treasury, which shall be done upon the warrant of the second auditor, the treasurer shall issue a certificate or certificates of loan for the amount thereof, purporting that the commonwealth of Virginia owes to the lender, his heirs, executors, administrators and assigns, the principal sum so borrowed, together with the interest at the rate agreed on, that the interest is payable semi-annually at the treasury of the commonwealth, and that such certificate or certificates were issued under authority of the special act authorizing such loans. Each certificate shall be signed by the treasurer, and countersigned by the second auditor, and be registered in a book to be kept for that purpose by the second auditor, and shall be transferrable on the books of his office in person or by attorney. The semi-annual interest on such certificate shall be paid on his warrant, and upon the transfer of the whole or any part thereof, shall be delivered up and cancelled, and a new certificate or certificates equal to its whole amount, shall be issued and registered in manner aforesaid. All loans negotiated in conformity to this act shall be irredeemable for twenty years, but shall afterwards be redeemed at the pleasure of the general assembly.

3. For the payment of the interest, and the final redemption of the principal of any sum to be borrowed in conformity to this act, the stock of any joint stock company subscribed for or purchased with the money so borrowed, together with the dividends and other nett income which may accrue therefrom to the commonwealth, or to the fund for internal improvement, shall be, and the same are hereby appropriated and pledged; and in like manner the nett income and other profits which may so accrue from works in which the state is interested, other than those of joint stock companies, and on which the money borrowed is to be expended, shall be and the same are likewise hereby appropriated and pledged for the payment of the interest and redemption of the principal of the money so borrowed: and if the stock aforesaid and the said dividends, nett profits and other income shall be inadequate to the payment of the said semi-annual interest, and the final redemption of the principal, of the respective loans, the general assembly pledges itself to provide other and sufficient funds, and for that purpose to levy, if necessary, an adequate tax upon any or all subjects liable to taxation under the constitution. Until such other sufficient funds shall be provided, so much of the income of the fund for internal improvement, not otherwise specially appropriated, as may be necessary to supply the deficiency, is hereby pledged for such purpose; and if at any time the dividends and other income arising from the stock or work as aforesaid, together with the income of the fund for internal improvement, shall be insufficient to pay the interest due upon the loan when demanded, the auditor of public accounts shall, upon the application of the board of public works, issue his warrant upon the treasury, directing the payment of such interest out of any moneys therein not otherwise appropriated. And in case of the inability of the treasury at any time to discharge such warrants, the board of public works shall be and they are hereby authorized to borrow the necessary amount from the banks of this state, at a rate of interest not exceeding six per centum per annum, on the credit of the commonwealth, to be repaid in such manner as the general assembly may by law direct.

4. The surplus dividends and other income arising from any stock or work as aforesaid, and remaining after the payment of the interest due upon the certificates issued for loans applied to such stock or work, shall from time to time be applied by the board of public works to the purchase of such certificates, if to be procured on satisfactory terms; and if not, then of any other certificates of state debt, or any other public debt or other stock which can be so purchased, which shall be held as a fund for the payment of the interest and redemption of the principal of the loans obtained for the payment of such stock or such work, and the interest accruing therefrom shall also from time to time be invested and held in like manner: and the said certificates of debt so purchased, together with the stock pledged, shall be disposed of in such manner as the general assembly may direct: Provided, That the certificates so purchased on account of any particular loan, or such part thereof as may be necessary, shall from time to time be sold by the board of public works to reimburse the fund for internal improvement for all payments of interest made out of the income for that fund on account of such loan, by virtue of this act.

5. The board of public works shall be and they are hereby fully authorized and empowered to procure any or all of the loans authorized by law, either in the United States or in Europe, as they may deem most advantageous to the public interest, and for that purpose to appoint, if they see fit, one or more agents, with the necessary powers, and to allow him or them such compensation as they may deem reasonable. In the event of a loan or loans being effected in Europe, the said board may provide for the payment of the interest on the same semi-annually, in London or elsewhere, and may stipulate for the payment by the lenders of the amount of such loans in England or elsewhere, conforming the certificates to be issued to the terms of the loans. They shall also be empowered generally to do and execute all such acts and writings as may be necessary to complete the said loans, and to cause the prompt payment of the amount thereof into the public treasury.

6. Be it further enacted, That the person or persons, body or bodies politic or corporate, in whose names any of the certificates of the public debt of this commonwealth shall be issued, in conformity to the provisions of this act, shall be deemed as to the commonwealth the owner of the said stock until a transfer shall be duly made on the books of the second auditor, or other proper officer, to some other person or body politic or corporate. And if the person or body politic or corporate, in whose name the said certificate shall stand, shall for valuable consideration, and bona fide, sell and deliver the said stock to any other person, body politic or corporate, accompanied by a power of attorney duly executed and authenticated, such sale and delivery shall vest in the transferree all the title of the transferrer, either in law or equity, to the said certificate; and upon the application of the attorney, and delivery of the certificate of debt therein assigned to the second auditor, or other proper officer of the commonwealth, it shall be his duty to transfer the same, and issue a new certificate or certificates therefor in the name of the transferree: Provided, however, That all payments made by the commonwealth prior to such transfer, on account of the interest on such certificate, shall discharge the commonwealth from all claim on account of the interest so paid.

7. If any person, in whose name the said stock shall stand on the books of the commonwealth, shall die without having made a sale or transfer thereof, and his executor or administrator shall produce to the second auditor, or other proper officer, the original certificate or certificates of the said stock, and duly authenticated evidence that he is, by the laws of the country in which such holder may have died, the lawful executor or administrator of such holder, the second auditor shall, on his application in person, or by power of attorney duly authenticated, transfer the said stock to the said executor or administrator, or to such person as he may direct.

8. Whenever any certificate of stock created in pursuance of the provisions of this act, or by authority of any previous act, for purposes of internal improvement, shall have been lost by the holder or holders thereof, it shall and may be lawful for the second auditor and treasurer to renew the same in the manner mentioned in this act: Provided, however, That such certificate shall not be renewed until the party applying for the same shall produce satisfactory proof of his having advertised the same for at least three months previously to his application; shall execute a bond with sufficient security, to the treasurer and his successors, conditioned to indemnify the commonwealth against any loss in consequence of the renewal of such certificate, and shall moreover file an affidavit, setting forth the time, place and circumstances of the loss aforesaid.

9. It shall be lawful for any bank incorporated in this commonwealth, through its proper officers, and by the authority, and under the direction of the said board, to act as the agent of the board of public works in negotiating, obtaining or contracting for any loan which may be so authorized, and to do all necessary acts for the transfer of the proceeds of such loan into the public treasury, in specie or other satisfactory funds, by bills of exchange or otherwise, and to make on behalf of the said board the necessary arrangements for the punctual and regular payment of the interest on such loan, according to the terms of the contract therefor.

10. And whereas, should large sums be borrowed, of which a 27 considerable part would necessarily lie idle until required for the purposes for which the loans may be respectively designed, whereby a great loss of interest would be incurred, the board of public works may deposite the same with the banks of this commonwealth, at such rate of interest as may be agreed upon by the board and said banks. The said board may also lend such part thereof to joint stock companies, as the said companies may be entitled by law to receive from them at subsequent periods, on such conditions and security as the board may deem expedient.

11. This act shall be in force from its passage.

CHAP. 86.—An ACT to provide for further subscriptions on the part of the state to the Exchange bank and Northwestern bank of Virginia.

(Passed March 19, 1839.) 52

1. Be it enacted by the general assembly, That the treasurer of this commonwealth shall be, and he is hereby required to subscribe for four thousand five hundred shares of stock in the Exchange bank of Virginia on behalf of the commonwealth, and shall pay up, at par value, the entire amount of so many shares so subscribed for, as shall be equal in number to the shares fully paid up by subscribers other than the state, and shall also pay on the residue of the additional shares so subscribed for by him, as much as may, from time to time, be paid on a like number of shares by individuals other than the state, not exceeding, however, one hundred dollars per share; and for the purpose of paying such subscription, it shall be lawful for the treasurer, from time to time, to borrow upon the credit of the state, the amount required upon each payment so to be made, and to issue a certificate or certificates of loan to the lender for the amounts so borrowed, stating therein that the commonwealth owes the principal sums specified in such certificate or certificates with legal interest payable at the treasury semi-annually, and redeemable after twenty years, in whole or in part, at the pleasure of the commonwealth. Such certificates shall be made and signed by the treasurer of the commonwealth, and countersigned by the auditor of public accounts, and shall be transferrable in his office in the manner prescribed by law, for the transfer of certificates of loan issued for the purposes of internal im- 53
provement. And the general assembly hereby pledges itself to provide adequate funds for the redemption of the principal sums hereby authorized to be borrowed, and for the payment of the interest accruing thereon, at the time it shall become due: Provided, That the commonwealth shall receive upon the stock which may be hereafter subscribed in its name, such proportion of the dividends afterwards declared, as the period of time between the subscription and the making of the dividends, shall bear to the term of six months.

2. Be it further enacted, That to enable the treasurer of the commonwealth to pay up the state's subscription to the Northwestern bank of Virginia, heretofore made, he is hereby authorized to borrow upon the credit of the state, the amount required to complete the same, and to issue a certificate or certificates of loan to the lender for the amount so borrowed, stating therein that the commonwealth owes the principal sums specified in such certificate or certificates, with legal interest, payable at the treasury of the commonwealth and redeemable after twenty years, in whole or in part, at the pleasure of the commonwealth; such certificate shall be made and signed, countersigned and transferrable in the same manner, and upon the same terms and conditions in all respects, as is herein provided for the payment of the additional stock to the Exchange bank of Virginia; and the general assembly doth hereby pledge itself to provide adequate funds for the redemption of the principal sums authorized to be borrowed by this section, and for the payment of the interest accruing thereon, at the time it shall become due.

CHAP. 17.—An ACT establishing a sinking fund and providing for the payment of the semi-annual interest on and redemption of the public debt.

Passed March 26, 1853. 29

1. Be it enacted by the general assembly, that there shall be and is hereby appropriated annually from the public treasury, commencing with the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty-three, out of the accruing revenues of the commonwealth, the sum of eight hundred and thirty-eight thousand and twenty-eight dollars and sixty-eight cents, that sum being seven per centum on eleven million nine hundred and seventy-one thousand eight hundred and thirty-eight dollars thirty cents, the ascertained debt of the commonwealth on the first day of January one thousand eight hundred and fifty-two. The sum so set apart shall be called the "Sinking Fund," and shall be applied to the payment of the interest on the state debt and the principal of such part as may be redeemable; and if no part of said debt be redeemable, then the residue of the sinking fund, after the payment of such interest, shall be invested in the bonds or certificates of the commonwealth, or of the United States, or of some of the states of the Union, and applied to the payment of said debt as it shall become redeemable.

2. Whenever after the said first day of January eighteen hundred and fifty-two, a debt shall be contracted by the commonwealth, there shall be set apart, in like manner, annually for thirty-four years, a sum exceeding by one per cent. the aggregate amount of the annual interest agreed to be paid thereon at the time of its contraction, which sum shall be part of the sinking fund, and shall be applied in the manner hereinbefore directed.

3. If at any time the legislature shall direct a sale of the stocks held by the commonwealth in internal improvement and other companies, the proceeds of such sale, if made before the payment of the public debt, shall constitute a part of the sinking fund, and be applied in like manner. The sinking fund, and its accruing interest, shall not be otherwise appropriated than is herein directed, except in time of war, insurrection and invasion.

4. It shall be the duty of the auditor of public accounts, upon the receipt of statements of the amount of the public debt hereinafter required to be furnished him by the second auditor, to pay into the treasury of the commonwealth, on or before the first day of January eighteen hundred and fifty-three, and annually thereafter, out of the accruing revenues, such portion of the sum set apart for the sinking fund provided by this act, as shall be applied to the redemption of the state debt existing on the first of January eighteen hundred and fifty-two. He shall, in like manner, pay into the treasury, to the credit of the said, fund, on or before the first day of January eighteen hundred and fifty-three, and first day of July eighteen hundred and fifty-three, and on the same days of each successive year, the amount of the semi-annual interest on said debt which shall be due and payable at each respective date.

5. It shall also be his duty, in like manner, to pay into the treasury, on or before the first day of January eighteen hundred and fifty-three, and annually for thirty-three years thereafter, out of the accruing revenues of the state, to the credit of the sinking fund, one per centum on the aggregate amount of debt contracted by the state between the first day of January eighteen hundred and fifty-two and said day; and also to pay, in like manner, one per centum annually for thirty-four years on the aggregate amount of debt which shall be contracted in each or any subsequent year. He shall pay, in like manner, into the treasury, to the credit of the said fund, on or before the first day of January and first day of July eighteen hundred and fifty-three, and on the same days in each successive year thereafter, the amount of the semi-annual interest which shall be due and payable on the aggregate amount of such additional debts at those days respectively: provided however, that the amount of the interest payable on that part of the debt created by the issue of coupon bonds, shall be set apart and paid into the treasury to the credit of said fund, thirty days in advance of the respective semi-annual periods on which it shall become due.

6. For the purpose of managing, preserving and applying the sinking fund created by this act, the auditor of public accounts, register and secretary of the commonwealth, for the time being, are hereby constituted a corporate body under the style of "The Commissioners of the Sinking Fund."

7. It shall be their duty to apply the moneys appropriated out of the said fund to the payment of the interest and redemption of the principal of the state debt at the respective periods prescribed in the fourth and fifth sections of this act for the payment of the sinking fund into the treasury by the auditor of public accounts, and to invest any part of the appropriations for the latter purpose, which cannot be so applied to the purchase of public stock, agreeably to the provisions of the second and third sections of this act.

8. The said commissioners, at their discretion, may apply that part of the sinking fund set apart for the redemption of the principal of the debt, to the payment in the first place of such bonds and certificates as the state is bound to redeem at fixed periods, provided such bonds and certificates shall be redeemable by the state before the arrival of such fixed periods.

9. All the certificates of debt which shall be redeemed under this act, shall be canceled by the second auditor, and delivered by him to the treasurer of the commonwealth at the time of payment therefor, who shall carefully preserve the same in his office.

10. At each period for the payment of the installment of interest and the redemption of any part of the principal of the debt, the said commissioners shall, by a special order entered on the minutes of their proceedings, authorize the second auditor to issue his warrants on the treasury, from time to time, to the persons entitled thereto, in the same manner as they have heretofore been paid in his office.

11. They shall cause to be published in the Enquirer and Whig of the city of Richmond, and in the Union and National Intelligencer of Washington city, a list of the bonds or certificates intended to be redeemed from time to time, at least three months previously to the time fixed upon by them for that purpose, showing the date, number and amount of each, and calling for the surrender thereof on or before a specified day, and stating that the interest thereon will cease on and after that day.

12. Any two of said commissioners may form a board for the transaction of business. They may appoint a secretary, and shall keep a correct journal of their proceedings, of which they shall make 31 a report to each regular session of the legislature. They shall hold their meetings in the second auditor's office, in which their books and papers shall be deposited for safe keeping.

13. It shall be the duty of the second auditor to prepare the necessary statements, showing the amount of the semi-annual interest payable on the public debt at each successive period, and the amount of the principal of the debt proposed to be redeemed at each or either of them, and to furnish the same to the commissioners of the sinking fund, by whom they shall, if approved, be certified to the auditor of public accounts for his government. He shall also prepare and deliver to the commissioners of the sinking fund, lists in detail of such bonds or certificates of state debt as they shall from time to time designate, for redemption, and furnish them with such other statements and information as they may at any time require of him. He shall keep the accounts of the sinking fund with the treasury in such manner as to show distinctly at all times the amount of the transactions, on account of each appropriate head of receipts and expenditures, and shall report the same to each session of the legislature.

14. All moneys belonging to the sinking fund shall be paid into the treasury on the warrant of the second auditor, and shall be paid out in like manner when authorized by the commission of said fund.

15. The treasurer shall receive and pay the moneys belonging to the sinking fund as herein required. He shall keep a distinct account of the same, and report to each session of the legislature the aggregate receipts and disbursements on account thereof up to the first of October or first of January, as the case may be, preceding each session of the legislature, and the balance remaining unexpended at such time.

16. In order to collect in one office the accounts of the debt of the commonwealth and the transaction of all business connected therewith, it is hereby provided that the existing certificates of debt of the state, registered in the office of the auditor of public accounts, and amounting to four hundred and fifty thousand one hundred and seven dollars, being part and remainder of the debt created by authority of an act to provide for the further subscriptions on the part of the state to the Exchange Bank and Northwestern Bank of Virginia, passed March the nineteenth, eighteen hundred and thirty-nine, shall, on and after the twentieth of December next, be registered and transferred to the second auditor's office, and the semi-annual interest accruing thereon shall be paid at the treasury out of the sinking fund, on his warrants, on and after the first day of January eighteen hundred and fifty-three, until the said certificates shall be redeemed. The new certificates issued on transfers of said stock shall be countersigned by him; and all other duties which are imposed on the auditor of public accounts, as well as any rights conferred in relation to said certificates of debt, shall, on and after the above day, be transferred to and devolve upon the second auditor, in whose office all the books and papers connected with said stock, which shall be necessary for the proper performance of said duties, shall be delivered to said second auditor: provided, that the amount of the semi-annual installment of interest of the first of July eighteen hundred and fifty-two, and the unclaimed interest on said debt, which shall remain due and unpaid on the first of January eighteen hundred and fifty-three, shall be set apart and paid to the persons entitled thereto by the auditor of public accounts, in the manner, and out of the appropriations made by the laws now existing, and not out of the sinking fund herein provided. t

17. The accruing interest on the six per cent. revolutionary debt of twenty-four thousand and thirty-nine dollars and seventeen cents, and the seven per cent, war debt of eighteen hundred and fourteen, of three hundred and nineteen thousand dollars, belonging to the Literary fund, shall continue to be paid, when it becomes due, as heretofore, out of the public revenue, upon the warrant of the auditor of public accounts.

18. The semi-annual installment of interest payable the first day of July eighteen hundred and fifty-two, on the aggregate internal improvement debt, registered at that date in the second auditor's office, shall be provided for and paid, as heretofore directed by 32 law, on the warrant of the second auditor, and should that be insufficient, the deficiency to be paid out of the public treasury; and any portion of the said installment or previous installments which shall remain unclaimed and unpaid on the first day of January eighteen hundred and fifty-three, shall be paid in the same manner, from time to time, as it shall be applied for.

19. The semi-annual interest becoming due at the same time, on that part of the state debt ofeighteen hundred and thirty-nine, registered in the office of the auditor of public accounts, shall, together with the unclaimed interest due thereon, be paid out of the public treasury on the warrant of said auditor: provided, that no part of the interest on the stock of either description above referred to shall be paid out of the sinking fund.

20. It shall be the duty of the Board of public works to cause to be paid into the treasury, to the credit of the commonwealth, on the first day of January and first day of July one thousand eight hundred and fifty-three, or within thirty days after such dates, and semi-annually thereafter, the net surplus revenue of the Fund for internal improvement during each half year preceding those days respectively, after deducting the fixed and incidental charges and special appropriations made by law on the revenue of said fund: provided, however, that nothing in this act is intended to discharge the said board from the obligation to pay the future semi-annual installments of the interest on the certificates of the internal improvement debt owned and held by the Literary fund, as they shall hereafter become payable on and after the said first day of January eighteen hundred and fifty-three; but said interest shall be duly paid or set apart as a charge on said revenue before such surplus shall be ascertained and paid over as herein directed.

21. This act shall be in force from and after its passage.

CHAP. VIII.

An Act to Provide for the Education of the Poor.

[Passed February 12, 1811.]

prove for the purposes hereafter mentioned. And the said commissioners, or any three of them shall have power to constitute a board for the transacting of all buisness relative to the said fund, of which board, when present, the governor shall be president, and they shall have power to appoint a clerk without their own body, and such other officers as they may deem necessary, and 9 to make such rules and regulations for the better ordering of their proceedings as to them may seem meet; Provided they be not inconsistent with the constitution and laws of this commonwealth. And the said president and directors shall report to the general assembly once in every year the state of the funds committed to their charge, with such recommendations with regard to the improvement thereof, as to them shall seem advisable.

2. And be it further enacted, That in further aid of the said fund, the said president and directors are hereby empowered to raise annually for a term of years not exceeding seven, by lottery, any sum not exceeding thirty thousand dollars. In recovering money due for tickets in said lottery, the said president and directors may have remedy by motion against the purchasers thereof, and the agents and their securities who may be appointed to sell the same: Provided moreover, that it shall be lawful for the said president and directors to conduct all the operations of such lottery in person or by commissioners or agents by them appointed for that purpose, or if it be deemed more advisable, to contract for the drawing of the said lottery, with any undertaker or undertakers for such share of the profit thereof as to them may appear reasonable, reserving to the fund which it is designed to aid, or not, at their discretion, a greater or less interest in such lottery.

3. And for the more speedy and certain collection of the literary fund throughout the commonwealth, the said president and directors are authorised and required to appoint in each county and corporation therein an attorney or agent for the collection of the funds of that county or corporation, who shall act without any fee or emolument, and whose duty it shall be to report to the president and directors, from time to time, such portion of the said fund as any officer appointed to collect the same may have collected and failed to pay into the public treasury, or such portion thereof as may be uncollected in the hands of any person, and to authorise proper actions to be instituted for the recovery thereof in the name of the said president and directors, the costs of which shall be defrayed by the said president and directors out of the literary fund: Provided, that nothing in this act shall be construed to prevent the sheriffs of the respective counties from collecting such fines and other sums of money as they are at present by law authorised and required to collect and account for.

4. And be it further enacted, That as soon as a sufficient fund shall be provided for the purpose, it shall be the duty of the directors thereof to provide a school or schools for the education of the poor in each and every county of the commonwealth.

5. And whereas by an act, entitled an act to appropriate certain escheats, penalties, confiscations and forfeitures to the encouragement of learning, it is provided, that the literary fund herein mentioned shall be appropriated to the sole benefit of schools to be kept in each and every county in this commonwealth, an object equally humane, just and necessary, involving alike the interests of humanity and the preservation of the constitution, laws and liberty of the good people of this commonwealth; the present general assembly solemnly protest against any other application of the said funds by any succeeding general assembly to any other object than the education of the poor.

6. This act shall commence and be in force from the passing thereof.

CHAP. 20—An ACT amending and reducing into one the several acts concerning the re-organization of the Lexington arsenal and the establishment therewith of a military school at Washington college.

Passed March 29, 1839.

Whereas it is represented to the general assembly, that the state arsenal situated near the town of Lexington, in the county of Rockbridge, can be advantageously converted into a public military school without endangering the public arms, or other property, thereto belonging, and without imposing any additional expense upon the commonwealth:

1. Be it therefore enacted, That the sum of six thousand dollars, be and the same is hereby appropriated annually from the public treasury for the establishment and support of a military school at the said arsenal, upon the plan hereinafter provided for, which said school shall be called the "Virginia Military Institute."

2. Be it further enacted, That the governor of this commonwealth shall annually appoint nine fit and proper persons, who, together with the adjutant general shall constitute a board of visitors for said military school, any four of whom shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of the mere ordinary business, but in making arrangements for the erection of buildings, or for material and permanent alterations of the present buildings, as well as the removal of professors from office, not less than six shall constitute a quorum. And it shall be the duty of said visitors on or before the first day of June next, and annually thereafter, at such times as they themselves shall designate, to meet at said arsenal, and there to establish and declare such regulations as they may deem necessary and proper for the organization and good government of said school. Said visitors shall have power to establish such by-laws for the management of the school, and the protection of the public property, as shall not be inconsistent with the laws of this state, or of the United States; shall appoint a treasurer, taking from him bond with ample security, made payable to the governor, and his successors in office, and conditioned for the faithful keeping and disbursement of such moneys herein appropriated, and such other moneys as shall be allowed by said visitors, from time to time, to come into his hands; they shall also examine and settle his accounts an- 18

laid before the general assembly; shall have power to appoint one or more professors qualified to give instruction in military science, and in other branches of knowledge, which they the said managers may deem essential; to fix the salaries of said professors, and to remove them for a good cause; but in every case of removal, a majority of the whole number of visitors shall concur, and shall communicate to the governor in writing, a full statement of the reasons upon which the removal was made. Besides prescribing the general terms upon which students may be admitted, the course of their instruction, the kind and duration of their service, (which duration shall not exceed five, nor be less than two years,) the said visitors are still further empowered to admit as the regular students or cadets at said military school any number of young men not fewer than twenty, nor exceeding forty, and who shall not be less than sixteen nor more than twenty-five years of age; and in this admission to be made upon undoubted evidence of fair moral character, a strict regard shall be had to the proportionate population of the four great constitutional divisions of the state, taking in the first place one from each senatorial district offering one, so that the relative claims of each one to a due participation in the benefits of said school may be secured; but in the event of any of the constitutional divisions of the state not furnishing their full proportions of students, the board of visitors after having given due notice of such deficiency, shall be and are hereby authorized to fill such vacancy or vacancies, with proper applications from any other of the constitutional divisions of the state. The students at the school thus admitted shall be formed into a military corps, and shall constitute the public guard of the arsenal aforesaid. And whenever the said visitors shall certify to the governor that the said school is ready to go into operation, and that a sufficient number of students or cadets have been admitted, to guard effectually the public arms, and other property at the said arsenal, the governor shall forthwith disband the present public guard, and order the grounds, buildings, arms and all other property belonging to said arsenal, to be surrendered to said visitors, or to any one thereof, who may have been designated by them to receive such surrender. And the said professors and military students shall be collectively and individually responsible for the safe keeping, protection and preservation of the said grounds, buildings, arms and other property, in all respects, as the commandant, other officers and public guard are now responsible.

3. Any three of the visitors may form a board for the transaction of business, and all vacancies occurring from death, removal, refusal to act or otherwise, shall be immediately communicated by the residue of said visitors to the governor, who shall forthwith proceed to supply them. All reasonable expenses incurred by said visitors in discharging the duties hereby imposed upon them, (not including however any wages or per diem compensation,) shall be allowed, and when admitted by the governor, shall by him be caused to be paid by warrant on the treasury.

4. Any commissioned officer of the militia of Virginia, may enter as a pupil the school hereby established for a period of time not exceeding ten months, and receive instruction in any- 19 or all of the departments of military science, therein taught, without being required to pay any fee or charge whatsoever, but such officer shall not be recognized as a regular student, and as such admitted to the further privileges hereafter provided for.

5. And whereas it is believed by the general assembly, that some auxiliary connexion between the arsenal hereby erected into a public school, and Washington college, which is situated in its vicinity, might be established, and in such way as to promote the purposes and benefits of instruction, in both: Be it therefore enacted, That the visitors aforesaid shall have full power to enter into any legal arrangement with the trustees of said Washington college, by which the students at the arsenal and those at the college may respectively be admitted to all the advantages and departments of instruction provided for at either place, and upon such terms as said parties shall mutually stipulate, and which terms may from time to time be varied, or may be revoked as the parties may mutually determine.

6. That it shall be lawful for the board of visitors to expend so much of the appropriation herein provided, as may be proper for the repair and erection of such buildings as may be necessary for the accommodation of officers and students of said military school. Said board of visitors shall be and are hereby authorized to contract for and have erected, at such time as they may deem proper and necessary, such additional building or buildings: Provided however, That such expenditure shall not exceed one thousand dollars annually for the first three years, and in any subsequent year shall not exceed the sum of five hundred dollars.

7. The act, entitled, "an act re-organizing the Lexington arsenal, and establishing a military school in connexion with Washington college," passed March the twenty-second, eighteen hundred and thirty-six, is hereby repealed.

8. This act shall be in force from the passing thereof.

CHAP. 15.—An ACT providing for the erection of a steward's house, and for furnishing a supply of water for the Virginia military institute.

[Passed March 6, 1840.] 26

Whereas it is represented to the general assembly, that a reorganization of the Lexington arsenal has taken place, agreeably to the provisions of the act passed March the twenty-ninth, eighteen hundred and thirty-nine, entitled "an act to reorganize the Lexington arsenal, and to establish a military school thereat," and that a military school is now in successful operation; and whereas it is represented by the board of visitors, as well as by the principal professor of the Virginia military institute, that a house for the steward and his family is greatly needed, as also a supply of good water within the enclosure of said institute:

1. Be it therefore enacted, That the sum of four thousand five hundred dollars be and is hereby appropriated out of any money in the treasury not otherwise appropriated, which sum shall be applied to the erection of a steward's house, the conveying of water by iron pipes to the institution, and to such other purposes as the board of visitors may consider necessary to its prosperity: Provided nevertheless, That the said sum of four thousand five hundred dollars shall be paid by the warrant of the first auditor on the treasury in three payments, as follows: fifteen hundred dollars in the present year, fifteen hundred dollars in the year eighteen hundred and forty-one, and fifteen hundred dollars in the year eighteen hundred and forty-two: And provided also, That no money shall be expended under this act, until a contract or contracts shall have been made to complete the several works herein provided for, so that the entire cost thereof shall not exceed the above mentioned sum.

2. This act shall be in force from the passing thereof.

CHAP. 27.—An ACT providing for the erection of a magazine and shelter for artillery at the Virginia military institute.

[Passed February 14, 1844.] 22

Whereas it is represented to the general assembly that a magazine for the safe-keeping of powder is necessary, as well to the security of the public property as to the safety of the professors and cadets of the Virginia military institute, and that a shelter for the artillery at that post is also necessary for its preservation:

1. Be it therefore enacted, That a sum not exceeding one thousand dollars shall be and is hereby appropriated for the erection of the said buildings; the work to be contracted for by the superintendent of the institute, with the sanction of the board of visitors, upon whose certificate of the execution and cost of the work, the auditor shall issue his warrant or warrants for the amount, to be paid out of any money in the treasury not otherwise appropriated.

2. This act shall be in force from the passing thereof.

CHAP. 17.—An ACT concerning the Virginia military institute, the University, and the colleges of the commonwealth.

[Passed March 7, 1848.] 18

Whereas it is represented to the general assembly by the board of visitors of the Virginia military institute, that they have been constrained to provide a residence for the additional professor authorized by the act of the last session of the general assembly; and also, that a small but convenient hospital should be erected for said institute:

1. Be it therefore enacted, That for the purpose of erecting a house for said professor, and for the purpose of erecting a hospital at said institute, the sum of four thousand five hun- 19
dred dollars be, and the same is hereby appropriated, payable out of any money in the treasury not otherwise appropriated, to the treasurer of the said institute: Provided, That the money hereby appropriated shall be so expended as to fully complete and finish the buildings hereby authorized to be erected.

* * * * *

CHAP. 19.— An ACT making an appropriation for the erection of new barracks at the Virginia military Institute.

[Passed March 8, 1850.]

Whereas it appears to the general assembly, by various reports of the board of visitors of the Virginia military institute, that the buildings occupied as quarters for the cadets are wholly inadequate in extent, are unsuitable in their construction for the purposes of a military school, are in a dilapidated and uncomfortable condition, exposing the health of the cadets and subjecting the large amount of public property in the arsenal to destruction by fire, and that improvements in regard to other buildings and to the grounds and enclosures are absolutely necessary: 17

1. Be it therefore enacted by the general assembly, That the sum of eleven thousand five hundred dollars a year for four years shall be and the same is hereby appropriated out of any money in the treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be applied to the construction of suitable buildings for quarters for the cadets and for other purposes, as specified in the report of the board of visitors of the fifteenth September, eighteen hundred and forty-nine; this appropriation to be drawn upon the order of the board of visitors from time to time, after contracts have been made and approved by the said board for the said buildings and improvements.

2. This act shall be in force from its passage.

CHAP. 20.—An ACT appropriating the public revenue for the fiscal year 1851 and 1852.

[Passed June 5, 1852.] 20

* * * military school at Lexington, for support, seven thousand, seven hundred and ten dollars; and for balance of appropriation for erection of new barracks, under the act of eleventh of March, eighteen hundred and fifty, five thousand dollars; * * *

CHAP. 34.—An ACT making provision for additional accommodation for the cadets of the Virginia military institute.

[Passed May 29, 1852.] 29

Whereas it is represented by the board of visitors of the Virginia military institute that the quarters provided in the new barracks erected under the act of March eighth, one thousand eight hundred and fifty, are insufficient to accommodate the additional state and pay cadets designed to be admitted, and an addition of funds is needed for this purpose, and also to meet the cost of the improved heating and lighting arrangements introduced by the board of visitors:

1. Be it enacted by the general assembly, That the sum of thirty thousand dollars be and the same is hereby appropriated, from any funds in the treasury not otherwise appropriated, for these purposes, and the auditor of public accounts is hereby instructed to issue his warrant for the same, upon the order of the president of the board of visitors.

2. Be it further enacted, That so much of the first section of the act, entitled "an act appropriating the public revenue," passed March seventh, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-one, as appropriates the sum of twenty-three thousand dollars to the military school at Lexington for erecting new barracks, be and the same is hereby repealed.

3. This act shall be in force from its passage.

CHAP. 42.—An ACT providing for the completion of the barracks and the erection of a mess hall at the Virginia military institute.

Passed March 1, 1854. 31

1. Be it enacted by the general assembly, that the sum of twenty thousand dollars be and the same is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the purpose of completing the barracks and erecting a mess-house at the Virginia military institute, to be paid in installments of five thousand dollars each: the first to be paid on the first day of April eighteen hunderd and fifty-four; the second, on the first day of June, eighteen hunderd and fifty-four; the third, on the first day of August eighteen hundred and fifty-four; and the fourth, on the first day of October eighteen hundred and fifty-four.

2. The expenditure of the appropriation herein authorized shall be made under the supervision of an architect to be appointed by the board of visitors.

3. This act shall be in force from its passage.

CHAP. 162.—An ACT making an appropriation to the Virginia military institute for the purpose of completing its buildings, enclosing its grounds and procuring a supply of water for said institute.

Passed March 31, 1858. 115

1. Be it enacted by the general assembly, that the sum of twenty-five thousand dollars be and is hereby appropriated to the Virginia military institute out of any money in the treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be expended as follows: Sixteen thousand dollars to meet the deficiency in the building fund and complete the barracks and mess hall; six thousand for procuring a supply of water for the institution, and three thousand for enclosing the grounds; but not more than ten thousand dollars of the appropriation herein made shall be called for in any one of the two fiscal years ending on the thirtieth of September eighteen hundred and fifty-nine.

2. Before any part of the money herein appropriated shall be expended for the objects severally specified, except the sum of ten thousand dollars to meet the present deficiency in the building fund, the board of visitors shall obtain from competent men, practically acquainted with such matters, in no wise connected with the said institution, plans and estimates of cost for each item of expenditure; and if the estimated cost shall not exceed the sums herein specified for each of the objects contemplated, and are approved by the board, the work shall be contracted for by the board, and executed under the supervision of the superintendent of the said institution: provided, that it shall be the duty of the board to contract for such work at the lowest price for plain and substantial constructions suitable to said several objects, and shall not under any circumstances exceed the amounts thereto respectively appropriated, or pledge the faith and credit of the state in any manner to pay a greater sum therefor than is herein specially provided: and provided further, that if more work is done than is contemplated by this act, or at a cost greater than that therein specified, the said superintendent alone shall be responsible therefor. 116

3. Nothing in this act is to be construed as an approval of the board of visitors in exceeding the appropriations heretofore made to the military institute; and it is the express intent and purpose of the general assembly that no contract shall be entered into for any work or object contained in this act, unless the same is strictly limited to an amount not exceeding the sums respectively designated for such work or object.

4. This act shall be in force from its passage.

CHAP. 7.—An ACT making an additional appropriation to the Virginia Military Institute.

Passed March 28, 1860.

1. Whereas it is represented to the general assembly of Virginia, by the board of visitors of the Virginia military institute, that the present buildings at the said institute are insufficient for the purposes of the school as a military organization, and that additional appropriations are absolutely required to provide additional accommodations for cadets and for the support of the school: and it appearing further, that the corps of cadets, in the course of their regular military education, may readily be employed to prepare such munitions of war as may be demanded by the wants of the state:

1. Be it enacted by the general assembly, that the sum of twenty thousand dollars be and the same is hereby appropriated from any money in the treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the erection of such additional buildings as may, in the judgment of the board of visitors, be demanded for giving effect to the purposes of this act: the same to be drawn in two annual payments—one-half in eighteen hundred and sixty, and the other half in eighteen hundred and sixty-one, upon the order of the board of visitors aforesaid.

2. The board of visitors shall admit, as state cadets, free of charge for board and tuition, not less than fifty young men, in lieu of the number now required, with the qualifications now prescribed by law, one of whom shall be selected from each of the senatorial districts as at present constituted. Whenever a vacancy has occurred, or is likely to occur, due notice of the time and place of making the appointment to supply the vacancy shall be given. If, after such notice, no suitable person shall apply from any district, the vacancy may be supplied from the state at large. And for the purpose of providing a fund for the support of the state cadets herein required to be admitted, the additional sum of five thousand seven hundred and ninety dollars is hereby appropriated annually; and the auditor of public accounts is hereby authorized and required to issue his warrant or warrants 104 on the treasury for the same, in the manner that other warrants to the said institute have been heretofore issued.

3. This act shall be in force from its passage.

Be it enacted by the general assembly that the sum of twenty-five thousand dollars be and the same is hereby appropriated to the University of Virginia, for the purpose of repairing and improving the buildings thereof, and for furnishing a supply of water for the protection and preservation of the said buildings and other valuable property of the institution.

3. This act shall be in force from its passage.

1. Be it enacted by the general assembly, That the superintendent of public buildings be and he is hereby authorized and required to contract, on behalf of the commonwealth, for such repairs to the capitol in the city of Richmond, as in the opinion of the said superintendent may be deemed necessary for the preservation and good appearance of the building, including stuccoing, plastering, carpenter's work, painting, stone masonry, and any other description of mechanical labour which may be necessary to effect that object; and to make a suitable communication between F street and the capitol square, at the northern end of the Museum, or other suitable place at or near thereto: also for such alterations in the ground floor of the building, as may be calculated to improve the condition of the public offices, and preserve the public records and papers deposited therein: and it shall be the duty of the said superintendent to cause the stoves now in the hall of the house of delegates to be removed, and to substitute therefor either suitable fire places or open stoves, to be placed in such parts of the hall as will more comfortably and effectually warm the same; and also to make such alterations in the fire-places in the senate chamber as may be necessary, or to substitute Franklin stoves therefor; also to purchase a neat and substantial chandelier for the use of said hall, and also one for the use of the senate chamber. The said superintendent shall, in such manner as the governor may direct, cause to be fitted up and put in good order a room for the office of the clerk of the senate, and also a room for the office of the clerk of the house of delegates, for the preservation of the books and papers belonging to their respective offices: Provided, however, That the expenditures for all the said repairs and improvements, shall not exceed the sum of ten thousand five hundred dollars.

2. Be it further enacted, That any contract made by the superintendent, under the authority of this act, shall be submitted to the governor and be approved by him, before any such contract shall be binding on the commonwealth, and that it shall be the duty of the said superintendent to superintend the execution of the work hereby authorized, and see that the same be faithfully performed according to contract. All accounts for the repairs and improvements hereby required to be made, shall be certified by the superintendent of public buildings and approved by the governor, whereupon they shall be paid out of the treasury on the auditor's warrant for the same.

3. This act shall be in force from and after the passage thereof.

CHAPTER 7.—An act concerning the Western Lunatic Hospital.

[Passed February 28th, 1828.] 9

Whereas, it is represented to this General Assembly, by the court of directors of the Western Lunatic Hospital, that the land purchased by them is not sufficient for the humane purposes of the institution:

1. Be it therefore enacted, That the said court of directors be, and they are hereby authorised, if they shall deem it expedient, having a due regard to economy, to procure by purchase, an additional quantity of land, adjoining the present lot, not exceeding six acres: But if they, the said president and directors of the Western Lunatic Hospital, shall be unable to procure the said quantity of land, situate as aforesaid, on terms by them deemed fair and reasonable, they may proceed to have the same condemned for the purpose aforesaid, by applying to the county court of Augusta, for a writ of ad quod damnum; having given ten days previous notice to the proprietor thereof, if he be found in the county, and if not, then to his agent, if any he hath, which court shall thereupon order their clerk to issue such writ, to be directed to the sheriff, commanding him to summon and impannel twelve fit persons, to meet upon the lands so proposed to be condemned for the use of the said Hospital, on a certain day to be named by the court, and inserted in the said writ, of which notice shall be given by the sheriff to the proprietor or his agent as before directed. If on such inquest, or other evidence, it shall appear to the court, that the valuation of the said lands, has been just and reasonable, and the location has been properly made, they shall order the same to be recorded, whereupon the said president and directors of the Western Lunatic Hospital, shall out of any funds which are or may be appropriated for the completion of the said Hospital, make payment of such assessed valuation, to the proprietor or proprietors thereof, according to the said inquest, and the land so located shall vest in the Commonwealth absolutely, for the uses and purposes aforesaid.

FAIRMONT, WEST VIRGINIA,
September 22, 1913.

My Dear Sir:

I am instructed by a sub-committee of the West Virginia commission, appointed by the Governor of that State to negotiate a settlement, in accordance with the suggestions of the Supreme Court of the United States, of the controversy between the States of Virginia and West Virginia, relative to the settlement of the Virginia debt, to say to you, and through you to the Virginia commission, that the West Virginia commission has in course of preparation a proposition to be presented to your commission at the earliest moment; but that it will yet require some three or four months time in which to put said proposition in final and intelligent form. I cordially endorse the recommendation of the sub-committee and hope it will be agreeable to your commission to consider the same favorably.

In the meantime, if your commission should desire to submit any suggestions or propositions to this commission, looking to the same end, we would gladly and without unnecessary delay, consider the same.

With great respect, I remain,

Yours, etc.,

JOHN W. MASON,
Chairman West Virginia Commission.

Judge John W. Mason,
Chairman West Virginia Debt Commission,
Fairmont, West Virginia.

My Dear Sir:

Your favor of the 22d inst., reached me this morning. Last Saturday, the 20th, the Virginia debt commission had a conference with the Attorney General of Virginia, and concluded that under present conditions the only course left open to us was to press for an order speeding the cause in the Supreme Court, of which the Attorney General of Virginia has, I presume, already notified your Attorney General.

I do not know that this would prevent further negotiations if your commission is in a position to enter into an agreement which would be effective, but no understanding having been reached after you called off our proposed meeting of August 12th, the Virginia commission did not see that there was anything left for them to do except to ask for some final adjudication of any matter which was possibly left open in the last decision of the Supreme Court.

I am sure you will pardon my adverting to the fact that more than two years and a half ago, (March 6th, 1911) the court referred the interest question and any other matter of detailed computation to the two States for their possible agreement and we promptly sent a sub-committee to your State, who returned without being able to accomplish any results.

Our commission therefore felt constrained to ask for some conclusion of the question of interest involved in the controversy and requested our Attorney General to act accordingly, though I do not know that this would preclude an agreement, if one could be arrived at in the premises.

Yours very truly,

JOHN B. MOON.

IN THE

Supreme Court of the United States

OCTOBER TERM, 1913.

No. 2, Original.

COMMONWEALTH OF VIRGINIA

vs.

THE STATE OF WEST VIRGINIA

In Equity.

BEFORE

HON. CHARLES E. LITTLEFIELD,

MASTER.

IN THE

Supreme Court of the United States

vs.
} In Equity.

NEW YORK, June 17, 1914.

APPEARANCES:

HON. JOHN G. POLLARD (Richmond, Virginia),
Attorney General of Commonwealth of Virginia.

MR. RANDOLPH HARRISON (Lynchburg, Virginia),
of counsel.

MR. WILLIAM A. ANDERSON, (Lexington, Virginia),
of counsel.

MR. JOHN B. MOON (Charlottesville, Virginia),
(Chairman of the Debt Commission for Virginia),
of counsel.

MR. HOLMES CONRAD (Washington, D. C., Winchester, Virginia), and MR. SANFORD ROBINSON (New York).
Attorneys for the Bondholders.

HON. A. A. LILLY (Charleston, West Virginia),
Attorney General for West Virginia.

MR. JOHN H. HOLT, (Huntington, West Virginia),
of counsel.

MR. CHARLES E. HOGG (Point Pleasant, West Virginia),
of counsel.

MR. R. L. GREGORY (Parkersburg, West Virginia),
of counsel.

It is understood and conceded that so far as the issues raised by the supplemental answer filed by West Virginia are concerned, that West Virginia has the burden of proof and that West Virginia opens and closes both in the taking of testimony and in the argument of the issues involved in the supplemental answer, it being also understood that this stipulation does not in any way relate to the question of interest or in any way prejudice either of the parties in relation thereto.

The Master: The understanding is, that the Master will begin the taking of testimony at Richmond, Virginia, at 10 o'clock on Monday, August 17th, at some convenient place to be selected by the counsel for Virignia, notice of which is to be given to the counsel for West Virginia ten days in advance of the hearing. The parties upon each side, subject to unavoidable circumstances and absolutely necessary delays, are to be prepared to go on and finish the taking of the testimony in a continuous hearing.

No time has been agreed upon for the argument, it being impossible at this stage of the proceeding to determine how much would reasonably be needed by the parties upon either side. The Master makes this suggestion however, that while the arguments in the other case were without limit, he will feel it necessary in this case to limit the arguments, and his tentative suggestion is that the parties had better be prepared by either two or three counsel on either side to make such argument as they think may be necessary, the specific time to be limited by arrangement after the testimony is taken; but meanwhile the attorneys who are to argue can be in condition where they can be making their tentative and preliminary preparation for argument so that when the time comes they will not need any more time after the testimony is concluded than is absolutely necessary. The time for argument will be divided equally between Virginia and the bondholders and West Virginia. So far as counsel may have occasion to cite authorities or argue authorities which might bear upon any branch of the case, either upon competency of the testimony and its admissibility and the weight to be given to it or upon the main issues of the case, I will expect the counsel upon either side to have a memorandum of all of the authorities upon which they expect to rely in argument prepared and submitted before they begin argument to the counsel on the other side and to the Master, so that the Master can have before him for his future consideration the authorities from each side upon which either party relies and that counsel upon either side will have in advance of the argument the authorities to be relied upon by the other side.

Mr. Harrison: Virginia will ask the Master to pass upon the question of West Virginia's liability for interest on the principal sum found by the Court in its opinion to be due by her, the question of interest being one of the issues distinctly raised by the supplemental answer and referred to the Master for report, and Virginia at this time desires to give notice to West Virginia to be prepared at the hearing to begin on the 17th of August to present such evidence and arguments as she may be advised to present on that question at that time.

Judge Holt: As presently advised the State of West Virginia is of the opinion that the question of interest has not been referred to the Master by the Court; but if the Master and the State of West Virginia should reach the conclusion that such question has been referred, then and in that event West Virginia will be prepared to offer any necessary evidence upon that subject at the same time she offers evidence upon the principal questions.

cussion before the Master at some time during the hearing beginning on the 17th of August; and so far as evidence relating thereto may be pertinent, the parties may be heard in relation thereto also; the object of the notice given by Virginia being, as I understand it, that West Virginia must be prepared to meet any contention that may be made by Virginia with reference to the question of interest, and will not be in a position at the hearing to ask for any delay when a question of that sort may be raised.

Judge Holt: I so understand.

The Master: While I have suggested that the proof introduced follow substantially the lines of the items mentioned in the various classes which are made an exhibit to the supplemental answer of West Virginia, it must also be understood that if there are any other issues raised by the answer that may not be included in the schedule I shall expect the parties to be prepared upon those issues also. In other words, West Virginia must be prepared not only as to the items mentioned in her schedules but as to any other items that she sets up affirmatively by way of defense in her supplemental answer, if there are any other than those mentioned in the schedules, and the parties upon both sides must of course be prepared accordingly.

Judge Holt: Meaning that we must be prepared at that time upon our whole contention?

The Master: Exactly so, yes, sir; meaning, as suggested by Mr. Holt, that West Virginia and Virginia must be prepared at that time upon their whole contention raised by their supplemental answer. It is suggested by the Master and understood by the parties that the counsel for West Virginia, as they complete their preparation, so far as it may result in computations and schedules, will so far as is possible submit the result of their work from time to time to the counsel for Virginia, and that counsel for Virginia upon the other hand so far as their preparation involves computation and schedules will reciprocate, and that in addition to this the counsel on either side will confer with each other and eliminate by agreement so far as is possible all of the items that may be involved in the controversy, the object of this suggestion being to narrow down the record and eliminate so far as possible every element of controversy.

This will terminate the hearing for this morning as far as the Master is concerned, and he wishes to say that he is very greatly obliged to all the gentlemen present for their attendance and courtesy and effort to make progress and facilitate despatch.

Adjourned to August 17, 1914, at 10 A. M., to meet at Richmond, Virginia.

IN THE

Supreme Court of the United States

vs.
THE STATE OF WEST VIRGINIA
} In Equity

RICHMOND, VIRGINIA, August 17, 1914.

APPEARANCES:

HON. JOHN G. POLLARD (Richmond, Virginia),
Attorney General of Commonwealth of Virginia.

MR. RANDOLPH HARRISON (Lynchburg, Virginia),
of counsel.

MR. WILLIAM A. ANDERSON, (Lexington, Virginia),
of counsel.

MR. JOHN B. MOON (Charlottesville, Virginia),
(Chairman of the Debt Commission for Virginia),
of counsel.

MR. HOLMES CONRAD (Washington, D. C., Winchester, Virginia), and MR. SANFORD ROBINSON (New York).
Attorneys for the Bondholders.

HON. A. A. LILLY (Charleston, West Virginia),
Attorney General for West Virginia.

MR. JOHN H. HOLT, (Huntington, West Virginia),
of counsel.

MR. CHARLES E. HOGG (Point Pleasant, West Virginia),
of counsel.

MR. R. L. GREGORY (Parkersburg, West Virginia),
of counsel.

Mr. Holt: Mr. Master, what will be our hours of meeting and adjourning?

The Master: We will suspend at one and come in at half past two, and sit until half past five, for the time being, subject of course, if counsel on either side want any change to suit their convenience we will change it.

I will state for the information of the counsel that of course the case undoubtedly will have, before we get through, more or less in the line of schedules; and I have instructed the stenographer as follows, in the first place, as the schedules come in they will be marked as usual; in this case we will mark them Plaintiff's Exhibits 1, 2, 3, etc., and Defendant's Exhibits 1, 2, 3, etc., so that they will be numerically numbered and identified as to party; and whatever is introduced as schedules, if it is an original paper and you want to leave the original paper on file of course that is agreeable to me, on the other hand if it is an original paper and you agree to take a copy that is agreeable, but they are all to be left with the stenographer. Personally, I do not intend to take charge of them. So that when we get all through I am going to depend upon him to be prepared to furnish me all of the schedules that have been introduced into this case. So you will have to look to him if you have to get a schedule after you have introduced it. If you have occasion to get any schedule you will have to go to the stenographer, and I am going to hold him responsible for the exhibits that are filed. I want to be able, when I get through, to call upon him not only for the transcript but for every exhibit and every schedule that is introduced. I shall hold him responsible for their safe care. Of course it is understood that all schedules and all exhibits are open to the inspection of everybody during the whole course of the trial.

Mr. Holt: We have done this, Mr. Master; every exhibit and schedule that we have prepared, we expect to introduce in the form on which we shall rely. We have had twenty-five blue prints thereof made, so that one may be handed to you, one to the stenographer, and one to each of these gentlemen on the other side, and have enough reserved for our own inspection; and I suppose that after we are through at least one of them will survive the wreck, so that the Master ought to have something to go by.

The Master: Of course I will have mine as I go on, but ultimately I am going to depend upon the stenographer to produce to me all schedules and exhibits actually introduced.

Mr. Holt: We will furnish the Special Master with a bound copy of them, so that there will be no trouble about their order and so on, and they will speak for whatever they may be worth.

CONWAY W. HILLMAN,

called as a witness in behalf of the defendant, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

DIRECT EXAMINATION.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Please give the stenographer your full name?

A. Conway W. Hillman.

Q. Where do you reside, what is your age, and what is your business?

A. I reside at the City of Evanston, Illinois, am 58 years old, and I am President of the Mutual Audit Company and a public accountant by profession.

Q. How long have you been a public accountant?

A. A little over eight years as a public accountant.

Q. What experience have you had as such, what is the extent and the character of that experience?

A. Since becoming a public accountant I have been employed to a very large extent on the different railroad rate cases which have been taking place over the country, with a view of a thorough audit and analysis of railway accounts and books in order to determine various costs and other points which would come up in the various cases and being in dispute. In addition to that we have conducted, that is my firm, the Mutual Audit Company, have conducted various other audits, and investigations of various characters with which I have been familiar as President of the company.

Q. In your experience, what if any connection have you had with the Minnesota rate cases?

A. I was the accountant for the State of Minnesota in the Minnesota rate case.

Q. What experience have you had, if any, in the service of other states in matters involving railroad accounts and the value of railroad stock?

A. I was accountant for the State of Alabama in their two cent passenger rate case, which also involved the commodity rates on 107 different commodities. I was accountant for the State of Florida in their three cent passenger rate case some years ago and also in several litigations that they have had since, and am now retained by them in a case which is to come before the Circuit Court concerning the freight rate cases on the L. & N. in the State of Florida. I am also employed by the State of Florida to analyze and put on file with the Railroad Commission all of the accounts of the different railroad companies which operate in and out of the State of Florida, and in that their specialty is the investigation of the capitalization of these roads and the amount of value which their stocks represent. I have served the State of North Carolina in both its two cent passenger rate cases, some six years since and in the other rate case which has just been concluded by them. I have served the State of Indiana in their express rate cases, the State of Minnesota again in their express rate cases and again in Minnesota on some railroad rate cases besides the case which is generally understood as the Minnesota rate case. I have served the State of Ohio in the Wheeling and Lake Erie Coal Rate cases. I served the State of New Jersey in their proposed but not yet carried out telephone rate cases. I have served the State of Missouri as a consulting accountant for the firm of Haskins & Sells, which had charge of their railroad rate cases. I mean by that consulting with that firm, not as their employee. I have served the State of Arkansas in the same way and with the same firm. I have served the State of Kentucky in their raidroad rate cases. I have served the States of both North and South Dakota in their various railroad rate cases and have been in consultation on a large number of cases of private individuals against railroads wherein the matters were taken up. I also served the State of West Virginia in their two cent passenger rate case, which I had overlooked in making my statement. I have also served the City of Jacksonville in the audit and systemization of their city accounts; and besides that have been engaged in a number of smaller audits and investigations of a commercial and financial character, but my principal and heavy business, as I have stated, has been in the investigation of railroad accounts and the determination of costs.

Q. Mr. Hillman, in your experience as an accountant in the way you have described, tell the Master whether or not you have had an opportunity or it has been your business to investigate from the records and activities of the various railroad companies, the question of the value of their stocks?

A. Yes, sir, it has in a number of cases.

Q. You may tell us whether or not you have examined the records of the Commonwealth of Virginia for the purpose of ascertaining the amount of cash in the hands of the Treasurer of that Commonwealth from the 1st day of January, 1861, and the distribution of such amounts if any among the various funds to which it is credited?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Mr. Harrison: Mr. Master, I think we may have it understood that any objections which we may desire to offer to the introduction of the testimony of this witness shall be understood as not waived because we do not make them as we go along, but that all rights for that purpose are reserved.

The Master: No objection to that I suppose?

Mr. Holt: I think that is entirely proper, Mr. Harrison; I think that ought to be understood.

The Master: It will be understood that the competency of any of the testimony as offered, even though the question may not be raised at the time it is introduced, will be open to the parties on either side upon final argument. I shall expect simply that either side will call my attention specifically to matters of that sort that they rely upon, in their briefs.

Mr. Harrison: Either competency or relevancy or materiality?

The Master: Certainly. The main question will be whether a certain piece of testimony is proper to be considered by me in connection with a particular proposition. That will be open from the beginning until the end, but I want counsel on either side to be very careful to call my attention specifically to what they rely upon in that regard in the briefs which they submit to me before the case is concluded.

Q. What books, Mr. Hillman, upon this question did you examine?

A. Literary Fund Ledger.

The Master: Have any of these schedules been submitted to the counsel on the other side, in accordance with the suggestion made at our preliminary hearing, Mr. Holt?

Mr. Holt: They have not, your Honor, for the simple reason, laboring under difficulties that we have had, some of these schedules were not completed until five o'clock this morning. I have not been in bed more than thirty minutes since yesterday, so we have just done the best we could.

The Master: That is a sufficient answer. The only purpose of my inquiry was that if they had been and if any large number of these were agreed upon, of course it would eliminate the necessity for examination; under the circumstances of course you have not, and you can only go on as you do.

Mr. Holt: I believe that we will get together on a good many.

The Master: Yes. We can take our time about that, but meanwhile proceed de bene.

Mr. Holt: I asked the witness a question about what books he examined, and before he had completed his reply I broke in with another question.

Q. Complete your answer if it were not finished.

A. In addition to the Literary Fund Ledger which I have just mentioned I examined the Literary Fund Journal; I examined the Board of Public Works Ledger B, which Board of Public Works Ledger, is often denominated Internal Improvement Fund Ledger, the terms seeming to be used frequently interchangeably. I examined the Commonwealth Fund Ledger that is kept in the First Auditor's office of the State of Virginia, all of the others being kept in the Second Auditor's office. I examined the Sinking Fund Ledger No. 1, and from these sources I obtained the information which is set out in the exhibit which will be filed later.

The Master: Better refer to that by number as we go along, which is a thing sometimes overlooked in the hurry of a trial. When counsel is inquiring about a paper it will be just as well to identify it so that neither of us will have any trouble in locating the testimony. I make such suggestion now, so that this will probably I suppose be Defendant's Exhibit No. 1.

Mr. Holt: I will ask a question which will absolutely identify it.

Q. What did you ascertain to be the amount of cash on hand in the Treasury of the Commonwealth of Virginia from the 1st day of January, 1861?

A. At the opening of business, January 1, 1861, the amount of cash on hand in the Treasury of the State of Virginia amounted to $1,102,036.16.

Q. What part of that did you find if any in the Literary Fund?

A. I found in the Literary Fund of State funds $23,985.18. In addition to this amount and in addition to the total amount I have mentioned, there was in the Treasury of the Literary Fund $2,890.90 of the so-called Dawson fund, which is a trust fund and not a State fund, but is in the custody of the Literary Board.

Q. What of that amount, if any part thereof, did you find in the Board of Public Works Fund?

A. $5,958.28.

Q. What in the Commonwealth Fund?

A. $252,842.67.

Q. What if any in the Sinking Fund?

A. $819,250.03.

Q. Have you prepared a schedule or tabulated statement showing the amount of cash on hand at the date named, and the distribution thereof between the various funds?

A. Yes, sir, I have prepared such a statement?

Q. How have you marked that statement?

A. Exhibit Hillman No. 1 on the upper right hand corner, and on the upper left hand corner, Class A, to identify it with the supplemental answer of the State of West Virginia in this case.

Q. Will you file this exhibit with and as a part of your testimony, marked Exhibit Hillman No. 1?

A. Yes, sir, I so file it.

The Master: Do you want to make this your first exhibit, Mr. Holt?

Mr. Holt: Yes, sir.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 1, August 17, 1914, C. B.

Q. You may state whether or not the exhibit you have filed states the book and page in each instance from which you have made up the exhibit.

A. Yes, sir, it does. Perhaps I had better further state that in the case of the Literary Fund the postings are made at intervals, and the interval at which the posting was made overlapped the date; therefore the amount would not show on the ledger, and it was necessary for me to take the receipts and disbursements for the quarter from October 1 to December 31, 1860 add them, and deduct them from the balance shown on September 30, 1860, in order to arrive at the correct balance December 31, 1860, or at the opening of business on January 1, 1861.

Q. You may state whether or not Defendant's Exhibit No. 1, so filed by you correctly states the result of your examination of the records of the Commonwealth of Virginia and truly presents the state of the cash account on the date named.

A. It is correct, and shows this account as stated on the books of the State of Virginia.

Mr. Holt: Now, your Honor, we might as well raise the question right here, in order that there may be no misunderstanding about it. Of course we can go downstairs here and bring certified copies of those books, if these gentlemen or the Master should require it; but we do not want to be put to that expense and trouble unless some point is made of it. We might not even then come under the rules of evidence, on account of there being various books, and all that sort of thing —but we wanted to have some understanding. On each of these exhibits we have given the book and the page, so that it may be easily verified, and the correctness of his result checked. But if the Master should require us now to file instead of that exhibit, or along with the exhibit, certified copies of these books, of course we will go and get them. But we deem it to be sufficient, the exhibit showing the result, and the sworn testimony of a competent accountant who has examined the books.

The Master: Unless some question is raised as to the accuracy of the result, which involves an inspection of the original books, so far as I am concerned I do not want to be bothered with the books. Of course it is going to be open to both sides to go to the original sources. My own notion is that after Mr. Hillman submits the results of his work, and while it is going on, it will probably be verified by the other side, and if there is any question about its accuracy that involves an inspection of these books, to my mind that is a matter that might involve perhaps their examination. Of course I do not imagine that the other side care anything about the books except to be satisfied that these results are accurate. Subject to that suggestion, as far as I am concerned I have no occasion to examine the books. In the first place, if you agree, that eliminates all controversy. If you do not happen to agree and there is anything about the books that will aid me in determining any controversy between you, of course I will look at the books. Will that be agreeable?

Mr. Harrison: So far as the introduction of the original source from which the exhibits are prepared, as a matter of course we reserve the right upon cross-examination to test the accuracy of the exhibits, and if it be necessary to refer to those original sources then of course we will do it. And if not we will not. There is no necessity now, as Judge Holt suggests, for them to take upon themselves the labor and trouble of introducing those original records.

The Master: Or copies of them?

Mr. Harrison: Or copies of them?

The Master: Subject, of course, to any controversy that may arise.

Mr. Holt: Then we will go to the original source, of course.

The Master: You want the question settled that there is no question raised about the accuracy.

Mr. Holt: Yes, and of course the materiality is always subject to challenge. Now, before passing to Exhibit No. 2, your Honor, I wanted to make an inquiry, and that is whether or not these gentlemen would like to cross-examine on Exhibit No. 1 now, or whether they prefer to wait until we get all of the exhibits in. It is just a question of their convenience.

The Master: What have you to say about that, Mr. Attorney General and Mr. Harrison?

Mr. Harrison: I think so far as this particular exhibit is concerned we might dispose of it by a brief cross-examination at this time, but inasmuch as other exhibits are to be introduced which may involve some consideration and conference on our part before we attempt to cross-examine, we would prefer to have the whole case put in.

The Master: That is, before you begin to cross-examine at all you would like to have the other side put in their whole case?

Mr. Harrison: Yes.

The Master: That I suppose is agreeable?

Mr. Holt: Yes, it is just a question of what they prefer.

The Master: Have it understood, Mr. Harrison, so far as you can, that when you come to cross-examine you will exhaust each class as you go on.

Mr. Harrison: We shall have that in view.

Mr. Anderson: At times there may be such connection between these exhibits that we cannot anticipate what we may desire to ask until they are all in..

Q. Mr. Hillman, have you examined the books and records of the Commonwealth of Virginia with the view of ascertaining whether or not it owned on the 1st day of January, 1861, and immediately prior thereto any stock in the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac Railroad Company and with a view of ascertaining in the event it did have such ownership, the extent thereof?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. You may state whether or not the State of Virginia owned any stock in the Railway Company on that date.

A. It owned, according to its books, 2,752 shares of the par value of $100, each, making a total par value of $275,200. This is shown on page 17, ledger B, Second Auditor's office.

Q. Second Auditor's office I suppose of the Commonwealth of Virginia?

A. Of the Commonwealth of Virginia, yes, sir.

Q. You may state whether or not the records of that State show any disposition of that stock at any time or whether or not it is still owned by the State of Virginia.

A. It is still owned by the State of Virginia.

Q. Where are the general offices of the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac Railway Company located?

A. In the First National Bank Building, City of Richmond, Virginia.

Q. Have you or have you not examined the records of that company with a view of ascertaining therefrom the book value of that stock as of the 1st day of January, 1861?

A. Yes, sir, I have examined the records of that company with a view of ascertaining the book value of the stock as of the date mentioned, January 1, 1861.

Q. What did you ascertain therefrom to be the book value of that stock on the 1st day of January, 1861, that is the value per share?

A. I found that the value on March 31, 1860, was $148.40 per share; that the value on March 31, 1861, was $150.40 per share; that there was no trial balance on these records as of date of December 31, 1860, whereby the exact value could be determined on that date; but that the stock advanced in value in twelve months two points, from $148.40 to $150.40. I have assumed that the value would grow according to the time, and that therefore three-quarters of this increment should be added to the value of March 31, 1860, in order to determine the value January 1, 1861. This brings the value to $149.90 per share, so I have called it $150. per share on this exhibit.

Q. Taking that as the actual value of the stock as of January 1, 1861, what would be the full actual value of the entire holding of the Commonwealth of Virginia in the stock of that Company on that date?

A. $412,800.

Q. What books, papers, or records of the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac Railway Company did you examine with a view of ascertaining the matters you have stated?

A. From the official credit reports of this Railroad Company on file in bound volumes in the Treasurer's office in Richmond, Virginia?

Q. Have you prepared a schedule or statement showing the result of your examination of these books?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. What have you marked it?

A. Defendant's Exhibit No. 2.

Q. Or do you call it Exhibit Hillman No. 2?

A. Exhibit Hillman No. 2 in the upper right hand corner, and in the upper left hand corner, Class B, in order to identify it with the class in the supplementary answer of West Virginia.

Q. Does that schedule or statement correctly show the actual value of the stock of that company as of the date named as appears from the books of that company?

A. Yes, sir, I should say that it did.

Q. Will you file the exhibit referred to as Defendant's Exhibit No. 2?

A. Yes, sir, I so file it.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No, 2, August 17, 1914, C. B.

Q. Will you tell the Master, please, how you arrived at the actual value per share of that stock from the books of that company as of January 1, 1861, and illustrate the thing from the exhibit you have filed if you can.

A. I have arrived at that value by dividing the outstanding capital stock into surplus as shown by the books of the company. On March 31, 1860, outstanding stock was $1,043,700.; the surplus was $505,403.22 or 48.4 per cent. of the capital stock. Therefore the stock was shown to be of a book value of $148.4.

Q. That was for what year?

A. 1860, March 31.

Q. What for 1861?

A. For the year ending March 31, 1861, there was outstanding $1,116,100. of stock. The surplus was $562,819.05, making a book value of $150.4.

Q. Did you make an examination, and if so do you show it upon this exhibit, the book value of this stock for the year 1862?

A. Yes, sir. The book value March 31, 1862, was as follows: Outstanding stock $1,142,900; surplus $656,577.85; book value $167.4.

Q. You may tell us whether or not you examined the records of this company for the purpose of determining whether or not it declared any dividends upon this stock in the year 1861 and in the years immediately preceding and the years immediately succeeding that date.

A. Yes, sir, I examined the books of the company to see whether or not dividends had been declared upon the stock.

Q. What period, Mr. Hillman, did you cover in this dividend examination, beginning with what year and ending with what year?

A. I commenced the year 1850 and ran it up to 1864, and entered it upon this exhibit.

Q. What were the dividends declared by this company on its stock in the years 1850, 1851, 1852 and 1853, what rate I mean?

A. 7 per cent. paid in cash each year.

Q. What in the years 1854 and 1855?

A. In 1854 the dividends were 7 per cent., paid 3½ per cent. in cash and 3½ per cent. in bonds, which were called dividend bonds and were afterwards redeemed, as will be shown in our subsequent schedule, at par, having in the meantime paid interest.

The Master: Interest in full?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

The Witness: In 1855 there was seven per cent. paid on this stock in bonds which were afterwards redeemed as the amount in prior years.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Well, go ahead with the dividends, please?

A. From 1855 to 1859 there were no dividends paid on the $1,000,000 common stock outstanding. They did, however, pay a dividend of seven per cent. upon the preferred stock which was outstanding, which is the amount of stock shown on this exhibit above $1,000,000. I have made a notation to that effect, but I did not carry out the amounts for the reason that the stock would be issued at different times during the year, and the computation made from that to the dividend date as to when it should be paid, and it would be a very confusing matter to follow that, when you can make the general statement and cover it by stating that on the preferred stock they treated it as an interest obligation and paid it at the rate of seven per cent. per annum. In 1859 they paid seven per cent. in bonds; in 1860 they paid seven per cent in bonds; and all of these bonds which I have mentioned were afterwards redeemed at par, and having paid interest regularly in the interim. In 1861 there was a dividend declared of three and one-half per cent. but it was not paid until 1873, and then after a law suit. This fact has been noted upon this exhibit. In 1862—

The Master:

Q. How was it paid then, interest on the dividend?

A. Paid in cash, sir.

Q. But was the principal sum paid only, or was the amount of the dividend with interest up to 1873 paid?

A. The amount of the dividend with interest and costs.

Q. Up to 1873?

A. Yes, sir. I will state from 1866—they commenced for some reason in that court business to accrue interest in 1866 instead of back as far as this date, and paid it at that date.

Q. The interest did not run clear back to 1861?

A. No.

Q. But commenced in 1866?

A. Commenced the latter part of 1865 or the first part of 1866, I am not quite sure which.

Q. And from that time on up to the termination of the litigation the interest and costs were paid in full?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. At what rate of interest?

A. Interest at 6 per cent.

The Master: Excuse me from breaking in.

Mr. Holt: I am glad you did.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Well, go ahead with the dividends, Mr. Hillman?

A. In 1862 there were 5½ per cent. dividends declared, paid in cash; in 1863 there were 26½ per cent. dividends paid in cash; in 1864 there were 13 per cent. dividends paid in cash; the whole period covered in this is fifteen years in which there were 104½ per cent. paid in dividends or almost exactly seven per cent per annum.

Q. From what period to what period?

A. From the year 1850 to 1864; both inclusive.

Mr. Holt: Now again, at this point, your Honor, it is the same question and I do not want to annoy or disturb by repetition, but in order that we may get it clearly on the record, if demanded by our friends upon the other side or by the Master particularly, if they want us to bring these annual reports of the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac Railroad, the volume and page of which is shown upon the exhibit, we will do it; but not unless requested or required.

The Master: As I understand it, there will be no occasion to do that unless the accuracy of it is challenged, and the figures will be accepted as competent proof in the absence of the original.

Q. I notice, Mr. Hillman, from your Exhibit No. 2, just filed, in ascertaining the book value of this stock you use in one column the amount of outstanding stock, in the next following column surplus, and in the third column following book value. What do you mean by surplus there?

A. I mean the amount that remains on hand of assets after deducting all liabilities outside of the capital stock, all bonds and current accounts owed are deducted from the assets which they have on hand in the way of cash, moneys invested in the loan, supplies on hand and other items of that character. In other words the differences between the assets and the liabilities are taken and divided up amongst the stockholders.

By The Master:

Q. In order to get your surplus you have also deducted your capital stock, have you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And after deducting your capital stock you have left so much surplus, is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Inadvertently I understood you to suggest that you had not deducted your capital stock, but you do have to deduct your capital stock to get your surplus?

A. You have to add to your percentage of surplus 100, which represented the stock itself.

Q. In other words, after allowing for all the indebtedness outside of the capital stock, you had on hand not only the capital stock but the surplus also, that is what you mean, is it not?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Now then, Mr. Hillman, dividends, had they or had they not been declared before you ascertained the amount of surplus? In other words from the books of this company did they affect or diminish in any way this surplus by the declaration of dividends thereout?

A. That I am unable to answer. The companies frequently pay the dividends and treat them as an outstanding obligation.

By The Master:

Q. Now you say the companies, do you mean this company?

A. The railroad companies, railroad companies as a general proposition.

Q. What about this particular company?

A. I do not know whether they had at that time declared this dividend or not; but by notation—

Q. Do not the books of the company show the date of the declaring of the dividends?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, now was that date before or after the date to which the surplus is computed?

A. I can solve that, your Honor.

The Master: That is what Mr. Holt wants.

Mr. Holt: That is the idea exactly.

The Witness: In this computation the dividend has been practically eliminated from the value of the stock as if it had already been declared, for the reason that it happened to be paid in dividend bonds which were taken up as a liability of the company, and therefore being practically deducted from the amount of the surplus.

Q. But you have quite a number of cash dividends and the real question as I understand it is, if I am right about it, whether or not after the dividend was declared there was still on hand the surplus that you have indicated on the dates you have given. Do I make that clear?

A. There would not be in the case of a cash dividend.

Q. Then was a cash dividend declared after the computation of the surplus was made, so that when the dividend was paid it would reduce the surplus to that extent, is that what you mean?

A. Yes, sir, but unfortunately the dividend dates and the fiscal year dates are not coincident.

Q. That all may be, but if the dividend date was subsequent to the date to which the surplus was computed, to ascertain the real surplus and the dividend you would have to add the dividend to the surplus?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you give us the dividends that were declared on the various dates as to which you have computed surplus?

A. Yes, sir.

The Master: You can draw that out. I would like to have the counsel feel that if I make any suggestion or inquiry, if it disturbs the progress of your case, say so, on either side.

Mr. Holt: Not a particle, your Honor; all we want is the whole truth and nothing but the truth.

The Master: If in any way any suggestion I make disturbs counsel on either side in the presentation of the case, why you need not hesitate to say so, and I will simply subside and let you work it out in your own way.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. You may state whether or not, Mr. Hillman, this surplus was made up out of an accumulation of profits out of which no dividends were declared, if you can?

A. Yes, sir, it was made up by an accumulation of profits after paying the dividends.

By The Master:

Q. Do you mean by that that this surplus, for instance, of March 31, 1859—no, I will take March 31, 1860—that the surplus was made up after the preceding dividend had been declared, or after the dividend of 1862 was declared? Do I make that clear?

A. Yes, sir, you make it clear. I have not examined to see whether or not that dividend had been taken out.

Q. That is easily ascertainable from the books, is it not?

A. Yes, sir. As a general proposition I should say that the latter dividend, the last dividend declared had not yet been taken out of that stock. I could not tell—

Q. You mean had not been taken out of the surplus?

A. Out of the surplus. I could not tell until I have looked at the date of the dividend and the date of its payment.

Q. That you can verify without any difficulty?

A. Yes, sir, without any difficulty.

The Master: I do not know whether it may be material, but if there is any question about it you ought to have the fact as it actually exists; and a little later, if there is no objection Mr. Holt, the witness may state that as part of his testimony, so as to have it all together. State it in each instance. I suppose what is true as to one instance is true of all instances.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. I will ask you to explain, Mr. Hillman, in your own way to the Master, and in general terms, how you arrived at the book value of this stock for the year 1861, January 1st?

A. I took the book value of the stock on March 31, 1860, which was 148.4. I then took the book value of the stock March 31, 1861, which was 150.4. The stock had increased in value then in this year two points, or 2 per cent., on its par. Up to December 31, 1860, nine months, or three-quarters of this year, had elapsed. I assumed that the value of the stock had progressed from month to month.

By The Master:

Q. In the same proportion?

A. In the same proportion.

The Witness: And took three-fourths of the two per cent. advance, which was 1.5 per cent., which I added to the book value of March 31, 1860, of 148.4, which gave a value on January 1, 1861, of 149.9, or as I have used it, 150.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. That is based upon book value of 1860?

A. Yes.

Q. How did you ascertain the book value of 1860?

The Master: State the factors that enter into the book value on the books of the company.

The Witness: The outstanding capital stock—

The Master: The various factors that enter into the book value.

The Witness: The outstanding capital stock on March 31, 1860, was $1,043,700. The surplus was $505,403.22. Applying the surplus to the capital stock gives us a surplus on the capital stock of 48.4 per cent., which added to its par value of 100. makes its value 148.4.

Q. Mr. Hillman, does the ascertainment of the book value of the stocks involve a comparison of the assets and liabilities of the company?

A. Yes, sir, the surplus is always the difference between assets and liabilities.

Q. Then in order to arrive at the book value of stock you institute a comparison, as I understand you, between the assets and the liabilities?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what you mean by surplus is what you have left after the assets have been applied to the liabilities?

A. Yes, sir.

The Master: Treating the capital stock as a liability?

The Witness: Yes, sir; it is what is left over.

Mr. Robinson: I suppose the Judge is talking about the book value of the assets and the book value of the liabilities?

The Master: I understand it so.

Mr. Holt: Yes. You will find in these exhibits, Mr. Robinson, that these reports of officials and boards of directors are sworn to, and they state their assets at so much, if I may be permitted to make the statement, and their liabilities at so much, and he takes those records. Now, if they have overvalued the assets or if they have underestimated the liabilities, that of course is for you gentlemen to inquire into.

The Master: If Mr. Hillman has it right handy, how would it do to insert right here in the record the list of the assets upon which this book value is predicated? If he has not it, he need not bother to do it. If it is too long, why then he need not bother, but this would be the natural place to look for it in the record.

The Witness: No, your Honor, I have not taken them off in detail for those years. It can be done, and I will agree if your Honor desires, to furnish a copy of Sheet 2 on this exhibit.

Mr. Holt: Of Exhibit No. 2.

The Witness: Of Exhibit No. 2, and it would probably be some statement of some twenty items on each side.

The Master: I would like to have that made a part of the record. I suppose the other side may have occasion to examine into that, but you may submit that as Sheet No. 2, of Exhibit No. 2.

Mr. Holt: We will do that, your Honor. I think in the exhibits to follow that all of those details, assets and liabilities, are set up in the exhibits. I do not mean in the case of this particular company.

The Master: You mean in connection with other items?

Mr. Holt: In connection with other items, yes, sir.

Q. I have but one general question to ask you on this matter, Mr. Hillman, whether or not the Exhibit No. 2 just filed by you correctly and truly represents the result of your examination of the books of this company?

A. Yes, sir, it does.

Mr. Holt: Now, your Honor, so far as we are concerned that is all I believe we care at the present time to ask about Exhibit No. 2, and we could go on except that they are blue printing the next set, and we won't have them for a few minutes, so if it is agreeable to your Honor to adjourn until the afternoon we will be ready with them then.

The Master: Then we will suspend here until two o'clock.

Mr. Holt: I think the other exhibits will be ready at that time.

Mr. Robinson: I suppose Mr. Hillman will be glad to tell Mr. Potter the pages where the dividends are found, for the purposes of cross-examination.

The Master: Yes. I do not see any objection to the accountants on either side conferring with each other as to all these details so as to facilitate the progress of the case.

At this point a recess was taken until 2 P. M.

AFTER RECESS.

Mr. Holt: Your Honor, we have one suggestion to make that we made this morning, but nothing was done with it, however. We have put in our schedule that covers Class A, that is, the cash on hand; we have put in our schedule, Class B, which is the ownership in the stock of the Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac Railroad Company, just following them along as your Honor suggested; but each one of those things is a complete item in itself; and if these gentlemen could cross-examine on schedule A when we get done with it, and lay the chief examination and cross-examination aside as a completed class, we would be very glad indeed. Likewise with Class B, when we introduce such evidence on the value of the stock embraced in that and exhibit our schedule, if they will cross-examine on that, and then lay that upon one side and have the whole evidence upon that class complete; and then go on to C and D, etc., without the necessity of coming back to all of then in the end.

The Master: Do you have any oral testimony to submit under Class A, I mean in addition to Mr. Hillman's testimony, of course?

Mr. Holt: No, we have not.

The Master: So far as you have oral testimony in the various classes, you contemplate putting it in when you reach the class, I suppose.

Mr. Holt: Yes.

The Master: That suggestion is agreeable to me; and the counsel for Virginia, of course I should be inclined to consult their convenience; but this suggestion could be made, if it is agreeable to them they could take up the cross-examination on the schedule as they go in, with the understanding that if they have any desire to resume the cross-examination that can be done at any time, or if they prefer to wait until they all go in they may take that course. I feel like consulting their convenience about it.

Mr. Harrison: As I stated this morning, if your Honor please, it would not be either convenient or satisfactory to us to attempt to cross-examine the witness or witnesses as they deal with the respective items. It is very important from our point of view that we may have the benefit of their entire case; and we are not at all sure but what the examination may be facilitated by that course rather than by attempting at once to embark upon the cross-examination of a witness in reference to an item about which he has just testified, without the opportunity to consider it, its bearing, and how far we may care to cross-examine.

The Master: I am inclined to be governed by your suggestion at present.

Mr. Harrison: And we would prefer that the case might be conducted in the manner in which it is now going on, with the assurance that we will expedite the cross-examination in every possible way.

The Master: Of course both sides understand that while generally speaking we are governed by the ordinary legal rules, these legal rules are not enforced to embarrass anybody, and at any time during the progress of the hearing it is going to be open to either side to put into the case anything that they may have omitted, even though technically speaking they may have put in the case in chief.

Mr. Harrison: I might say in respect to one of the schedules that has just been gone over in chief, that we are not in possession of some of the data that has been suggested by the examination, and we will want to look into it and inform ourselves about it.

The Master: Then, Brother Holt, we will go on as we have been going, if there is no objection.

Mr. Holt: We have put in, your Honor, Schedule No. 1, Exhibit No. 1, covering Class A; likewise Exhibit No. 2, covering Class B. Now, it is our purpose of course to come to Class C and then to Class D. But we find that the blueprints on those are not quite completed, so that with your Honor's permission we will jump to Class E with our exhibits.

The Master: That is perfectly satisfactory, Mr. Holt, and I take it, satisfactory to the other side.

Mr. Harrison: Yes.

Continuation of the direct-examination of

CONWAY W. HILLMAN.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Mr. Hillman, have you examined the records of the State of Virginia with a view of ascertaining how much stock, if any, that is the number of shares therein, that the State of Virginia owned in the Bank of Virginia, on the 1st day of January, 1861?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. How many shares of stock, as shown by the records of that state, did she own in that bank at that time?

A. 13,766 shares, at the par value of $70 per share.

Q. How many of those shares were credited to the Literary Fund?

A. 2,121 shares, par value of $148,470.

Q. I will ask you about the value later on.

A. Very well.

Q. How many shares of that number were credited to the Board of Public Works Fund?

A. 8,395 shares.

Q. How many to the Commonwealth Fund?

A. 3,250 shares.

Q. Where do you find the authority for saying that 2,121 of those shares were credited to the Literary Fund?

A. Page 13, Literary Fund ledger.

Q. Where, that 8,395 are credited to the Board of Public Works Fund?

A. Page 319, ledger B, Second Auditor's office.

Q. Where, that 3,250 shares out of that sum total were credited to the Commonwealth Fund?

A. There is no record on the Commonwealth Fund ledger on that date of these shares of stock. I would say that that ledger is exceedingly incomplete in a great many particulars, but, however, page 57, journal K-K of the Treasurer, shows the payment of dividends of 3½ per cent. declared January 1, 1861, on $227,500, and paid to that fund.

Q. How many shares would that be dividends declared on?

A. 3,250 shares.

Q. Then you infer from that, as I understand you, that 3,250 of these shares were credited to the Commonwealth Fund?

A. Yes, sir, and from the further fact that in ledgers, both prior to that and subsequent to that date, the same amount shows on the ledgers.

By the Master:

Q. You mean by that that there is an account on the ledgers that discloses that entry prior and subsequent, but does not disclose it on that date?

A. Yes, sir, that is what I mean. On the ledger which covers that period there is a blank space, evidently erased for some reason or other for that, or a blank—I will withdraw that remark "erased," because it was not erased, it was simply a blank space opposite that entry, but the dividends were drawn by this same fund on that same amount on that date, and there is no entry on the journal to show that that had been disposed of at that time and then acquired afterwards, and there is no entry to show either a disposal or an acquisition, therefore the assumption must be that it was on hand.

Q. That is the accounts in the ledger that you find show in the preceding year the entry?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And in the succeeding year a similar entry?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But in the intervening year there does not appear to be any entry?

A. Yes, sir, but a dividend paid on that date on that stock. As I said before, I would like to emphasize the fact that that ledger is quite incomplete, which prevented me from presenting a full trial balance of the books of the State of Virginia on that date.

Q. What was the par value per share of that stock of the Bank of Virginia?

A. $70.

Q. Did you undertake to ascertain the actual value of that stock per share as of January 1, 1861?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. What did you ascertain it to be as of that date?

A. $78.75 per share. I would say in that that I omitted a very minor fraction at the end of that computation and made it round figures.

The Master: Does this mean, Mr. Holt, book value or actual market value?

Mr. Holt: I mean the book value. I am going to show that in a moment.

The Master: You have a line of inquiry predicated on book value all the way along?

Mr. Holt: Yes, sir.

The Master: And this is the book value as distinguished from the actual market value?

Mr. Holt: Yes.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. You mean $78.75 per share that that was the book value per share, do you, Mr. Hillman?

A. I do, yes, sir.

Q. Was there any dividend declared on the 1st of January, 1861, on this stock?

A. Yes, sir, a dividend of $3.50 for every hundred dollars, or $2.45 for every share of stock.

By the Master:

Q. Was that a three and a half per cent. dividend?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Have you deducted that $2.45 from the book value of each share of stock?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. What does that leave you?

A. $76.30 per share.

Q. Now, what does the $76.30 represent?

A. It represents the par of the stock, plus the undivided profits.

Q. Does it or does it not represent the book value of the stock as of that date, less the dividend declared on that date?

A. It does.

Q. Why do you deduct the dividend of January 1, 1861, from the book value of the stock?

A. Because under Class D we have shown that dividend as a claim.

Q. Against the State of Virginia?

A. Against the State of Virginia.

Q. So this deduction then is made to the end that you may not make the claim a second time; is that so?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, Mr. Hillman, I wish you would explain to the Master how you arrived at the book value of $78.75 gross and $76.30 net per share, as of January 1, 1861. How do you get those figures?

A. I took the total assets of the bank as shown in the report of the officers of this bank, on page 6, document 14, of the annual report of the Auditor of the State for the year 1861, on file in the Second Auditor's office, and marked Vol. 2. From that I deducted the liabilities of the bank outside of capital stock and profit and loss. I then divided the capital stock into the balance, and found that it yielded $78.75 per share as the value.

Q. And from that you deducted the dividend as before described?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, Mr. Hillman, in ascertaining the book value in the exhibit that you will file, have you set forth the assets of the bank and the liabilities of the bank in detail?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. Whence did you derive those assets and those liabilities?

A. From the printed report of the Auditor of the State for 1861, wherein he sets forth the report of the officers of this bank, under oath, as to its condition on January 1, 1861. This is set forth on page 6, document 14, of the State Auditor's report of that date.

Q. You may now state whether or not you examined either the records of the State of Virignia or the records of the Bank of Virginia, the corporation under inquiry, with a view of ascertaining whether or not it declared any dividends in the year 1861 and prior thereto and subsequent thereto, and if so the amount of such dividends; have you made such examination?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. What records did you examine for the purpose of ascertaining the dividends declared and paid, the records of the bank or the records of the State of Virginia?

A. The records of the State of Virginia were the most convenient for me to examine and I examined them, wherein is shown the amount of stock outstanding and the percentage of the dividends which they received from the banks.

Q. What years did you cover in your examination upon the subject of dividends?

A. 7½ per cent. on the par value of the stock, or $5.25 per share.

Q. What in the year 1858?

A. 7¼ per cent. on the par value of the stock, or $5.075 per share.

Q. What in the year 1859?

A. 7¼ per cent. on the par value of the stock, or $5.075 per share.

Q. The year 1860?

A. 7¼ per cent. on the par value of the stock, or $5.075 per share.

Q. The year 1861?

Q. Have you prepared a tabulated statement or schedule showing the result of your examination of the records of Virginia and the books of this bank as you have detailed it?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. How have you marked it?

A. I have marked it Hillman Exhibit No. 5 in the upper right hand corner, and Class E in the upper left hand corner.

Q. Then it really is Class E, Hillman Exhibit No. 5, is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you now file this schedule as a part of your deposition and mark it Defendant's Exhibit 5, No. 1?

A. Yes, sir, I now so file, marking it in the way you have indicated.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 5, Sheet No. 2, August 17, 1914, C. B.

Q. Now as I understand it, Mr. Hillman, there are five banks embraced in Class E?

A. Six, sir.

Q. Six?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you have prepared a tabulated statement for each one of them?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the one you have filed as Exhibit 5, as Class E, Hillman Exhibit No. 5, Sheet No. 1?

The Master: The suggestion of the witness is that he start with the Bank of Virginia instead of the Farmers' Bank of Virginia, which chronologically is in order.

Mr. Holt: He has this sheet marked No. 1.

The Master: I would make them harmonize with the answer; arrange your numbers so as to have them in harmony with the answer, and then there will not be confusion. Put them right in so that they correspond with the answer.

Mr. Holt: This will be page 2 then instead of page 1.

The Master: Yes, that is right; then we will change that.

Q. I will ask you, Mr. Hillman, whether or not this Sheet No. 2, as corrected from Sheet No. 1, being the schedule on the Bank of Virginia, correctly represents and truly the result of your examination of the records referred to?

A. Yes, sir, it does.

The Master: When this transcribing is done, Mr. Stenographer, have Sheet No. 1 appear in its chronological order, which is coming in now; have Sheet No. 1 come in ahead of Sheet No. 2.

Q. Mr. Hillman, have you examined the records of Virginia or the books of the Farmers Bank of Virginia with the view of ascertaining the number of shares of stock therein, if any, owned by the Commonwealth of Virginia in that bank on the 1st day of January, 1861?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. What was the total number of shares of stock owned by her in that bank on that day?

A. 9,626 shares.

Q. What was the par value of a share?

A. $100.

Q. How many of those shares were to the credit of the Literary Fund?

A. 1,054.

Q. How many to the credit of the Board of Public Works Fund?

A. 3,522.

Q. And how many shares to the credit of the Commonwealth Fund?

A. 5,050.

Q. What was the total par value of those shares?

A. $962,600.

Q. Did you or did you not undertake to ascertain the book value of a share of that stock on January 1, 1861?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. What did you ascertain it to be as of that date?

A. $115.07 per share.

Q. How did your ascertain that book value?

A. By deducting from the assets of the bank its liabilities outside of its capital stock and the profit and loss, and dividing the capital stock into the result.

Q. And that gave you?

A. $115.07 as the book value of the stock on January 1, 1861, it always being understood when we say January 1, 1861, that we mean at the opening of business on that day.

Q. You may state whether or not in the exhibit you are about to file you set forth in detail the assets of the company as of that date and its liabilities from which or upon which you base this calculation?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did you get those assets and those liabilities?

A. From State document No. 14 of the annual report of the Auditor for 1861, pages 14 and 15, which reprints the statement of the officers of the bank under oath as to its condition on January 1, 1861.

Q. Was there any dividend declared on that day?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was it per share in dollars or in percentage?

A. 3½ per cent., or $3.50 per share.

Q. You may state whether or not you deducted that from the book value of $115.07 per share?

A. I did, yes, sir.

Q. What did it leave you?

A. $111.57.

Q. Why did you make that deduction for the purpose of getting the net book value of a share of stock as of that date?

A. Because we are claiming under Schedule D the cash which was received for that dividend, and therefore we cannot have it in twice.

The Master: That is and duplicate the item?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

The Master: Is that a semi-annual or an annual dividend, that 3½ per cent.?

The Witness: Semi-annual, sir.

Q. You may tell us whether or not you examined the records of Virginia or the books of the Farmers Bank of Virignia with a view of ascertaining whether or not dividends were declared on State stock from 1856 to 1863?

A. Yes, sir, I made such an examination, basing my views on the payment of dividends on certain stock, not considering it necessary to go to the bank books as they were paid dividends, the same as any other stockholder.

Q. What dividends, if any, were declared and paid upon this stock in the year 1856?

A. 8 per cent.

Q. In 1857?

A. 8 per cent.

Q. In 1858?

A. 7½ per cent.

Q. Have you prepared a schedule showing the result of your examination into this bank in accordance with your testimony just now given?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. How have you marked it or designated it?

A. In the upper right hand corner, Exhibit Hillman No. 5, Sheet No. 1; in the upper left hand corner, Class E.

Q. Will you now file the same as a part of your deposition and mark it Exhibit No. 5, Sheet No. 1.

A. Yes, sir, I now so file it.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 5, Sheet No. 1, August 17, 1914, C. B.

Q. You may state whether or not the exhibit just filed by you correctly represents the facts as taken from the records examined by you?

A. Yes, sir, it does.

Q. Did you undertake to ascertain from the books of the bank or the records of Virginia the book value of this stock on January 1, 1861?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. What, from those records and books, did you ascertain that book value to be per share?

A. $114.70, or 114.7, if you use the quotation value.

Q. How did you ascertain that book value? Explain, Mr. Hillman.

A. By deducting from the assets of the bank its liabilities, outside of its capital stock and profit and surplus liabilities, and dividing the capital stock into the remainder.

Q. Have you in the exhibit that I will presently ask you to file set forth accurately and truly and in detail the assets and the liabilities of this bank as of that date upon which you have based this calculation?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. You may state whether or not a dividend, semi-annual or otherwise, was declared upon this stock on the 1st day of January, 1861.

A. Yes, sir, there was a dividend declared then.

Q. What did that dividend amount to?

A. 3½ per cent. or $3.50 per share.

Q. You may state whether or not you deducted that from the book value of the stock of $114.70 per share.

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. What did that leave you as the net book value of the stock on the date referred to?

A. 111.2, or otherwise $111.20 per share.

Q. Why did you make this deduction?

A. For the reason that I, in a statement to be filed hereafter under Schedule D, have claimed this amount of dividend as a cash item due consideration in this period.

Q. Then as the Master puts it, you made a deduction here in order to keep from duplicating claims, is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you examine the records of Virginia or the books of this bank, either or both, for the purpose of ascertaining whether or not dividends were paid upon this stock from 1856 to 1863, inclusive?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. What dividend, if any, was declared upon the stock of the Bank of the Valley for the year 1856?

A. Ten per cent.

Q. What for the year 1857?

A. Nine per cent.

Q. 1861?

A. Six and three-quarters per cent.

Q. 1862?

A. Four per cent.

Q. 1863?

A. Four per cent.

Q. Have you prepared a schedule showing the result of your examination of these books, Mr. Hillman?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. How have you marked it?

A. I have marked it in the upper right hand corner Exhibit Hillman No. 5, Sheet No. 3, and in the upper left hand corner Class E.

Q. Will you file the same as a part of your deposition and mark it Defendant's Exhibit No. 5, Sheet No. 3?

A. Yes, sir, I file the statement so marked.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 5, Sheet No. 3, August 17, 1914, C. B.

Q. I further ask you, Mr. Hillman, whether or not this schedule truly represents the result of your examination of the books and records referred to and truly and accurately discloses the discoveries you made therein?

A. Yes, sir, it does.

Q. Have you made an examination of the records of the Commonwealth of Virginia and of the books of the Exchange Bank, either or both of them, with a view of ascertaining the number of shares, if any, of stock owned in that bank by the Commonwealth of Virginia on the 1st day of January, 1861?

A. Yes, sir, I have made such an examination.

Q. What did you find the total number of shares owned by that State at that date to be?

A. 8,755 shares.

Q. What was the par value of that stock?

A. $100.

Q. What number of shares so owned by Virginia was held to the credit of the Board of Public Works Fund?

A. $875,500.

Q. Did you undertake from the records of that State or the books of that Bank to ascertain the book value of a share of that bank's stock on the 1st day of January, 1861?

A. By deducting from the total assets of the bank all of the liabilities save the capital stock, contingent fund and profits, and dividing the capital stock into the remainder.

Q. In the exhibit that I will presently ask you to file did you set forth in detail the assets and the liabilities of that bank upon which you base that calculation?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. Where did you obtain those assets and liabilities?

A. From document No. 14, page 22, of the annual report of the Second Auditor in the State of Virginia, for the year 1861; and this record is taken from the printed report of the officers, under oath, to the State.

Q. Officers of the Bank?

A. Of the Bank, yes, sir.

Q. Was any dividend declared, Mr. Hillman, on January 1, 1861, upon this bank's stock?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was it?

A. 3½ per cent. on par, or $3.50 per share.

Q. Tell us whether or not you deducted that $3.50 per share from the book value of that stock as you ascertained it.

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. Leaving you as the net book value what, per share, of that stock on the date involved?

A. 107.4, or $107.40 per share.

Q. Why did you make that deduction?

A. For the reason that I am claiming the consideration of this dividend as a cash item under Class D.

Q. Tell us whether or not you examined the records of Virginia and the books of this bank with the view of ascertaining what dividends, if any, were paid upon this bank's stock in the years from 1856 to 1863, inclusive.

A. Yes, sir, I have made such an examination.

Q. What was the dividend declared and paid upon that stock, if any, in the year 1856?

A. Nine per cent.
Q. 1857?
A. Ten per cent.
Q. 1858?
A. Eight per cent.
Q. 1859?
A. Nine per cent.
Q. 1860?
A. Seven and a half per cent.

Q. Have you made a schedule or tabulated statement showing the result of your examination of these records, in accordance with your testimony?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How have you marked it?

A. I have marked this Exhibit Hillman No. 5, Sheet 4, in the upper right hand corner; and Class E in the upper left hand corner.

Q. Will you file the same as a part of your deposition and mark it Defendant's Exhibit No. 5, Sheet 4?

A. I now so file it, marked as you have indicated.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 5, Sheet 4, August 17, 1914, C. B.

Q. Tell us whether or not the exhibit just filed truly gives the figures representing the condition of that bank as ascertained from the records examined by you.

A. It does, yes, sir.

Q. Was the dividend declared of 3½ per cent. on January 1, 1861, upon this stock a semi-annual or an annual dividend?

A. Semi-annual.

Q. Does this exhibit indicate the book and page of the records from which you have derived these figures and these facts?

A. Yes, sir, it does in each case.

Q. The books and pages are indicated then on Sheet 4 of Exhibit 5?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you examined the records of Virginia or the books of the Northwestern Bank with a view of ascertaining the book value of the stock of that bank on the 1st day of January, 1861?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. What did you find the book value to be per share on that date?

$111.90.

Q. How many shares of that stock did you ascertain to be owned by Virginia on that date, if any?

A. 3,744 shares.

A. $418,953.60.

Q. How did you ascertain the book value?

A. By deducting from the assets of the bank all of its liabilities, save the capital stock, contingent funds and profits, and dividing into this remainder the capital stock of the bank.

Q. Does the exhibit that you will presently file set forth in detail the assets and the liabilities of that bank as of that date?

A. Yes, sir, it does.

Q. Are they correctly set forth in that exhibit as appeared from the records where you obtained them?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you examine the records of Virginia for the purpose of ascertaining whether or not any dividends were declared and paid upon that stock from 1856 down to and including the year 1863?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. What was the dividend paid then in 1856?

A. Ten per cent.

Q. What in 1857?

A. Five per cent.

Q. 1858?

A. Seven and a half per cent.

Q. 1859?

A. Eight per cent.

Q. 1860?

A. Seven and a half per cent.

Q. I find no dividend set down here for the years 1861, 1862 or 1863. What is the reason for that, Mr. Hillman?

A. The Northwestern Bank was located in the counties which afterwards became West Virginia, and there was a deal made whereby the assets of this bank were transferred to those counties, and from that date on the books of Virginia are silent as to whether or not any dividend had ever been received.

By the Master:

Q. Do the books show the transfer?

A. Yes, sir, the books show the transfer, and it is also shown in the testimony which has already been taken in this case.

Q. You mean at the former hearing?

A. Yes, sir, where the assets, stocks and so on were divided, and where I believe the Grazier Bank was afterwards set up as being the Virginia portion of this Northwestern Bank.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Have you prepared a tabulated statement or schedule showing the facts concerning which you have just testified upon the subject of this bank?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How have you marked it?

A. I marked it in the upper right hand corner Exhibit Hillman No. 5, Sheet No. 5, and in the upper left hand corner Class E.

Q. Will you file the same as part of our deposition now and mark it Defendant's Exhibit No. 5, Sheet 5?

A. I now file it as an exhibit marked as indicated.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 5, Sheet No. 5, August 17, 1914, C. B.

Q. Are the figures embraced in Exhibit No. 5, Sheet No. 5, correctly taken from the records upon which they are based?

A. Yes, sir, they are.

Q. What is the value of the Northwestern Bank stock?

A. $100 per share.

Q. And what is the book value as you ascertained the same as of January 1, 1861, by a comparison of its assets with its liabilities?

A. $111.90.

Q. I see you have marked upon this schedule net value $108.40. What is the explanation of that?

A. A dividend of 3½ per cent. being declared upon this stock January 1, 1861, has been deducted from the book value of that date, since the claim for the consideration of this dividend will be made by us later, on our examination of Class D.

Q. Was that a semi-annual dividend?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I see, Mr. Hillman, that you have a parenthetical note under the heading "The Commonwealth Fund," on Defendant's Exhibit No. 5, page 5. Please explain that.

A. On page 47, ledger from 1856 to 1861—

Q. Page 47 or 46?

A. Page 46, ledger 1856 to 1861, in the Auditor's office, shows an entry of $400,000 of this stock on the Commonwealth Fund.

By the Master:

Q. Where does it show it, on what side of the account?

A. As a debit item, and therefore as an asset. There were no subsequent entries following the original entry in 1856 on this ledger; as I have stated before, it is very incomplete; but in the Sinking Fund journal of February 27, 1857, it shows the sale of 1,082 shares of this stock, and the subsequent payment of dividends confirmed the sale of this stock, as they were paid annually on 2,918 shares. All sales of securities when they are made, even though they may be held by the Commonwealth Fund, are under the terms of the bond issue for which they were paid turned over to the Sinking Fund, so that the Sinking Fund journal is the one which shows the transaction.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Then you have taken into account—

By the Master:

Q. What is this ledger that you have been speaking of apparently posted from?

A. It is supposed to be a ledger of the First Auditor's office and is called the Commonwealth Fund ledger.

Q. Yes, but what is it posted from, from books of original entry in that office?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does the Sinking Fund constitute one of the books from which that ledger is posted?

A. No, sir. I would say with reference to that that the supporting books of this ledger, the journal, etc., are missing.

Q. You do not find them on the files?

A. No, sir; they are supposed to be in Washington, having been taken away from Richmond at the close of the war, and starting to get them further, and they were captured later on and some of them shipped back to Washington. I believe that the authorities in Virginia are on the trace of them, and I have no doubt that they will be returned to the proper place and filed. Of course that is only a side remark.

Q. You have not traced them back?

A. We think they are probably in Washington, going there in war time as trophies. Perhaps it is well to say right here that that stock of that bank was sold at a premium, which I will mention later on, bringing slightly over five per cent. on that date.

Q. That fact appears from some of the books to which you have had access?

A. Yes, sir, from the Sinking Fund, where it shows the amount of actual money received for $108,200.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Then in your Exhibit No. 5, Sheet No. 5, you do not take into account, as I understand you, the 1,082 shares of this bank stock that were sold in 1857?

A. No, sir, I do not.

The Master: That is, not in his aggregate. He accounts for them in this way, but they do not appear in his aggregate.

The Witness: I thought it best to make that notation in case it is looked up by a party not familiar with the books, so that they would have no difficulty in locating the reason.

The Master: Which explains the discrepancy that otherwise would appear?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

Q. Can you tell the Master whether or not the State of Virginia owned these 3,744 shares prior to the 1st day of January, 1861?

A. Yes, sir, they did.

The Master: Prior to and on the 1st day of January, 1861?

Mr. Holt: Yes. He has already said that the books show that they owned them on that day.

The Master: And now you are going beyond that?

Mr. Holt: Yes.

Q. What is the fact in respect to all of these bank stocks embraced in Schedule E? I mean in Class E of the answer.

A. They were all owned by the State of Virginia prior to January 1, 1861, and also, as the Master says, on that date.

Mr. Hogg: And for several years prior, if you please.

The Master: I do not understand that any of these schedules undertake to trace back the bank stock to their date of origin?

Mr. Holt: No.

The Master: But you go back to an arbitrary date which you use for the purpose of comparison?

Mr. Holt: Yes, sir.

The Witness: I would state to your Honor that if necessary that can be furnished.

Q. I will ask you how far back of 1861 you have traced their ownership to the Commonwealth of Virginia.

The Master: You mean in this instance now or in all instances?

Mr. Holt: In each one of the five banks.

A. In each instance I traced them back to their origin.

Q. Traced by you?

A. Back to the time the investment was made.

Q. And do you recall how many years before 1861 that was?

A. No, sir, I do not; I made no mental memorandum of it, but these exhibits themselves show on all that are filed that they were owned prior to 1856, since we quote the dividends from that date on.

Q. I do not recall, Mr. Hillman, whether you explained with reference to Sheet No. 5 the absence of a dividend in 1861, 1862 and 1863 on the Northwestern Bank.

The Master: No, he has not made any explanation about that so far.

Q. Please explain why you have not set down upon that schedule the dividends for 1861, 1862 and 1863, if any dividends there were.

A. This bank was located in the counties which were afterwards made into the State of West Virginia, and as such there was a settlement made between the states whereby the Northwestern Bank was cut off from its Virginia connections, and I believe the Grazier Bank of Virginia established on the Virginia part and the Northwestern Bank still continued under the same name in the West Virginia part.

The Master: What county was the Northwestern Bank in?

The Witness: It was Wheeling.

Mr. Hogg: In Ohio County.

The Master: What county is Wheeling in?

Mr. Holt: Ohio County.

The Witness: As I said a few minutes ago, that matter is taken up on the report of the testimony which has already been given in this case, showing the transfer of those securities from the territory of one state to the territory of the other.

The Master: And the books of Virginia of course show no dividends were received by Virginia after that date?

The Witness: No, sir.

The Master: That is after the date of 1860?

Mr. Holt: After 1860; seven and a half per cent. in 1861.

Q. Have we now Sheet No. 6, Mr. Hillman? Have you examined the records of Virginia and the books of the Fairmount Bank or either for the purpose of ascertaining the ownership by the State of Virginia of stock in that bank on January 1, 1861, and prior thereto.

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. What books have you examined, Mr. Hillman, upon that subject?

A. The Literary Fund ledger; page 42 shows the investment.

Q. What was the total number of shares owned by Virginia in that bank on January 1, 1861?

A. 500 shares.

Q. To the credit of what fund were they set down?

A. The Literary Fund.

Q. What was the par value of a share of that stock?

A. $100.

Q. Have you undertaken to ascertain the book value of it as of January 1, 1861?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. What did you ascertain it to be per share?

A. $106.87 per share.

Q. How did you ascertain it?

A. By deducting from the assets of the bank all of the liabilities save capital stock and surplus, and then dividing the capital stock into the remainder.

Q. Where did you get the detail of its assets and its liabilities as of that date?

A. From page 156, document 14, Auditor's Report for 1860-1861, copy of the book on file in Second Auditor's office, wherein is printed the report of the officers of the bank under oath, as to its condition.

Q. They reporting its assets and liabilities?

A. Yes, sir, as of date of January 1, 1861.

Q. Do you know when Virginia acquired this stock?

A. It was within a short time prior to 1861, I believe a little over a year.

Q. And did she still own the stock on that date?

A. Yes, sir, she did.

Q. How far after that date have you traced her ownership?

A. I have not traced her ownership after that date as yet.

By the Master:

Q. What does the book from which you got this information show as to ownership subsequent to January 1, 1861?

A. She still owned it and owned it for some time. The exact date I am not prepared yet to state.

Q. Do you mean what the books show as to the exact date of sale or transfer you are not prepared to state?

A. No, sir; I would state that to the best of my recollection and belief, I have looked over the matter but I have not burdened by memory with it, is that it went to pot in 1865.

Q. It went to what?

A. It went to pieces in 1865; I am not sure—

Q. What do you mean, the bank went to pieces?

A. Yes, sir, I am not sure whether it was included in the smash-up at the end of the war or not.

Mr. Holt: We will have exhibits tracking it by the books to 1863 at least. We will show those things by other schedules.

Mr. Anderson: The auditor transferred it to West Virginia.

The Master: I have sent on by express all my original papers in the case, and whether I put in one or two duplicate copies of my report or not I am not sure. Has anybody here an extra copy which I may use?

Mr. Robinson: You may use mine at any time.

The Master: Then that will save sending back to my office for it.

The Witness: I think you will find that that is one of the stocks which was transferred to West Virginia, and taken up in your former settlement of this matter. May I ask that my statement from memory, which I feel is wrong, that this bank is one of those that went to pieces, be stricken from the record.

The Master: Just as you fancy, so far as I am concerned. Of course you must all appreciate that a statement like that won't have any weight with me unless there is something on the record that shows a foundation for it.

The Witness: I should deem it a rather bad thing to have that go on the record.

The Master: You have no objection to that?

Mr. Holt: No, he wants to make that correction according to the fact.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Was a dividend, semi-annual or otherwise, declared upon this stock on the 1st of January, 1861, Mr. Hillman?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How much?

A. 3 per cent., or $3.00 per share.

Q. Did you deduct that from the book value as of January 1, 1861?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. What did it leave you?

A. 103.87.

Q. Why did you make the deduction?

A. For the reason that the matter of this dividend and its amount will be presented for consideration hereafter under Class D, being a cash item.

Q. Did you examine the books of this company or the records of Virginia with a view of ascertaining the declaration or payment of any dividend upon this stock?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. What dividends did you find declared and paid, if any?

A. In 1860, 4½ per cent. I have not followed the books further than that.

Q. Have you prepared a schedule or tabulated statement showing the matters that you have testified to concerning this bank stock?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. How have you marked it?

A. I have marked it in the upper right hand corner, Hillman Exhibit No. 5, Sheet No. 6; in the upper left hand corner, Class E.

Q. Will you file this exhibit as a part of your deposition and mark the same Defendant's Exhibit No. 5, Sheet 6?

A. I now file it, marked as requested.

The paper was admitted and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 5, Sheet No. 6, August 17, 1914, C. B.

Q. You may likewise tell us whether or not this exhibit truly sets forth, and accurately, the figures as derived by you from the records and books examined by you upon the subject?

A. It does.

Q. Mr. Hillman, have the blue prints of Class C come in yet?

A. Not yet.

Mr. Holt: Your Honor, they are about to complete the schedules of Class C and Class D, but we have not had an opportunity to run over them ourselves, and if you will indulge us until to-morrow morning we will run through them to-night. There are a great number of old railroads included, and it is rather an intricate matter.

Mr. Robinson: How about F and G?

Mr. Holt: We are taking those up, too.

Mr. Robinson: We would not have any objection to your going ahead with those carbon copies.

Mr. Holt: We want the witness to make such explanations as are necessary as we go along.

The Master: If there is no objection we will suspend until to-morrow morning.

Mr. Robinson: We would like to have them at the hotel to-night if possible.

The Master: Can you furnish them to Mr. Robinson?

Mr. Holt: Yes, we will do that.

The Master: Then you will hand them over to the other side so that they may examine them between now and to-morrow morning, and they may make their preparation for cross-examining on them to-morrow.

Mr. Holt: Yes.

Adjourned to August 18, 1914, at 10 A. M.

BEFORE THE MASTER.

Richmond, Va., August 18, 1914.

PRESENT: Same counsel as on yesterday.

Mr. Anderson: On behalf of the Commonwealth I desire to submit a motion, which, if granted, will greatly facilitate the hearing and decision of this case and promote, in my judgment, the ends of justice. I will read the motion:

"The plaintiff, by her counsel, moves that the Master do rule that June 20, 1863, the date of the creation of the State of West Virginia and the date as of which the court has ascertained the value of the property in the two States as a basis for the apportionment of the debt, is the date as of which the values of the alleged credits asserted in the supplemental answer of the defendant must be ascertained, should the defendant be found to be entitled to any of said alleged credits; and that the Master will exclude from consideration any evidence directed to the fixing of any other date for the ascertainment of said values."

Now, if your Honor please, I shall very briefly present, with your indulgence, the grounds on which this motion is based. And I will premise by saying that all the facts which need be considered by your Honor, or by any other tribunal in passing upon this question, are now in the record. The decision of the question does not depend upon any facts which will have to be supplied by the introduction of additional testimony in this cause. So that question, if your Honor please, is as ready for decision as it will be at the end of this investigation. Its decision now, as your Honor will observe, will save both parties the duplication of labor, the unnecessary expenditure of time and of money for the purpose of preparing this case upon two branches, when it will only be ultimately necessary that it shall be submitted upon one; and when it will certainly be decided upon that one. West Virginia dates her existence from the 20th of June, 1863. Down to that time, she constituted a corporate and integral part of the Commonwealth of Virginia. According to the principles of public law and of equity controlling such matters, not only would the debt be ascertained as of that date, but all the rights of the parties would be determined as of that date, June 20, 1863, independently of any agreement or convention between the two States.

The date as of which the amount of the debt is to be ascertained was prescribed by the convention between the States, not by the Wheeling Ordinance, although it was prescribed by the Wheeling Ordinance, but it was more effectively prescribed by the agreement of the two States,—the compact between the two States arising from the Act of the General Assembly of Virginia at Wheeling, of May 13, 1862, which gave the consent of the Commonwealth of Virginia to the formation of the State of West Virginia out of her territory. In accordance with the provisions of the Constitution adopted for the State of West Virginia by the convention which met on the 30th of November, 1861, at Wheeling and framed a Constitution for the new State.

The Eighth Section, refreshing your Honor's recollection about some matters of detail which perhaps may have escaped you, the Eighth Section of the Eighth Article of that Constitution provides that the new State shall assume an equitable portion of the debt of the Commonwealth of Virginia existing prior to January 1, 1861.

Now but for that stipulation, West Virginia would have been bound, under public law and by analogy, to principles established in respect to partnerships and other cases of the ownership of property in common would have been bound for her equitable portion of the debt existing on the 20th of June, 1863. It so happens, and is a part of the history of this case and of this subject, that West Virginia practically controlled the whole matter. West Virginians constituted the Restored Government of Virginia at Wheeling, which gave this consent, and they also constituted the convention which framed the Constitution for the new State. It chose then to incorporate into that Constitution this provision, which was afterwards accepted by Virginia by her Act of Assembly of May 13, 1862, granting her consent to the formation of the new State upon the stipulation that West Virginia's liability for any portion of this debt should be limited to such debt as existed on the 31st of December, 1860.

It is proper that I should say that there was some reason, from the standpoint of the then citizens of Virginia living in northwestern Virginia, and who moved in the creation of the new State, for limiting this liability to some date prior to June 20, 1863. The 17th of April, the date of the adoption of the Ordinance of Secession by Virginia, might not have been an arbitrary date. The 11th of June, 1861, would not have been perhaps an arbitrary date, as that was the date on which the revolutionary convention which met in Wheeling created the restored government of Virginia and repudiated the Confederate Government of Virginia by the ordinance adopted on that day. But the 1st day of January was adopted in the interest of West Virginia, the great object being doubtless to avoid West Virginia's being shouldered with any portion of any liability created by the government of Virginia at Richmond, after the representatives from northwestern Virginia had withdrawn from the Legislature of Virginia and from the Virginia Convention, then in session.

Whether it was justifiable or not, that stipulation was made between the two States, and West Virginia's liability, so far as the amount of the debt is concerned, was determined as of the 31st of December, 1860. The fact is that a very large sum was added to the public debt of Virginia after the 31st of December, 1860, which had not been brought into this account, and could not be under the circumstances. Large expenditures were made on the Covington & Ohio road and large expenditures on other works of internal improvement, under contracts made before January 1, 1861, but which had not become ascertained or liquidated liabilities of the State until after that date. The Board of Public Works issued and sold, as they were authorized by law to do, bonds for large amounts, after that date, which equitably and justly are binding upon West Virginia, independently of the provisions of the Constitution of that State, as any other portion of the debt. Relief from liability on account of this indebtedness was thus contracted for by West Virginia and as a consideration therefor she agreed to assume an equitable portion of the debt existing prior to January 1, 1861.

If your Honor please, I am unable to discover any ground upon which the proposition I lay down can be questioned. As a matter of public law and of right, all the rights of the two States and the liabilities of the two States, independently of agreement, were absolutely determined as of the 20th of June, 1863. It follows that this is the date of which the values of any credits and any charges against the State of Virginia shall be determined. West Virginia will base her contention that this date should be fixed or may be fixed as to the value of these assets on the 1st day of January, 1861, or at some other time, because they strangely contend in this case, as is shown by their answer, that Virginia held all these assets in trust, as I understand that answer, for West Virginia, or in trust for her creditors, and that West Virginia has a right to demand that Virginia shall perform that trust, and that therefore Virginia must account for whatever could be fairly and for whatever has been realized from the sale of these assets. Their answer and their contentions as exhibited so far in this case do not seem to be consistent. They sometimes rely upon the view that Virginia is a trustee and as such must account for the fair value of these securities. Then in other parts of their answer they contend that Virginia shall account for whatever she received and realized, no matter when, from these assets. All of these contentions are based upon the provisions of the Constitution of Virginia of 1851 and the Act of Assembly of Virginia of 1853 in regard to the public debt. These provisions of the Constitution are found in the Supplement of the Record, which contains nearly all of the acts of either State germane to the Virginia or West Virginia debt. At page 200 of that volume will be found the extract from the Constitution and also the Act of 1853. I will not tire your Honor by reading them. The Constitution is simply a provision for Virginia's own government, an entirely voluntary arrangement on her part, creating neither a contractual nor a fiduciary obligation upon her, by which for her own convenience in dealing with this debt she provides that there shall be a sinking fund created; that the Legislature shall set apart seven per cent. upon the amount of any debt created, one per cent. of which shall be used for the purpose of the extinguishment of the principal and six per cent. of which shall go to pay the interest; and the Act of 1853, beginning on the same page, merely carries out that provision of the Constitution, and accordingly makes a continual appropriation for that purpose.

Now, they have both been repealed by Virginia. The constitutional provision was repealed by the Constitution of 1864 and again by the Constitution of 1869 of Virginia, these repeals being entirely within the competency of the Commonwealth, and not violative of anybody's rights. But West Virginia had no interest in that. If any trust had been created it would have been for the benefit of the creditors, but the creditors derived no rights from that—

The Master: The bondholders.

Mr. Anderson: The bondholders— Their rights had been determined by their bonds. At pages from 220 to 229, and I believe to 285 of the record your Honor has already been informed as to what the provisions and stipulations of those bonds were. None of them relate to the Constitutional provisions of 1851 or to the legislative enactments of 1853. Those loans were made entirely upon the credit of Virginia, upon her promise that the bonds, the interest and principal of those bonds, should be paid in accordance with the terms of those contracts; but no collateral was put up or agreed to be put up by her; no security except her own word was given to the creditors, nor was any security demanded by the creditors.

Her credit at that time stood as high as that of any State in the Union. Here is one of those bonds, page 285,—they always recited the acts under which they were issued. This was called old "Virginia stock," but it was really the obligation of the State for the payment of money, not for the payment of dividends; it was called "stock" just as English consols were called and are still called "stock."

"Be It Known, That there is due from the Commonwealth of Virginia, unto heirs, executors, administrators or assigns, the sum of Dollars, bearing interest at six per centum per annum, from the first day of 18 , payable at the Treasury of the Commonwealth aforesaid, on the first day of January and July of each year; being stock issued in pursuance of an Act of the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Virginia, passed on the 23rd of March, 1860, entitled 'An Act to amend the Charter of the James River and Kanawha Company,' the principal whereof is irredeemable for thirty-four years from the first day of January, 1860, and then to be redeemed.

"This Certificate is transferable on the books of the Second Auditor, by appearance in person or by Attorney.

"Witness the hand of the Treasurer, the day and year above written."

That is mutatis mutandis a copy of each one of the bonds issued by Virginia. None of them relates to this legislation. The claim of West Virginia seems to be that Virginia is bound here as trustee in a fiduciary relation to set apart these assets and appropriate them so as to provide for the payment of its debt and for the exoneration of West Virginia.

It seems to me that this question has been practically settled by the tribunal which has already given its decision in this case. In ascertaining the liability of West Virginia that court took the taxable resources of the two States, the assessed values of the two States, as modified by the testimony. The court had to adopt a date as of which those values could be ascertained, and acting in accordance with the settled principles which I have endeavored to present to your Honor. That court adopted the 20th of June, 1863, as the date—which is indeed the only date that could be considered for the determination and apportioning of the taxable property in the two States. Every consideration, every argument which can be adduced in favor of that ruling of the court applies with emphasis to the question to which I am endeavoring to direct your Honor's attention. Now, if that is the date, as is demonstrable to be the case—why should we take up the time of this Commission and of counsel in all these elaborate schedules and proofs as to the values of these properties on the 1st day of January, 1861? It may be that your Honor, under the decree of the court, would feel that it was proper for you, as I think was your ruling on the former hearing, to allow evidence of this kind to come in "de bene" and its competency ultimately to be passed upon by you, or else the question to be referred to the court; but, sir, conditions presented here are such that great inconvenience and great cost will be imposed upon the parties and upon your Honor and upon the court, if this record is loaded down with proofs as to the value of these assets in 1861 and then as to their values in 1863, when the latter date is the only date to be considered. If January, 1861, is the proper date, it would be a mistake for your Honor to waste your time and subject the parties here to the cost and expense and delay of hearing this case upon the question of the value of these assets in 1863. I recognize, if your Honor please, that there may be some connection, though very remote, as I think will appear from a brief consideration, between the value of these properties on the 1st of January, 1861, and on June 20, 1863; and if that was the purpose for which this testimony was introduced, that is, to cast light upon values in 1863, my objection would go to its weight rather than to its competency; but that is not the purpose. The purpose is avowed and shown here. They introduce their evidence here for the purpose of fixing the first day of January, 1861, as the date as of which the values shall be ascertained, and not for the purpose of proving or introducing evidence to prove, the values of these properties at any other date than January 1, 1861, because of the light that those facts might throw on their value in 1863. For that purpose other dates would be as competent and as effective as the 1st of January, 1861, and many dates that I could conceive of would be far more pertinent. It would be difficult to fix these values in June, 1863, as it would be exceedingly difficult to fix them in 1861, but it can be done. Most of these securities, we think, had no appreciable value then, and that can be shown; but what have the conditions on January 1, 1861, to do with that question? When your Honor comes to pass upon the question of the value of these properties in 1863 it will be necessary for you to place yourself as far as possible in the environment which surrounded Virginia and the atmosphere which enveloped Virginia in June, 1863.

The conditions which existed on the 1st of January, 1861, have no bearing whatever upon the conditions in June, 1863.

If your Honor please, it will save time and expedite and facilitate the decision of this matter, now to adopt the ruling which we suggest. We hope your Honor will see your way clear to grant the motion. I do not hesitate to say that it will be in the interest of justice, of economy, time and effort, and money, that your Honor should consider this case upon that one of these branches which your judgment may determine and make your report to the Court accordingly.

If the other side are not satisfied with the dates fixed by your Honor, they may present their objections to the court and have the question decided. They may have to come back to fix the value as of the date of 1861, if the court should sustain that view. If the evidence is to be introduced both as to the value of 1861 and 1863, I am afraid we will be here for a long time after the second Monday in October, if this case is to be fully and fairly presented on both sides.

Mr. Conrad: If your Honor please, as West Virginia should have a full opportunity of replying to every ground that is urged in support of this motion, I would ask your Honor to hear my associate Mr. Robinson, upon an additional ground, which is that the court has already decided that very identical question. You will find from the record that West Virginia made a motion to change an order of reference from 1863 to 1861, and presented an argument in support of its motion, and the court overruled the motion and held to 1863.

Will your Honor hear Mr. Robinson?

The Master: Mr. Robinson.

Mr. Robinson: If your Honor please, we do not admit at all that any of these credits could possibly act as a set-off and reduce the amount. We will address ourselves to that when the point arises. But I wish to call your attention to Chief Justice White's opinion—

The Master: Which opinion is that?

Mr. Robinson: The last one.

The Master: The very last?

Mr. Robinson: Yes.

The Master: The one referring the case back to me?

Mr. Robinson: Yes, at the bottom of page 2.

But leaving that consideration out for a moment, I should like to call your attention to a motion made by West Virginia in 1907, after the first decree was entered. That was the motion which modified the decree of reference. Paragraph 5 of the decree before you reads, "and also on the basis of the fair estimated valuation of the property, real and personal, by counties of the State of Virginia," which was taken June 20, 1863. West Virginia sought to add to that paragraph the words, "during the same period," referring back to 1861. The court denied that motion. They also sought to modify paragraph 6, and the court denied that motion. West Virginia made a request for five changes in the decree. One request was granted, the word "assessed" was inserted between "and" and "valuation" in the second paragraph of the decree. But all the requests of West Virginia to change the date from 1863 to 1861 were denied. The wealth of the two States upon which this debt has been so far apportioned, has been taken as of June 20, 1863. I take it that this very point has been passed upon by the court absolutely.

The Master: I have not got my copy of that compilation. Has anybody a duplicate copy so that I may have it in my hand?

Mr. Robinson: Yes.

Mr. Holt: Your Honor, of course it has been perfectly apparent from the very beginning, when this cause was opened up and we should come before the Master for the purpose of investigating the value of the securities claimed here as set-offs against the amount of principal found against the State of West Virginia, that West Virginia would contend that the value of those assets should be ascertained as of the 1st day of January, 1861. And it was equally apparent from the beginning, in the absence of any motions or indication even from the other side, that the Commonwealth of Virginia would contend upon the other hand that their value should be ascertained as of the 20th of June, 1863, or some later date.

Of course, our contention is, and this testimony is introduced for the purpose of showing the actual value of the stocks here involved as of January 1, 1861; something that Virginia supposed, on account of the passage of time, we might be unable to do. But this value we expect to demonstrate from the records of these books as of that date before we quit, if permitted by your Honor so to do.

Now we seriously considered making a motion in the beginning, just as my learned friend has. But our motion was the direct opposite of the one made by Virginia, namely, that the Master should, upon the very threshold of this investigation, determine that January 1, 1861, was the date of these values, and not June 20, 1863, as embodied in the present motion.

We did not do that, for the simple reason that we supposed your Honor would hear the testimony upon both dates, and that you would then be in a better situation to determine which date in law should govern. In consequence of that feeling and disposition, we did not make our motion, but proceeded at once to introduce testimony upon values as of January 1, 1861, not expecting to stop there, but to introduce corresponding schedules subsequently for the purpose of demonstrating to your Honor the value of these same securities, upon the other date, namely, the 20th of June, 1863. And then the question would come for your Honor to determine which was the proper date.

I will grant my learned friend that if you could at this time fix definitely and certainly upon the one date or the other, that that would eliminate perhaps about one-half of the testimony from this controversy at the present time. But suppose your Honor should fix the one date or the other, and the testimony should stop at that point, we might have to come back here and try it all over again, because the court might disagree with us and your Honor and instead of reaching the conclusion that you had reached that January 1, 1861, was the proper date should determine that June 20th was the proper date. It looks to me that taking any other course than that which has been proposed by the defendant here, would be making unnecessarily two bites of one cherry. However, if your Honor believes that that question should be settled at this time, and this date should be fixed at this time, and that the evidence should be confined to the date determined, we would be very glad indeed, but would want to indulge in a pretty full argument upon January 1, 1861, before we finally submitted the matter to your Honor.

We have just as strong convictions that January 1, 1861, is the proper date as my friend has that June 20, 1863, is. In fact, briefly and simply by way of introduction at this time, we cannot see how it is possible to take a liability as of one date and an asset as at another date. No concern, partnership, joint tenancy or anything else was ever settled upon any such basis as that. To illustrate, if you had a partnership that was dissolved, the first thing that would be done would be to gather in the assets, to ascertain the liabilities, carrying the two along together as of the same date and time, and after you had deducted the liabilities from the assets, if there was any surplus left it would be divided between the partners of course in proportion to their respective interests in the partnership. If, upon the other hand, the liabilities out-measured the assets after the assets had been applied to the liabilities and a balance of indebtedness should be the result, that would be contributed to by the respective partners in proportion to their respective interests in the firm. Or if, upon the other hand, you are not going to have a voluntary dissolution, but an involuntary one, and wind up your partnership by a bill in equity and consequent receivership and dissolution, the court in that instance would carry the liabilities and the assets right along together, treat them together as of the same time and place, and make the adjustment then and there.

Now let us apply that analogy to the situation between Virginia and West Virginia. Our constitutional contract or constitutional promise, section 8 of Article VIII of the West Virginia Constitution of 1861, promised to pay an equitable proportion of the Virginia debt existing prior to the 1st day of January, 1861. Any debt that might have existed but that had been paid prior to that date could not be considered. Any debt that might have been subsequently contracted by the Commonwealth of Virginia could not be considered. But you must, under that contract and constitutional promise, take the 31st day of December, 1860, as the time when the entire debt of the Commonwealth is to be determined, before you can equitably apportion it between the two sections.

Now I take it that if on that day and date the sum total of the indebtedness of the Commonwealth was thirty millions of dollars, by way of illustration, that being the amount of the common debt, and on that day and date there were twenty millions of common assets, you would, sir, of necessity, when you talk about equitable apportionment, deduct the twenty millions of assets from the thirty millions of liabilities; and then you will apportion your remaining ten millions between the two parties litigant according to the equities of the case.

It may be that this was not done by the Supreme Court when they ascertained the total indebtedness on January 1st, 1861, at thirty millions of dollars, and make the deduction at that time; they did not do it, and that is the reason that we are here now. We are not here without the authoriy of law or the decree of this court. We are here in the name and under the mandate of this court, directed to your Honor as its Special Master. It would not be safe to take the matters that have been discussed and ascertained by that court upon a former hearing as being final, in the face of a re-opened case, sent to you upon a rehearing.

Why, the whole complaint of the answer that we moved that honorable court to permit us to file, the supplemental answer, was that they ascertained a total indebtedness against the Commonwealth on December 31, 1860, of thirty millions in round numbers, and apportioned unto West Virginia, as her equitable part thereof to be paid 23½ per cent., and unto Virginia 76½ per cent. But that they had not given West Virginia the benefit of assets which at that very day and date she had the same per cent. of interest in that she had per cent. of liability in the debt. It is just as deep seated equity, we say, that we shall get our per cent., and the same per cent. of the assets, as that we shall pay a fixed per cent. of the liabilities.

Why, before we get through with this hearing I believe it will appear that this very bonded indebtedness was incurred in the purchase of these very assets, 23½ per cent. of which we claim.

Now, then, how is it possible, and would it be fair? Here is a Commonwealth that is about to split in two. It has a common debt that must be paid in proper proportion by the two debtor populations that are to constitute the new states. At the same time it has a whole lot of common funds upon hand and valuable common property. Would it be fair to sit down and say, We will ascertain the debt of January 1, 1861, and apportion it between you two debtor populations regardless of the funds on hand, regardless of securities and property that are applicable to the reduction of that debt? Now, you must find it as of that date. It would be unfair both to the Commonwealth of Virginia and to the State of West Virginia, to take the debt as of one date and the assets as of a subsequent date. And why? They were all left in the possession of the Commonwealth of Virginia, and she might through her management of them increase them to such an extent in the course of time as that West Virginia's equitable proportion therein, might, through the good management of Virginia, inequitably minimize her proportion of the debt theretofore ascertained.

Or, upon the other hand, she having taken and kept possession of these securities, by her management of them might so depreciate and destroy them as that West Virginia's part therein would be worth nothing, although the whole of her proportion of the debt, ascertained at a preceding date, would be still in existence and undiminished.

Why, we have a case at bar. Take the bank stocks. On the 1st day of January, 1861, our part of the debt was seven millions and something. At that very time there were millions of dollars worth of bank stocks, of an actual value as of that date above par—millions of them. Well now, then is the time when you ascertain the debt, to deduct the credit or file the off-set. It is true it was not done in the first instance, but we are back here for that purpose now. Because, if you do not, if you postpone the ascertainment of our equity in those bank stocks until 1863 or 1865, they have depreciated and in many instances have become worthless. But that is just the illustration of one side of it. If upon the other hand Virginia's management of them has so greatly increased them in value at this subsequent date, let her get the benefit of it. But if they have become depreciated, if the live stock on hand, by way of illustration, has died and become lost, it is not fair to reach out into the future for the purpose of applying an off-set or a credit, the value of which was susceptible of ascertainment upon the same date that the debt was ascertained.

It seems to me, your Honor, that as a matter of practice you are bound to carry the debt and the assets on hand at the same time, hand in hand. You really cannot find the amount of the liabilities without ascertaining the amount of the assets, and whenever you do ascertain the debt, upon the same date necessarily must you ascertain and apply the assets. Now the only reason it was not done before was because that phase of the case was not presented at that time. But that does not mean to say that we are foreclosed. Because if we had been foreclosed by the position of the court upon that proposition we would not be back here. But they have recognized our right to present that very question; and we are here for that purpose. Of course they ascertained that we owed $7,182,000, it appearing that there were no securities on hand of value. We came in with the supplemental answer, saying that there were, and we wanted our per cent. of their value as of that date, to be applied to our proportion of the liabilities as then ascertained. It looks to me, your Honor, as if upon principle and equity that you could not ascertain the value of these securities as of any other date than as of the date when the liability is inquired into and fixed. The balance must be struck at that time. To let Virginia fasten on us 23½ per cent. of the liability as of January 1, 1861, and carry the ascertainment of the assets into the future and to such another date as that they have been destroyed, you thereby defeat our right to participate therein, because we will never enjoy any participation therein except as they may be applied to the reduction and discharge or diminution of this debt, to the payment of which we must contribute.

Now we were prepared—are prepared I think—to give the valuation of these stocks upon both dates; and we did not feel that we ought to come back here, if perchance through a mistake some date should be fixed, upon which we had taken no evidence at all. But if your Honor thinks that the date should be fixed in advance, then we must insist, not that my friend's motion shall prevail but that its opposite should be entered as your finding and conclusion.

Mr. Hogg: If the Master please, the motion submitted by General Anderson, it seems to me, at least, contemplates action on the part of the Master which possibly should be left to the ultimate adjudication of the Court.

The Court, in referring this case to the Master, prescribed the limits of the inquiry. And your Honor will notice that the conclusion of the opinion provides:

"That the subject-matter of the supplemental answer as traversed be at once referred for consideration and report to Charles E. Littlefield, Esq., the Master before whom the previous hearings were had, with directions to hear and consider such evidence and testimony as to the matters set forth in the supplemental answer as the State of West Virginia may deem advisable to proffer, and such counter showing on the part of the State of Virginia as that State may deem advisable to make. The report on the subject to embrace the testimony so taken and the conclusions deduced therefrom, as well as the views of the Master concerning the operation and effect of the proof thus offered, if any, upon the principal sum found to be due by the previous decree of this Court. Nothing in this order to vacate or change in any manner or in any particular the previous decree, and the same to stand wholly unaffected by the order now made or any action taken thereunder until the examination and report herein provided for is made and this Court acts upon the same."

It seems to me that in framing the reference and empowering the Master to act in the manner indicated by the decree the object was to give the parties full opportunity to present every question which could possibly arise, and to do that all proper evidence will be necessarily introduced. Now, for instance, the debt that Virginia owed was held by the creditors. The amount of the debt so far as the burden of discharging it was concerned would represent the difference between the available resources of the State properly applicable to the discharge of the debt and the debt itself, the difference between the two. We will be able to present to the Master the action of the executive officers of Virginia every time it became necessary to present the amount of this indebtedness in order to ascertain what the sinking fund would amount to. The debt was increasing from year to year, beginning with 1852. From 1822 down to 1852 the debt was about eleven millions of dollars. From 1851 or 1852 down to 1861 the residue of the debt created was about $22,000,000. At that time a spirit of activity characterized the people of Virginia along the line of internal improvements. In order to carry out the enterprises that they conceived at that time it became necessary of course to increase the debt. In order to satisfy the people, the sinking fund was provided for by the Constitution of 1851, carried into effect by an act of the Legislature of 1853. Now, from that time on the assets were itemized and by the Second Auditor of the State of Virginia presented to the public, showing that they were available for the discharge of that debt, although the debt was increased from year to year, so that, when 1861 came, these resources were almost as large as the debt itself. When the State of West Virginia put into her Constitution that she would assume an equitable proportion of that debt, she knew just as well as any of the people of Virginia now know that those resources were applicable to the discharge of that debt; she also knew that the burden would be comparatively light, either to herself or to Virginia. That Constitution was adopted in 1861 and ratified by Virginia in May, 1862. Now then, later in 1863 these assets were in existence, and we will be able to show to the Master that they were then estimated in the market to be worth practically the amount of the debt, not in Confederate currency, not in depreciated currency, because at that time there was no market for such stocks as we are now investigating the value of within the Confederate limits. If these bank stocks were sold, if these railroad stocks were sold, if those various other securities were marketed, they had to be marketed outside of the Confederacy, and in 1863 they could have been marketed for a sum almost equal to the amount. We will also be able to show, if the Master please, that there were no expenditures made upon any of these improvements in which these stocks were held from 1861, practically no improvements thereafter; in other words, that the investments had been completed. The expenditures were all made prior to January 1, 1861, so that thereafter Virginia did not take upon herself any additional burden for the purpose of increasing the value of these stocks or adding to their marketability, but they stood in statu quo from that time on.

The Master: That is, your contention is that they had already been credited?

Mr. Hogg: That they had already been credited; in other words, just the same as if they had been credited and that they stood there in parallel columns, the debt on one side and the assets on the other, and that the Auditor of State in keeping an account of these resources, and an account of the debt, carried them along together and reported them to the people of the State of Virginia, so that they when they were voting upon themselves a sinking fund knew that it would only be a period of a very short time when it would be dispensed with because the necessity for it would no longer exist. Now, West Virginia knew that Virginia knew this, and she very cheerfully put into her Constitution that she would assume an equitable proportion of the debt. Virginia ratified that Constitution and it went to the Congress of the United States with those provisions in it, and the representatives of the restored government of Virginia in Congress and the people of West Virginia who were advocating and supporting that Constitution knew of this debt and knew of these resources and knew that they were not voting upon their people a heavy burden with reference to this debt.

Now, then, coming back to the original decree in this case embodied in the form of a conclusion to the opinion delivered by the court, I think that the court designed—

The Master: When you say the original decree, you mean the decree under which I am acting?

Mr Hogg: Yes, sir. I say the original proposition.

The Master: There have been several. The one you have in mind is the one under which I am now acting.

Mr Hogg: Yes, sir. The court designed to accord to the Master the widest latitude of inquiry in order to determine the value of these assets. Suppose, if the Master please, it would be difficult from the records or from any other proper source to obtain evidence relating to the value of these stocks on June 20, 1863, provided the Master should determine that to be the proper date or providing the Supreme Court should determine it as the proper date, if there had been no change in the physical values of the properties which these stocks and bonds represent, and there had been no additional money expended to make them of greater value, and that they had not suffered from destruction by reason of physical causes, the value in 1861 would be very persuasive with this court in the absence of better evidence as to what the value of these assets is on the 20th day of June, 1863, provided there is no change in the conditions of this investment, as, for illustration, suppose that the dividend paying value of the property in 1858, 1859 and 1860 was seven or eight per cent., that the dividends on this same property in 1861, 1862, 1863 and 1864 was seven and eight per cent., and there is no evidence that Virginia has expended any money in keeping them up, but they were self sustaining, the reasonable presumption is that in the space of two years there could have been very little material change in the value of those assets. Now, I wish to say frankly that we are wholly committed to the view that the 1st day of January, 1861, in equity and upon reason is the true date to be fixed to determine the value of these assets, these resources, applicable to the discharge of this debt. We may, however, be wrong about it. Our opinion is subject to the review of the Master, it is also subject to the review of the Court, and we, as is said by my worthy colleague, want to free the Master and want to free the Court from any embarrassment, and we want to avoid delay in the final adjudication of this controversy, the final settlement, and consequently we prepared our testimony with reference to the date of 1861, January 1st, and we also have prepared our evidence with reference to June 20, 1863. However, we do this simply as a precautionary measure. We feel confident that January 1, 1861, is the true date; at the same time, we do not wish to sacrifice our better judgment as to what ought to be done with reference to fully determining this case and avoiding delay to our own confidence. We wish to let these two dates go together and appear in the record.

Now, as to the modification of the decree on the former application for a reference—

The Master: You mean the refusal of the court to adopt the suggestion made by West Virginia?

Mr. Hogg: Yes, sir—the truth of the matter was that the whole object, as the Master will see upon reading the original opinion of the court upon the demurrer in that case, was to settle the debt, to determine the proportion of the debt that West Virginia should equitably assume under the ordinance and the Constitution. The crucial point of time of course with reference to that matter was January 1, 1861, because the date was fixed both by Section 9 of the ordinance and Section 8 of Article VIII of the Constitution, and therefore we concluded that 1861 should be taken, from these considerations. The Court, however, held that the ordinary expenses of the State government of Virginia continued in contemplation of law until the two states were divided, and also the State continued to receive the revenues from the counties composing the State of West Virginia until the old State was divided; that there was no population to count in West Virginia until she became a State, and so on, and therefore, following the ordinance itself, it became necessary for us to take the date of June 20, 1863, in order to determine the equitable proportion of the debt assumed by West Virginia under her Constitution. This question that we are now presenting was not in the case, in fact it could not have been in the case under the former theory. We therefore submit that the matter now before the Master has not been adjudicated; it is a question entirely new; it has never been raised before the Supreme Court until our supplemental answer was filed; it was not raised in the former hearing before the Master, and now for the first time in the whole history of this case has this question become material and of course all controlling, as we think, in the disposition and allowance of these assets.

Mr. Holt: Pardon my making a suggestion before you sit down, that the motion to amend the decree of reference referred to details of a narrow character, not involved here at all.

Mr. Hogg: Entirely.

The Master: Your point is that they were details and did not involve the main proposition?

Mr. Hogg: Yes.

Mr. Conrad: The question here as I apprehend it is a date upon which an account as to liabilities shall be taken. It is very much to be regretted that West Virginia when this order was made by the court, announced by the court, had not asked in the interest of definiteness that a time be fixed; especially is it unfortunate because West Virginia was admonished by her experience in the matter when she adventured before, not as a matter of detail but as a matter that reached down to the very fundamentals of this case, that the date of January, 1861, would not be fixed by the court as a time.

I think if my strength holds out I will show that my learned friend has been misled, I fancy by a false analogy. He has taken the case of a partnership as furnishing an analogy, which he seems to argue as if it was on all fours. I have taxed my ingenuity, limited as it is, for twelve months before this bill was filed to find out an analogy to which this matter could be likened, and there is none. It is not a case of a co-partnership or a joint tenancy or any joint interest; it is a case of a division of an existing entity, a governmental entity, a thing that never occurred before, not even in the partition of Poland; they did not regard its public debt. Here is where a commonwealth has been partitioned, and I can find nowhere in history an illustration. The text books vapor a good deal about hypothetical cases, but nowhere do the instruments cover an exact specific case.

Why did they fix January 1, 1861, as the time beyond which West Virginia should not be liable for any debt created by Virginia, why did they fix that date? Some period of time must be fixed, not capriciously, nor arbitrarily, some date must be fixed upon apparent reason. Why did they fix January? Because January is the beginning, I fancy, of the fiscal year. Within ninety days war was flagrant. In August of that very year a government was set up west of the Allegheny Mountains, not a separate government, but a government claiming to be the State of Virginia was set up; and wisely and properly was it said that West Virginia afterwards created, should not be made liable for any portion of any debt created by the State of Virginia after this other government, by whatever name, in whatever form it might present itself, should have been set up. The restored government of Virginia is the State of West Virginia; therefore January, 1861, was a very proper date to fix beyond which West Virginia should not be made liable for any debt created by Virginia. My friend says, in carrying out his analogy of partnership, that assets and liabilities are * * * Oh, no, not at all. There could not be a semblance of partnership here until an antagonistic interest arose that would warrant a partition or dissolution, and they did not arise until June, 1863. There was no antagonistic interest set up that would have warranted a dissolution of partnership, as, for instance, one partner claiming to be the exclusive owner of a portion of the assets, and one partner claiming to exercise exclusive control over a part of the partnership property—that did not occur until June, 1863, and that was the reason why it was held that the value of the debt must be fixed as of January, 1861. There was no question of off-sets, counter claims, antagonistic interests to arise in this case until June, 1863, because then for the first time did the antagonistic interests arise and appear, and that runs through all the history of this case. I find that as early as February 3, 1863, that all property, real, personal and mixed—this is an act of the restored government of Virginia—"That all property, real, personal and mixed, owned by or appertaining to this State, and being within the boundaries of the proposed State of West Virginia, when the same becomes one of the United States, shall thereupon pass to, and become the property of the State of West Virginia, and without any other assignment, conveyance or transfer or delivery than is herein contained, and shall include among other things not herein specified all lands, buildings, roads, and other internal improvements or parts thereof, situated within said boundaries, and vested in this State, or in the president and directors of the Literary Fund, or the Board of Public Works thereof, or in any person or persons for the use of this State, to the extent of the interest and estate of this State therein; and shall also include the interest of this State, or of the said president and directors, or of the said Board of Public Works in any parent bank or branch doing business within said boundaries and all stocks of any other company or corporation, the principal office or place of business whereof is located within said boundaries, standing in the name of this State, or of the said president or directors or of the said Board of Public Works, or of any person or persons for the use of this State." Now, note that please; that is in February, 1863, the restored government of Virginia, which was only another name for West Virginia, as we all see, that government said that every piece of property, real, personal and mixed, including stocks in all corporations within the boundaries of the proposed State of West Virginia should upon the creation of that State become the property of that State. There was a policy made and accepted by West Virginia when it became a State, provided for in February, 1863, six or seven months before the State actually became a State, and which included all property, real, personal and mixed, stocks of every corporation, that they should upon the creation of the State of West Virginia become its property without further deed, ipso facto, by virtue of that act alone. Can it be possible that a partition can be made as of one date as to one partner and a partition of the same property be made as of another date as of the other partner? How can you say that West Virginia shall stand liable for this property and by its very act should provide for liability in a future accounting as of the date when West Virginia was admitted into the Union, but that the State of West Virginia on her part shall account for her share of those assets of January, 1863? I want to call your Honor's attention, and I do not claim at all and do not wish to be understood as claiming that I am giving the construction and interpretation of the entire answer of West Virginia—I have read it with great care I think, but I find this on page 20. Part of the answer of the defendant alleges that "Under the provisions of Sections 28, 29, and 30 of the Constitution of Virginia of 1851, in force January 1, 1861, (Code of Virginia, 1860, page 47), she became, and was, entitled, under her Constitution adopted and in force on June 20, 1863, to an equitable proportion of and interest in the stocks, bonds and other securities, credit and settlement for which she now seeks to obtain by her supplemental answer." That fixes the date, and she has a right to come into court when the thing becomes vital, when she has a right to demand a day in court, under the very provisions of the answer, that is in June, 1863, when her Constitution took effect, because that is the date she sets up in her answer as the date on which under the Constitution, by virtue of which she acquired an interest in this property for the first time. Hitherto her interests had been common, that of the whole state, and then for the first time her antagonistic interest appears, and then for the first time she claimed the right to demand an accounting and a settlement, and it was only under that Constitution that she acquired any rights, it was only on that date she acquired any rights. The power of Virginia to create further liability by public debt was fixed on January, 1861, and on that day and for that reason and that reason only the right of West Virginia to acquire and fix the value on that day accrued. West Virginia has a right to oppose set-offs and counter claims, to oppose the claim of Virginia existing only at the time when West Virginia acquired a separate entity from Virginia, when separate rights and interests accrued to her, among those, a right of action; she could not have it at a period when she did not exist.

Mr. Lilly: If the Master please, supplementing hurriedly the remarks made in answer to this motion on behalf of the defendant, I want to correct one or two mistakes of my friend just closing on behalf of the plaintiff. He suggested that there was a reason why the debt should be ascertained as of January 1, 1861, and gave as that reason that it was presumably the end of a fiscal year. I desire to state that at that time the end of the fiscal year was September 30th, and not the first of the calendar year, hence that reason would not prevail.

The Master: Fiscal year in Virginia you mean?

Mr. Lilly: Yes; but there was a reason, if the Master please. The black clouds of war were hovering in the horizon in this fair land of ours, as they are desolating the European countries today, and that country west of the mountains, as my friend said, had both reins of the government, not only for Virginia but West Virginia, and she said "we will protect our rights in the amount of this debt and we will limit it to the 1st day of January, 1861. Why? Because of the roll of the drum, the increased debt that Virginia is going to heap upon the entire people because of war, and we are going to protect our rights by limiting the date to January 1, 1861." Would not those same fathers that protected us in the amount of the debt have held the same desire to protect us in the subject of debt and in the assets? Were they all penny wise and pound foolish? Were they going to protect as to the amount of the debt and then say it makes no difference what becomes of the assets? The same motives that actuated them to protect the counties west of the Alleghanies as to the amount of the debt would operate to protect them under Section 8 of Article VIII of the Constitution which uses the word equitable and evidently contemplates the assets, and why and how did it so do? The section says that West Virginia will assume an equitable proportion of the debt—when? As of January 1, 1861. What is the debt? Is it a part of an accounting? Is it a partial determination? Is it running one side of the page of the ledger and not the other? You don't know what a debt is until the credits are taken from it; you don't know as a matter of fact that there is a debt, and there can be no debt broadly and equitably speaking until the assets are taken from the liabilities and the balance struck. In Section 8 of Article VIII, by the terms of the contract, our fathers beyond the mountains were protected in their assets, because it is a strange course of reasoning, it is a forced necessity, that requires the plaintiffs in this case to want to saddle a debt on us as of a certain day and then after the devasting floods of war have destroyed those assets, bring them in and say "Here they are." The gentleman first speaking and who made the motion said that all of the facts are in the record necessary for a determination of this litigation. Possibly so from the plaintiff's standpoint, but there are other interests which belong to the defendant, and the Court apparently was of the opinion that they were not in the record; otherwise, why the necessity of referring this case back to this Master to determine certain facts if they were already in the record? It is a presumption for me to argue and say to this Honorable Master that the facts upon which this defendant relies were in the record or were insisted upon, but, as the last gentleman, Dr. Hogg, associated with me in this case said, it is now for the very first time that it becomes material to ascertain the value of these assets. All of the gentlemen on the other side argue that the value of the assets must be determined as of 1863. I desire to refer the gentlemen to the resolution of their own State, not the restored State, but their own, because that recognized a different theory, as in 1866 or 1867 when they came over to ask West Virginia to come back they said if she won't come back then let us partition the assets, ascertain the debt and partition the assets, and that was I think in at least three separate resolutions and acts. If you take it as of 1863, you can as well take it as of any subsequent date. They say we have a back to be whipped by placing an enormous debt upon us, but we have no right or no such standing that we can partake of any of the benefits as of the same date that that enormous debt is sought to be placed upon us. Is it equitable for the gentleman sitting there on one side and myself to be in business—and this is more nearly a partnership relation than anything I know of—for him to take the flour and bacon and meal and sugar and corn unto himself and say "You shall pay so much of the debt as of this date and let me take practically all the assets over and dispose of them"—let him take them foreign to the purpose for which he was holding them and for which the common property was not held, and depreciate part and destroy a part, and then, come back to me and say "Nothwithstanding I have destroyed these goods, notwithstanding the fact that I will keep some of them, notwithstanding the fact that I gave some of them away, notwithstanding the fact that I sold many of them and treated them as my own absolute assets, now that there is a loss occasioned, whether right or wrong, by my own act, I am going to fix some date where they will be of the least value and give you your rights as of that date." It was said by the last gentleman that there was no antagonistic interest between the territory east of the mountains and west of the mountains until June 20, 1863. Back as early as the constitutional convention of 1829 and 1830 that same rumbling, that same discord, that same disagreement that later gave force in cannon and war existed at that time, and on the 17th day of April, 1861, a few months after January of 1861, Virginia said she would cast her destinies with the Southland, away from the regular organized federal government, and would take the assets with her. She did not possibly say she would take the assets in so many words, but her act, her deed, spoke louder than any words. Then in June the loyal people west of the mountains set on foot the establishment of the real government of Virginia loyal to the Union. Was that an antagonistic condition? And on August 20th of that same year those fathers beyond the mountains said "We give West Virginia a right to organize a State within our territory." Was that antagonistic? And so it followed.

I want this feature especially impressed, that while West Virginia did not assume her legal status in the galaxy of states until June 20, 1863, yet, by every tie of blood, by every dissenting influence of war, she was a territory unto herself, and Virginia, with what she was and hoped to be and had been, was a territory unto herself. And it was only awaiting the evolutionary process of time and certain formal regulations until West Virginia should assume her legal existence. But to all intents and purposes she was separated and divorced from the old Commonwealth, the old Commonwealth with her idols in one direction, and the new-to-be commonwealth or state with her idols in another direction. And while, as I said a moment ago, she did not take on her legal attitude until June 20, 1863, yet in deed and in truth she was living in another clime, she was having her other conventions, she was having her other legislatures, and the government of Virginia was doing likewise. And it is equitable to say that we shall have to pay the debt as of a certain day, referring back to my former statement, and yet allow Virginia, who created the debt (and outside of the record, primarily for her own benefit) to take these assets and destroy them or do with them as she pleases, and make us account on some future day?

And recurring back to what I said in opening if we are to assume an equitable proportion of the debt as of January 1, 1861, how can we do it unless you give us credit for our portion of the assets? We feel that this is a vital question. If it is thought proper, as my associate counsel, Judge Holt, said, to determine it now, it is up to the Master to conclude. We believe, we shall insist, that January 1, 1861, is the date, not only the date under the contract as set forth by Section 8 of Article VIII of the Constitution, because it so says, according to our interpretation, but it is the proper date in equity and good conscience; and after all, as the Supreme Court has said, and as your Honor has said, this is a case to be determined upon the broad equities of right and wrong; of course guided within reasonable limitations by the rules of law and procedure.

It is inequitable to establish the date as of June 20, 1863. It is equitable to establish the date as of January 1, 1861. It is legal to do it. And if the Master cares to rule on it, we insist, as Judge Holt says upon the converse of the motion of the gentleman representing the plaintiff.

I am calling the Master's attention to an idea that was suggested by a gentleman sitting by. If your Honor will remember, in ascertaining the amount of the debt nine hundred and seventy-seven thousand dollars past interest from July 1, 1860, to January 1, 1861, was added in the total of the debt, notwithstanding the fact subsequently introduced in this evidence shows at least eight hundred and nineteen thousand dollars was then and there in the sinking fund, provided by the Constitution of 1851 and 1852 and by the Act of March 23, 1853, for the specific purpose of paying the debt. Now would it be equitable for the accrued interest, nine hundred and seventy-seven thousand dollars to be put into the debt to swell it, to let them in the meantime, from January 1, 1861, to June 20, 1863, appropriate this eight hundred and nineteen thousand dollars provided for the very payment of that debt or the interest and we get no benefit from it? Because within a month's time after January 1, 1861, this eight hundred and nineteen thousand dollars, with other money, went to pay this interest, the interest added in the total of the debt, and according to the equitable settlement that is insisted upon on the other side, this asset of eight hundred and nineteen thousand dollars would have vanished in thin air, they pay the interest out of our common assets, and according to their theory that would absolutely disappear.

And there is another reason why January 1, 1861, ought to control and prevail, and that is because at that time we were in a better position to know and determine as to the value of these assets. Because if you wait until June 20, 1863, in the intervening days of war it is harder to determine. And then you take the date as of January 1, 1861, suppose there is a loan, and interest running up to 1863, here is six per cent. to the interest fund, one per cent. under the Constitution and Act of 1852 and 1853 goes to the liquidation of the principal. Where would that go to? Certainly not to reducing our part of the debt, because it has been definitely determined as of January 1, 1861. And yet, while our assets were being dissipated in various ways, this one per cent., coming out of our assets, reducing the principal, we get no benefit thereof. I thank the Master.

Mr. Harrison: If your Honor please, the discussion of this motion has taken a very wide range. Many matters have been dealt with that have no legitimate bearing upon it. The reasons for it we think are obvious and can be briefly stated.

If West Virginia is entitled to credits to be applied upon her share of the principal of the debt, then it must follow that the value of those credits must be ascertained as of some date. You cannot inform and advise the court, as you are required by the decree of reference to do, without ascertaining the date, if credits are to be allowed, upon which you will determine their value.

Therefore, it seems obvious that the proper thing to do is to fix that date at once, in order that the evidence introduced, may have reference to it. It is contended by the other side that the date should not be fixed until all of the evidence has been introduced relating to more than one date, because as it is said, your Honor and the court would thereby be the better enabled to determine what date should be adopted. But the date does not depend upon the evidence that may be introduced as to the value of the assets. The value of the assets must be determined with reference to a date, but the date is not determined by the preponderance of proof in respect to values at different periods.

Therefore the motion calls upon your Honor to advise the parties and their counsel the date as of which credits, if any, will be ascertained and allowed, in order that they may address themselves to that date in the introduction of evidence. It surely would be an advantageous thing to do, if it will result, as Judge Holt says, in shortening this proceeding by one-half. If we can be spared one-half of the time, labor and expense necessary to be expended in pursuing the course now being pursued, by determining in advance the date as of which the value of these assets must be ascertained, surely we ought to do it.

The contention of the defendant is that those values must be determined as of January 1, 1861, while the motion submitted by the plaintiff asks your Honor to rule that June 20, 1863 is the date as of which they must be ascertained; if the defendant should be found to be entitled to any credits.

There seem to me to be conclusive reasons why the 20th of June, 1863, must be the date adopted. West Virginia became a State upon the 20th of June, 1863. The dismemberment of the old State, became an accomplished fact upon that date. Prior to that period the territory now forming the State of West Virginia was part of the State of Virginia. There had been in fact, whatever may have been contemplated, no actual division of the territory of the Mother State until June 20, 1863; and obviously therefore no conflicting interest or rights between the two could arise until that date. Now it happens that January 1, 1861, was specifically fixed as the date for ascertaining the amount of the debt, with reference to West Virginia's liability for a share of it. Reasons have been stated why that was done. It is immaterial why that was done. We know the fact, that there was a stipulation, that the amount of the debt should be fixed as of the 1st of January, 1861, but the stipulation went no further.

I presume the reason was, as stated, to avoid any liability after that date for any debt that Virginia might create. That doubtless, as the Attorney General of West Virginia said, was the all-sufficient reason that moved the "fathers" to fix a definite period for ascertaining West Virginia's share of the original debt. But I say that agreement did not extend any further.

Now the question before us is not the period from which the debt shall be fixed, but the period as of which the value of alleged credits shall be ascertained. And the value of those credits must necessarily be determined as of the date of the separation, in the absence of any stipulation to the contrary, because not until that date was it possible for any conflict of interests to arise, in respect to the avails of the original debt.

Now Judge Holt said, and he made the point with his usual force and earnestness, that you cannot take a liability as of one date, and the value of an asset as of another date, for the purpose of applying set-off against that liability.

I have the authority of the Supreme Court of the United States for saying that it can be done. In the opinion of the Court delivered 6th of March, 1911, it is said: "The amount of the debt, January 1, 1861, that we have to apportion, no longer is in dispute." We have here the judicial declaration of the fact that January 1, 1861, is not only the undisputed date as of which the amount of that debt should be ascertained, but also of the fact that the amount of the debt was no longer in dispute. Continuing the Court said:

"The Master's finding was accepted by West Virginia, and at the argument we understood Virginia not to press her exception that it should be enlarged by a disputed item."

Now the thing that the Court had to decide was the apportionment of that debt, that is to say, on what basis, and as of what date would it make that apportionment.

We find the Court settled these questions as follows:

"We are of opinion that the nearest approach to justice that we can make is to adopt a ratio determined by the Master's estimated valuation of the real and personal property of the two States upon the date of the separation, June 20, 1863."

I submit, if your Honor please, that if the Supreme Court of the United States found that the nearest approach to justice was to apportion the debt itself on the basis of values, as of June, 1863, the same considerations require that the assets, if they are to be apportioned must be divided, or their value ascertained, as of the same date. Judge Holt was mistaken therefore when he stated that you cannot take a liability as of one date and apportion it on the value of an asset as of another date.

Mr. Holt: You certainly do not contend that the Supreme Court was then comparing assets and liabilities?

Mr. Harrison: I have shown that a debt, the amount of which was fixed on January 1, 1861, was apportioned by the Court on the basis of values ascertained, as of June 20, 1863, the date of the creation of the two States. And it must follow, that if it was in the interest of justice, to apportion the debt on the day of the separation, it is likewise in the interest of justice to ascertain the values of these so-called credits as of the same date.

I submit that it is not an open question. On reason and authority I am justified in saying that the date of the division of the territory of the Mother State, and the erection out of her territory of a new State, is the date upon which their respective rights must be fixed, quoad the property of the original State.

I respectfully submit that this motion should be granted. I do not see how your Honor can inform and advise the court in respect to the matters referred to you, without fixing a date for the ascertainment of the value of these assets, if West Virginia is entitled to a share of them.

How can your Honor reach a conclusion as to the effect or operation of the evidence upon the principal sum found by the court without knowing, if you should be of the opinion that credits should be allowed, the value of those credits? And you cannot determine their value without fixing the date as of which you will take their value. It will be absolutely necessary for your Honor, if you should be of the opinion that any of these so-called credits should be allowed, to show the Court to what extent they diminish the principal sum. And to do that you must ascertain their value as of a given date, before you can apply them as a credit to the principal sum.

Now, it is perfectly immaterial to us whether our friends on the other side continue the introduction of evidence to show the book value on January, 1861. They can do that if they think that has any actual bearing upon the value in June, 1863. It may be that they will ask you to allow them to introduce evidence of the value of the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac stock at this time. I think you might as well introduce evidence of value about an estate in the moon, so far as it has any relevancy here; and yet they may be of opinion that such evidence would have some bearing upon the value of the stock in 1863. But the point that we ask your Honor to rule upon is that notwithstanding what we may think as to the probative value of proof as of some other date, that the date as of which you will ascertain the values is June 20, 1863. We do not ask you to foreclose West Virginia's counsel from introducing this evidence if they are so minded.

Mr. Holt: Mr. Harrison, pardon me, but do not misunderstand us as acquiescing in that suggestion. We are not introducing the date of 1861 as an embracement for 1863, we are introducing evidence on the date 1861 because we say that is the right date; that is our position.

The Master: That is as I understand it.

Mr. Harrison: The motion is as follows: "The plaintiff by her counsel moves that the Master do rule that June 20, 1863, the date of the creation of the State of West Virginia, and the date as of which the court ascertained the value of the property in the two States as a basis for the apportionment of the debt, is the date as of which the values of the alleged credits asserted in the supplemental answer of the defendant must be ascertained, should the defendant be found to be entitled to any of the said alleged credits." And we have asked you to rule that June 20th is the date as of which the values of these credits must be ascertained, should West Virginia in the last analysis be found to be entitled to any. But we go further and ask that the Master will exclude from consideration any evidence directed to the fixing of any other date for the ascertainment of said value.

Now, what I said just now was that our friends may be of the opinion that the evidence of value at some other date than June 20, 1863, may have some probative value in determining values on June 20, 1863. If they think so they may introduce such evidence.

One suggestion is that your Honor will rule now and fix definitely the date so that we may govern ourselves accordingly. What we ask in the second paragraph will necessarily follow.

The Master: One is the logical sequence of the other?

Mr. Harrison: Yes.

The Master: Of course whichever way I rule, legal consequences follow.

Mr Harrison: It has been said on the other side, that the Court meant when it referred this case back, to reopen it, and thereby recognize that there was merit in West Virginia's contention, and that the intention of the Court was to suspend its former decision and give West Virginia the widest field for the introduction of evidence. Now, it was asserted here by my associate that we have travelled over a pretty wide field in this case. It is new to our friends on the other side because they are new in the case. But it is a pretty old story to the rest of us. And my friend and associate was within the bounds of accuracy when he said that there was already in this case all of the information furnished from the archives of this State that has any bearing upon any question that has ever been raised in it, including that raised now. And in support of that statement I cite an extract from the last opinion, delivered by the Chief Justice:

"Without intimating any opinion whatever as to whether the items with which the proposed supplemental answer deals entered in the process of calculation or reasoning by which the sum due was previously fixed, and moreover without intimating any opinion as to how far the items embraced in the answer could serve as credits upon the sum previously found due, and therefore to that extent reduce the amount, we think it is obvious that most of the items embraced in the answer were contained in the Master's report and in any event all were available then for every defense now based upon them if their consideration had been pressed in the aspect and with the assertions of right now made."

Now, we press this motion upon your Honor, at this time because we do not think we should be required to travel over this ground again if there is no use in it. But I started to say, when I digressed, that it has been suggested or urged that the court meant to suspend its former decree. In other words, for the time being, to set aside what it has heretofore said and what it has heretofore done, and leave West Virginia to roam at will without restraint in asserting the defense that she is now making. But that is a mistaken view.

The Court said:

"Nothing in this order to vacate or change in any manner or in any particular the previous decree, and the same to stand wholly unaffected by the order now made or any action taken thereunder until the examination and report herein provided for is made and this Court acts upon the same."

Mr. Holt: It never said anything else.

Mr. Harrison: I do not think, therefore, that the Court intended to let down the bars and invite an indefinite investigation about matters that we are all familar with.

Now, to sum up, I say, if your Honor please, that it is important for you to fix the date as requested. Nothing will be gained by reserving your decision as to that. If it is to go to the Court, I think the surest and speediest way is to let it go to the Court now, and ask the Court for instructions. But I say, in my humble judgment, the Court has sufficiently indicated its opinion on that point. The Court from the beginning has shown that June 20, 1863, is in its judgment the date upon which the rights of the two States in the common property of the old State, must be adjusted.

I think our friends fully realize that fact. They will contend against it as a matter of course, but the record shows that our friends here appreciate the fact that they are contending for a proposition that in good conscience and in the light of reason and the decision of this Court cannot be allowed.

If your Honor will look at their answer you will find that wherever they allude to the evidence of the value of these so-called assets, they allege that they had the same value in June, 1863, that they did in January, 1861. They give two dates always. I might read one extract for example.

The Master: What page?

Mr. Harrison: I will read on page 27, of their answer where they are dealing with the Tennessee Railroad, and they say that they have the value there stated not only as of the 1st day of January, 1861, but as of the 20th day of June, 1863. Why did my friends assert that they had the same value in June, 1863, that they had in January, 1861?

The Master: They probably took chances once and got left, and did not want to take any chances again.

Mr. Holt: I think it is perfectly plain why, Mr. Master.

Mr. Harrison: We have all been in that situation no doubt.

On page 20, they recognize June 20th as the constitutional date fixed for the determination of their interests in the so-called assets of the common states.

The Master: In paragraph 4?

Mr. Harrison: Yes.

Mr. Holt: We could not have any debts either until we had an existence. So that horse is as long as it is broad.

Mr. Harrison: The answer throws a side light on the mind of the draftsman. He was doing the best he could, under the circumstances. But still the definite fact had to appear, and it did appear in the answer that West Virginia claims an equitable proportion of the stocks, etc., as of the 20th of June, 1863.

Therefore, we appeal to your Honor, if it commends itself to your judgment, to settle this question now, so that in the future conduct of this case we may know how to govern ourselves with reference to the introduction of proof and not be wandering over a wide field without any limitation upon us. We say that this motion is not only in the interest of the economy of time, labor and money, but it is in the interest of justice. You cannot, in my opinion, meet the expectations of the Court unless you advise them definitely whether or not the principal shall be reduced, and if so to what extent; and you cannot do that without knowing the date as of which you will ascertain or determine the values of the so-called credits. And you cannot take two dates. And there is no reason why we should waste time in introducing evidence about two dates, any more than there would be about three or more. The question is the fixing of a definite date in order to state an account, and that date does not depend upon the evidence of values that is to be introduced; it depends upon the fact, the definite fact, that West Virginia's existence dates from June 20, 1863, from which date flow her rights as against Virginia. The Court has pointed the way for you by taking that date as the date to apportion the principal of the debt, which had been arbitrarily fixed at a prior date.

It seems to me, therefore, that all doubts disappear in the light of the facts, and the action of the court, and that the course for your Honor to pursue is plain and clear.

I submit the matter to your Honor.

The Master: Have you anything further, Judge Holt?

Judge Holt: Nothing further, I believe, your Honor.

The Master: Then I am prepared to announce the ruling. I think, in the first place, it is my duty to take such course in connection with this hearing as will most effectively promote the final, speedy and conclusive determination of the great issue between these two parties.

West Virginia has already had her legal day in court in connection with the controversies raised by this amendment. But that is a matter however that is not for my consideration. The Supreme Court has reached the conclusion that under the circumstances she is entitled to a further day in court, and that she has a right to be heard upon all these matters set up by her in this supplemental answer.

The motion made by ex-Attorney General Anderson, and supported by him in a very able argument—and I may say that the whole discussion has been characterized by very great ability and legal intelligence—of course raises a very vital question; and its determination one way or another will come very near determining the rights of the parties to this controversy. If I sustain this motion and it is held ultimately that I erred in sustaining it, then the question comes back upon the hypothesis raised and urged by West Virginia.

The other course that is open to me is to hear all of this contention upon either of these hypotheses, reach my conclusion later if I find it necessary to do so, as to which is the right conclusion and perhaps report in the alternative to the court, so that the court will have before it the full contention of each party.

Now, in the first place, so far as this question is concerned, it is not only vital but it is an important legal proposition, and I desire to say that so far as I am concerned my mind is as yet open as to the proper conclusion to reach as to which is the right date upon which this value should be assessed. In a hearing of this importance and magnitude, if I were going to decide definitely which date should be fixed upon by me and as to which date the evidence should be introduced, I should feel bound to suspend the matter until I could more carefully examine the case and reach a conclusion. I would not want to take my chances in a decision right off the bench, immediately at the close of the argument. In reaching a conclusion here that I would hope would ultimately be sustained by the Supreme Court I should not want to reach a conclusion that would not be sustained, it would not be justice to either of the parties. And I doubt whether it would be wise for me, in the interests of both parties concerned, to undertake to definitely determine that specific date. I shall hold that only two dates are in issue, first, January 1, 1861, and second, June 20, 1863.

If I should rule in favor of either and rule erroneously this case comes back and we have to traverse this ground again. My judgment is that it is wiser for all concerned for me to hear the testimony that will be introduced by either party directed to either of these dates, and if I determine ultimately to make an alternative finding, why then the court will have the benefit of my conclusion predicated upon either date.

This litigation ought to be terminated, it has been going on long enough. I do not want to take any action here that will lead the Supreme Court to say or feel that either party to this controversy has been foreclosed from presenting any legitimate evidence that may properly bear upon this controversy. If this had been a controversy between private parties this controversy here this morning would not be here before me, evidently, from the opinion of the Supreme Court. But the Supreme Court took a more liberal and broader view in respect to this controversy than they would ordinarily take. I do not want to give any such direction to the hearing here so that either party that may feel aggrieved may be in a position where the litigation can be further continued or further delayed. I can appreciate that if I ruled one way or the other I would shorten this case one-half, but on the other hand it might prolong it about one hundred per cent. My own judgment is that under the circumstances it is my duty to hear this case upon both hypotheses, first, that the value may be determined possibly as of the date of January 1, 1861; secondly, it may be determined as of the date of June 20, 1863; and I shall therefore so rule.

the support of either hypothesis must be evidence that is legally competent in its character and has a legitimate tendency, whether it may be remote or otherwise, to establish the hypothesis contended for. Of course the case may develop so that it may be up to me to say whether evidence that is offered upon one side or the other may or may not be too remote. I intend, however, to give what is every reasonable latitude. I intend, however, to keep the case within what I look upon as proper legitimate limits. But subject to that, I want the parties to feel, and I propose to have the court ultimately to feel and know that you have both had ample, full and complete opportunity on each hypothesis. And I hope when you get through with this hearing to present it to the court in such shape that there will be an end to the controversy between the parties. It may take us longer, but it is an important case, and we are here for this purpose. And with these suggestions we will now proceed with the hearing.

Do I make the matter clear to the parties on both sides? I would like to say before we separate, I have not any question, from the attitude of the learned counsel on each side, because they are all distinguished men and evidently anxious to reach a proper and legitimate result, that none of them will be captious as to the application of the rule, but you must both bear in mind that the proceeding is being conducted upon legal principles, and while I hope to make a broad and proper application of them, we must both understand that we are to keep within the rules, and of course the counsel upon either side know what they are. And in the progress of the trial of course if anything comes along in which counsel upon either side feel that the counsel on the other side are going into things that are too remote, it is open to them to call the attention of the Master to it; and I shall not hesitate to rule. But subject to the general rules I hope both parties to this case in the end will feel and know that everybody connected with this case has had every opportunity that is possibly open to them in connection with this hearing, so that hereafter, while they may not agree with my conclusions, I do not intend to have it left so that they will feel that they have not had the fullest and most complete opportunity to be heard.

At this point a recess was taken until 2:30 P. M.

AFTER RECESS

Continuation of the direct examination of

CONWAY W. HILLMAN.

Mr. Holt: On yesterday we took up the schedules in the order of A and B, then passed Classes C and D and came to E, because the blue prints for C and D at that time were not quite ready.

The Master: Now you propose to resume with C?

Mr. Holt: Now we come to C, which consists of 18 different items.

Q. Mr. Hillman, turning to the first item of Class C as exhibited with the answer, that is to say, the Orange & Alexandria Railroad Company, stock and loan, I will ask you if you have examined the records of Virginia or of the Orange & Alexandria Railroad Company with a view of ascertaining what shares of stock if any the State of Virginia owned in that company on the 1st day of January, 1861?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. What was the number of shares owned by her of that stock on that date?

A. 17,490 shares.

Q. What was the par value per share?

A. $50 per share.

Q. You may further state whether or not she acquired that number of shares on that date or owned them prior to that time?

A. She owned them on that date and had owned them for some time previous to that date.

The Master: Approximately how long?

The Witness: I should say at least from 1854, as we afterwards have a record of dividends declared in 1854 and paid in 1854.

The Master: Approximately seven years?

The Witness: It was before that date that they owned, I know it was on that date. All that information will be furnished to your Honor if it is desired.

The Master: At least seven years?

The Witness: Yes, sir, at least that.

Q. What was the total par value of the stock of that company owned by her?

A. $874,500.

Q. Did you examine the books of that company or the records of the Commonwealth of Virginia for the purpose of ascertaining the book value of that stock as of January 1, 1861?

A. I examined the records of the State of Virginia as published in Document No. 17 of the Auditor's Report for the State made annually for the different years, to determine that point. There are no books or records showing the Orange & Alexandria trial balances as of that date. I am informed by the Southern Railway, who now owns the property, that they have none of those records, they all having been destroyed by fire some years ago, and there is not extant as far as I know any record of the company itself, and therefore we have to take the reports made by the State.

Q. Based upon the reports of that company made to the State of Virginia, were you able to ascertain the book value, taking those reports to be true, of that stock as of January 1, 1861?

A. Yes, sir, I was able to establish the value for that stock.

Q. What was that value per share?

A. $53.32. Allow me to state that at the time that was made out I had taken the value and shown it as $100 per share. I have since made investigation that it was $50 a share. Therefore the book value would have to be $53.32 per share, but for every $100, the usual share value, it is worth $106.64; in other words, the stock has a $6.64 premium.

The Master: But per share of $50 the par value is $53.32?

The Witness: It was; 6.64 per cent. premium.

Q. Allowing that advance over the par value, what was the total value as of that date of the block of stock owned by Virginia in that road?

A. $932,566.80.

Q. Have you prepared a schedule wherein you have traced all of the 18 items embraced in Class C?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. How have you marked that schedule?

A. In the upper right hand corner, Hillman Exhibit 3-A, and it should be marked in the upper left hand corner Class C, but unfortunately it has been omitted. I will ask that it be so marked for those holding copies, and will furnish the stenographer with one so marked.

Q. Will you now file that exhibit and mark the same Defendant's Exhibit No. 3?

A. I so file it, marked as requested.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, August 18, 1914, C. B.

The Master: The book value that you have given of $106.64, that is predicated on $100 par value; as a matter of fact, the par value was $50, and in order to be entirely accurate that should be $53.32?

The Witness: If it is treated as per share, yes, sir.

The Master: Your final computation I take it is predicated on $50 per share?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

The Master: With the premium that you allow?

The Witness: Yes, sir. I will say, your Honor, that the books of the company do not show the value of this share, how much it was, how much par was. I had to go to the side record and find it in their reports to the State, that it was at $50 per share; that is the reason it did not appear on the first original report.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. I have already inquired of you, Mr. Hillman, concerning the first item, that is the Orange & Alexandria Railroad Company stock on this Exhibit No. 3. I will now ask you by what process you ascertained the book value of each share of stock of that company on that date to be $53.32?

Mr. Holt: I may say to the Master and to the gentlemen on the other side that there is a supporting exhibit going with that first item on Exhibit 3, which explains its purposes, so we will turn to it. I will exhibit it in a moment.

Q. My question is by what process did you ascertain the book value of that stock per share to be on January 1, 1861, $53.32.

A. On the report of this road to the State for year ending September 30, 1856, all of which is found in Document No. 17 of the respective years which are hereafter mentioned in the Auditor's report to the State. There was a complete trial balance of this road wherein the par of the stock was $1,457,000 and the profit was $7,571.28, making a book value of $100.45 for each $100, or $50.23 for each share of stock.

Q. At $50 a share?

A. $50 a share. In 1856 no further trial balances are shown. We therefore took the profits as shown on Document No. 17 and added each year's profits over and above operating expenses, taxes and interest on the funded debt or floating debt to the surplus which had been determined for the year ending September 30, 1856, and in that way arrived at the available surplus or amounts which should be or would be distributed to the stockholders had the road been closed and the assets properly distributed, the corporation liquidated. We found that in 1857 there was $1,830,303.89 worth of stock outstanding. The odd amounts I would say are due to the partial payment plan adopted for outside parties in paying for their stock.

The Master: Does that represent the actual amount of stock outstanding or the amount of money actually paid in for stock outstanding?

The Witness: It represents both, sir, as the stock was not fully paid until all assessments on it had been paid; it carried with it only the amounts that had been turned in, and if a man failed in his subscription the stock was only partially paid up.

The Master: Does this figure represent the amount actually paid in as distinguished from the amount atcually out?

The Witness: Yes, sir, from the amount actually paid in as distinguished from the subscriptions to the stock.

A. (Continuing.) The profits above operating expenses, taxes and interest were $61,441.15. There were dividends paid on the preferred stock of the company amounting to $5,954.63, leaving a total profit for the year above interest and dividends which could be carried into surplus of $55,486.52, which added to the profits from the previous year, gave us profit at the end of this year of $63,057.80. Dividing this surplus by the amount of outstanding stock we have a book value of the stock of $103.44 for every $100 worth of stock, or for each share $52.71.

Q. Now, what did you do, if anything, with the year 1858?

A. I proceeded in the same way for the year 1858, taking it from the same record, Document No. 17, but of the date of 1858 report.

Q. What did that give you as the book value for that year of the stock?

A. The book value was $104.93 for each $100, or $52.47 for each share.

Q. Tell us whether or not you investigated and treated the year 1859 in the same way?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. What result did you arrive at there?

A. $105.30 for every $100 worth of stock, or $52.65 per share, book value.

Q. How did you ascertain the book value for the year 1860 of this stock?

A. I obtained that in the same way.

Q. With what result?

A. That it was worth $106.64 per $100 of stock, or $53.32 per share.

Q. Now how about the year 1861?

A. In 1861 the receipts of the road increased over 50 per cent. They had no expenses that year save an estimate by the superintendent. Because of the war the books were in Alexandria and this superintendent in Richmond had no access to them. He estimated his expenses at $220,000, which was $8,000 less than the previous year in spite of the fact that the earnings were over 50 per cent higher. If we had taken his figures it would have added for the year 1861 $263,909.85 to the profits of that year. I deemed that that must be erroneous and declined to take that into consideration in setting up the value of this stock. If my judgment is in error it can be corrected.

Q. What did you determine it to be worth, the book value of that date, 1861?

A. I did not determine the book value of that date.

Q. That is to say $106.64 for every $100 of stock represents if I understand you the 30th day of September, 1860, is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In 1860, is that correct?

A. Yes, sir, the nearest date which we could get to January 1, 1861.

Q. Now, have the processes by which you arrived at this book value been set forth in an exhibit or tabulated statement prepared by you and marked Hillman Exhibit No. 3, Asset 1?

A. Yes, sir, they have, and I would ask that Class C be written in the upper left hand corner.

Q. Will you file this supplement exhibit to Exhibit No. 3 and mark it Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, Asset 1?

A. I file it, marked as requested.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, Asset No. 1, August 18, 1914, C. B.

Q. You may state whether or not Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, Asset 1, correctly and truly—

The Master: Why does he call that asset 1, what is the significance of the language?

Mr. Holt: By turning to the answer, we were claiming each one of the matters as an asset in that class C, and he has just followed that.

The Master: These are not assets as distinguished from the other items that you have already been proving.

Mr. Holt: No.

The Master: Just simply used as a matter of convenience in connection with Class C?

Mr. Holt: Yes.

The Master: None of the other exhibits were marked assets, just Class so and so.

By Mr. Holt.

Q. You may state whether or not Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, Asset 1, correctly and truly sets forth the result of your examination of the books and reports concerning that company, and truly sets down the figures in relation thereto.

A. It does.

Mr. Robinson: I suppose it is understood that the words down there, value January 1, 1861, in themselves are no proof of value unless some other evidence is put in to support it.

The Master: I so understand it.

Mr. Holt: Of course we could not set down a conclusion.

The Master: Everything that you have given so far are book values.

Mr. Holt: Book values and also dividends declared, because the books tell us that that is another way of determining the actual value of the stock.

The Master: Then what conclusion they require is another thing, but what you fix as values upon these other schedules are the book values, and how much weight is to be given to that is a matter to be determined later. What weight that is entitled to in reaching the actual value is a matter to be determined later.

Mr. Holt: Except of course the par value appears.

The Master: That is a feature of the book value.

Mr. Robinson: I was particularly referring to the matter of the loan.

Mr. Holt: You will find that the supporting sheets looked at the debtor.

The Master: All those matters are open to cross-examination.

Mr. Holt: Of course when we set down two columns of figures, 2 and 2, we expect that the addition will show 4 in the end, but the addition is to be made later on.

The Master: Yes, certainly. Take Exhibit 3, where it reads, with reference to the first item, book value $106.64, and then the next column is "Value January 1, 1861," that should read, book value January 1, 1861.

Mr. Holt: That is what that is intended for.

The Master: I think we had better have on here, before we get through with this exhibit, Brother Holt, as to this book value, in red ink, $53.32, because this $106.64 is apparently predicated upon par value.

Mr. Holt: That is it.

The Master: And it is just twice the par value. I take it the results will be the same.

Mr. Holt: Absolutely.

The Master: It may result in confusion unless you put that in.

Mr. Harrison: Write "book" in front of "value."

Mr. Holt: In the last column. Now it may be that we are wrong in part about that. However, we will develop that part of that sum total there is made up of the book value and an actual value, and that is why those stars are at the bottom, to make the explanation. We will develop that in a moment though, and make it clear, your Honor.

The Master: Well, so far as there is any difference in character between the factors that enter into an aggregate, that you can explain on the record. The main thing is, though, that as the testimony goes in, let it go in plain and clear so that there won't be any confusion between us as to what it means. This suggestion of yours, I take it, Judge Holt, does not relate to the par value proposition.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Returning now to Exhibit No. 3, we find under the first item, Orange & Alexandria Railroad stock, the word loan, and thereafter under the word par $398,650.60, and the same amount carried out in the last column, with a star before it, and after the word star in the bottom margin, "Actual value January 1, 1861." What do you mean by these entries upon this exhibit? Please explain the same and tell us how you arrive at it.

A. I mean that that was the actual cash value of the principal of the loan on January 1, 1861.

Q. Well, who made the loan and to whom? Let us get a little history of it.

A. It was a loan made by the State of Virginia to the Orange & Alexandria Railroad Company, for which the Orange & Alexandria acceptances or acceptance were taken.

By the Master:

Q. When you say actual value, as I take it, you proceed on the assumption first that it was an actual existing loan, and second that the Railroad Company was amply responsible to pay and that the debt would be collected in full, that is what you mean by that, is it not?

A. Yes, sir, and the exhibit which I am just filing as a subsidiary paper shows those facts, both the value of the loan on that date and its subsequent payment in full.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Now, have you prepared an exhibit, Mr. Hillman, explaining this loan to the Orange & Alexandria Railroad Company, in addition to the supporting exhibit just filed with reference to stock, marked Asset No. 1—have you prepared an additional supporting exhibit relating to the loan?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. How have you marked it?

A. It is marked Hillman Exhibit 3 and 4 in the upper right hand corner, and immediately below it, sheet 1, asset 1. There is also a sheet 2 of asset 1 and a sheet 3 of asset 1, it taking three sheets in order to run this asset down and show its full payment. On the upper left hand corner is marked Class C and Class D, for the reason that there are references to both classes on this supporting exhibit, since it was settled in full with interest on the principal as well as the principal, and necessitated both being carried on one exhibit with a double reference as to the class at the top, Class C being principal of stocks or other securities, and Class D being interest, dividends, etc., which were due; and it became necessary to show the amount of interest which was due and earned at the same time that the principal was due, it became necessary to carry these upon the same exhibit in order to thoroughly show how much was principal, how much was interest, and how much of each was due. Therefore, these supporting papers will refer both to Class C and Class D.

By the Master:

Q. So far as these supporting exhibits refer to both classes, do they contain all of the data relating to the two classes?

A. Yes, sir, they do.

Mr. Holt: If I understand you, your Honor, you have Class C, which is made up of the stocks of certain companies, and loans made to certain companies; in addition to that you have Class D, which confines itself exclusively to the interest on those loans and to the dividends on those stocks. Now, while he is treating in Defendant's Exhibit No. 3 the subject of stocks, he has a separate and distinct set of supporting exhibits, the first of which has been introduced, and when it comes to the subject of loans he has another set of supporting exhibits, and they are marked C and D because they are the supporting exhibits for both Class C and Class D.

The Master: For both principal and dividend?

Mr. Holt: Yes.

The Master: And he is prepared of course to separate the details?

Mr. Holt: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Mr. Hillman, will you file your supporting exhibit, that you have marked Hillman Exhibit 3 and 4, Sheet 1, Asset 1, Class C and D, with and as a part of your deposition and mark it Defendant's Exhibit 3, Sheet 1, Asset 1?

A. I do file herewith the exhibit in question, marked Hillman Exhibit 3, Sheet 1, Asset 1, Sheet 2 of Asset 1 and Sheet 3 of Asset 1, in the upper right hand corner, and Class C and Class D in the upper left hand corner.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, Sheet 1, Asset 1, August 18, 1914, C. B.

Q. Will you take the exhibit last referred to and explain to the Master how you have indicated therein, or explained therefrom how you have ascertained the value of the loan to the Orange & Alexandria Railroad Company, heretofore referred to, to be worth $398,670.60 on the 1st day of January, 1861?

The Master: In the first place that is the full amount of the loan?

Mr. Holt: Yes, sir, that is the full amount of the loan.

A. On page 241, ledger B, under the sub-heading of B, A being stock and B being the loan—

The Master: Unless we keep the distinction in mind, the exhibits will be a little confused. The situation is this, first we have Defendant's Exhibit 3, which contains 19 items. Then we have Defendant's Exhibit 3, Asset 1; then we have Defendant's Exhibit 3, Sheet 1, Asset 1, Defendant's Exhibit 3, Sheet 2, Asset 1, and Defendant's Exhibit 3, Sheet 3, Asset 1. Am I right about that?

Mr. Holt: That is right. I am confining myself to one phase of the exhibit.

The Master: I understand that the witness proposes to give the facts upon which he reached his conclusion that this loan was worth its full face value, and while you have the detail on here you desire the oral explanation to elaborate the detail?

Mr. Holt: That is it exactly.

The Witness: This exhibit has both A and B on it, A being the stock and B being the loan. We are examining the loan for the present. The loan is found on page 241, ledger B of the internal improvement fund to be carried there at par value of $400,000, which was the original loan. This loan was finally paid off and settled—

By the Master:

Q. Where you say carried at par value, there is not any such thing as par value of a loan.

A. That was the original loan and was the way it was carried on the books at that date.

Q. Par value is predicated upon stock, not upon a loan. You mean to say that the books show that that was the amount of the loan on that date?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Holt: I think par value is a little misleading, except that his explanation shows what he means.

The Master: A loan is one thing and stock is an entirely different thing.

The Witness: The settlement of this loan, its final settlement, is found on pages 389 to 392 of Journal N of the Public Works, which is the internal improvement fund, the two titles being used interchangeably on the books, as follows, starting out with the $400,000, the amount of the loan, it was shown that interest up to February 23, 1859, amounted to $6,075.31, that on February 11, 1859, the Railroad Company paid in on account of interest or on account of the loan, $5,250.

Q. What was the fact, on account of the loan or on account of the interest?

A. It is on account of both, if your Honor will allow me just a moment.

Q. How did the entry read?

A. The entry reads, for interest on loan. They were charged seven per cent. The understanding was that six per cent. of that was paid on the loan and the other one per cent. of that was to go to liquidation of the security, so that it would be partial payment and wipe it out, and this is the plan that is followed here in wiping it out.

Q. Do you get that from the documents which stated the original loan?

A. No, sir, from the documents which show the settlement.

Q. Was one per cent. sort of a sinking fund?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Holt: It was an application to principal, the one per cent.

The Witness: The Virginia bonds had the same provision in them, and they were thereby wiped out at a certain date. These loans were made as a general thing on the same plan. That left on February 23, 1859, $625.31 to be added to the principal. On the date of that same date the railroad company paid into the treasury $2,154.71 on account of their loan, which left the amount of the principal on the loan $398,670.60.

Q. How does that credit entry read, I mean on the book?

A. There is no credit on the books until we come to the final settlement. On the original books it meant just simply a payment of interest on loan.

Q. That is the item of $2,154.71 appeared on the books as payment of interest on loan?

A. Yes, sir, payment of interest on loan. It was only when we came to the settlement that we determined how much was applicable to the principal and how much to the interest. That left $398,670.60 due on the principal of the loan on February 23, 1859. On September 15, 1859, the interest was again calculated, amounting to $10,415.94, upon which the road paid $9,086.81, thus failing by $1,329.33 to meet their interest payment. The interest due to April 17, 1860, was $14,019. The company paid $9,840.47, thus failing to meet their interest payment by $4,178.53.

Q. Does that $14,019 include the balance of interest overdue?

A. No, sir, it was a new calculation of interest.

Mr. Holt: You will find that that thirteen hundred, your Honor, is set out in the column just above.

The Master: Oh, yes, that makes up the aggregate.

The Witness: On July 1, 1860, there was due interest of $5,035.18, and the company paid on that date $4,139.53, being $875.65 less than their full interest. Therefore up to July 1, 1860, there had been no payments upon the principal of this loan, and the loan remained at $398,670.60, since the next payment of interest on this loan did not occur until October 20, 1862, as will be seen from the first entry upon sheet 2 of this exhibit. The side calculations at the bottom here, carried away over to the extreme right, on the last lines of sheet No. 1, are to determine the amount of interest which was due upon January 1, 1861, and will be explained when we come to Exhibit No. D.

Q. When you say there have been no payments made on account of principal up to 1860, you left the item of $2,154.71 to be accounted for later, because that evidently reduced the principal according to your figures here, and operated as a partial payment on principal—you left that item I suppose to be figured in later on, when you say there had been no payments on account of principal up to that date?

A. Oh, yes, that had already entered into the payment on account of principal.

Mr. Holt: The statement was that since the ascertained payment of principal of $398,000 no further payment of principal had been made.

The Witness: We will refer to this exhibit in chief again, your Honor, when we come to Exhibit D. I will call your attention to the fact that it is progressive, Sheets 1, 2 and 3, and finally shows the payment of the loan in full upon Sheet 3 of this exhibit, showing that full value had been received for the loan.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Does the Sheet 3, Asset 1, show when the loan was finally settled in full?

A. Yes, sir, October 28, 1872.

Q. Then, as I understand you, going back to the main exhibit No. 3, where you set down the value of this loan at three hundred and ninety-eight thousand and some dollars as of January 1, 1861, you base that conclusion upon Sheets 1, 2 and 3, and treat it as of that value as of that date in consequence of the fact that that was the amount originally loaned and that it was finally paid with interest?

A. Yes, sir. Allow me to just correct slightly, it was not the amount which was originally loaned, but it was the amount of the original loan which remained after the partial payments which had been made upon it before the 1st of January, 1861.

Q. The original loan was $400,000, was it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. We come now, Mr. Hillman, to the second item on Exhibit No. 3, being Richmond & Danville Railroad stock. State whether or not you examined the same records for the purpose of ascertaining the stock ownership by the Commonwealth of Virginia in that company.

The Master: One moment, before you pass the other exhibit, the balance due on the loan, if I get the exhibit correctly, with the capital stock of the road, under some arrangement was taken care of by bond issue and not paid in cash? I infer that from the appearance of the exhibit.

Mr. Holt: I would like the witness to answer that question if he will do it promptly and go along and relieve me.

The Master: Mr. Witness, please state what the fact is with reference to the manner in which the balance due on this loan was finally paid, whether or not it was paid in cash as a separate item, and if not paid in cash, if it was adjusted and how it was adjusted.

The Witness: It was adjusted by a payment of $834,398.88 in Virginia State bonds which carried with them unpaid interest of $186,548.49. Then in addition to that they anticipated their payments. They were to pay by installments of one, two, three, four, five and six, at six months intervals. They anticipated those and were allowed a discount for those anticipations, which are shown in detail on the last page, the total being $1,137,906.99, which happens to be just $1.02 over the amount of the loan.

The Master: The amount of the loan and stock?

The Witness: The amount of the loan and stock, yes, sir.

The Master: That is to say, you have an entry there of par of stock $874,500, which makes your estimate of $1,137,906, that with the balance due on the loan was taken care of by surrender to the State of these bonds with the overdue interest thereon and these anticipations which you have testified to?

The Witness: Yes, sir, discounting the payment. In the meantime the reduction of the loan from the $400,000 down to the $212,000 shown at the top of Sheet No. 3 of Asset 1 had been paid in money. The interest payments or these payments of so much per annum, annuity payments they might be called, had reduced the loan from its original value of $400,000 down to $212,844.94 as shown upon the first entry of Sheet No. 3 of Asset No. 1, and those payments which had entered into that reduction of loan had been made in money and not in bonds.

The Master: Was the $874,500 in par value of stock held by the State of Virginia in this road?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

The Master: And the road was therefore paying the State the amount of this stock in this adjustment?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

The Master: As well as the amount of the balance due on the loan?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

Mr. Holt: As I understand, the date at which the settlement was effected was October 17, 1872?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

The Master: On March 28, 1872, or October 17th, which date?

The Witness: October 28th, the last payment was made.

Mr. Holt: October 28, 1872.

The Master: That is when the State bonds were returned?

The Witness: Yes, sir. You will notice that there is a payment on March 28th, which is after the first installment.

The Master: Yes.

The Witness: But whatever it was it does not seem to have anything above it at that time, and the totals of it are included in the bonds which are listed below, which is the reason that a heavy line is drawn under it, and while there is nominally a payment on March 28, 1872, yet the total of that installment together with the following installment is all settled on October 28th, and exactly what became of whatever was turned in for that first installment of $188,000 the books are silent, but the next entry, October 28, 1872, accounts for the entire price of the stock and loan.

The Master: Held by the State?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

The Master: I understand now the items. I was not quite certain that I understood exactly the method of adjustment.

By Mr Holt:

Q. Now, coming to the second item of Exhibit No. 3, Richmond & Danville Railroad stock, I will ask you, Mr. Hillman, whether or not you have examined the same records and books with a view of ascertaining the stock ownership if any of the Commonwealth of Virginia in that railway company on the 1st day of January, 1861, and prior thereto.

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. What number of shares did she own in 1861, January 1st, in that road?

A. 12,000 shares of stock, at a par value of 100, but at a cost to her of $1,188,598.50.

Q. Was that purchase price above or below par?

A. It is slightly below par.

The Master: Does that appear on the exhibit, does it show these details?

The Witness: Yes, sir; that appears on the original Exhibit 3-A, 12,000 shares—

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Mr. Hillman, I suppose that by dividing 12,000 into $1,188,598.50 you would ascertain what was paid per share, would you not?

A. Yes, sir; it would be almost exactly $99 per share.

Mr. Harrison: Where do you find that?

Mr. Holt: I have asked him a question. He has the data for the calculation, but not carried out.

The Master: That particular computation does not appear.

Mr. Holt: No, it does not appear.

The Master: Does anything appear on the books to show how it happened that that peculiar price of $99 was paid?

The Witness: No, sir, there is nothing on the books at that date to say how many shares the State acquired. The total cost of the shares is all that is shown on the books until we come to the settlement, and then it was shown that the State did own 12,000 shares and had acquired them at a cost of $1,188,598.50, but until we come to the settlement nowhere does the number of shares that they held show.

The Master: Then on account of these facts which you have just stated you make your deduction that it cost the State about $99 per share?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Did you examine the books of that company or the record of Virginia with a view of ascertaining the book value per share of that stock on January 1, 1861?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. What did you ascertain from there its book value to be?

A. On September 30, 1860, the book value was $137.37 per share, the 100 being par of the stock. I did not bring the value any further than this because it was the nearest date to January 1, 1861.

Q. Your last column then of $1,632,777.76 represents, as I understand it, the book value of the 12,000 shares, the total book value as of September 30, 1860?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, have you a supplemental exhibit that shows the detail of your calucations and your processes in arriving at this book value?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. How have you marked the schedule just referred to?

A. Hillman Exhibit No. 3 in the upper right hand corner, Asset No. 2.

Q. Will you file this schedule as a part of your deposition and mark the same Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, Asset No. 2?

A. Yes, sir, I file it and it is so marked.

Admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, Asset No. 2, August 18, 1914, C. B.

Q. Mr. Hillman, will you please explain to the Master this Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, Asset No. 2, showing the process by which you arrived at the par value per share of the Richmond & Danville Railroad Company stock as of September 30, 1860?

A. The same methods were pursued in this case as in the case of the Orange & Alexandria Railroad, and for the same reasons, there being no records as far as I could find outstanding of this Richmond & Danville road. The Southern Railway Company stated to me personally that all their records concerning it were burnt and they had nothing to show. I was compelled therefore, as in the Orange & Alexandria case, to go back to the original record filed with the State.

The Master: When did this fire take place?

The Witness: I do not know the date of the fire. I was so informed of that by Mr. Plant, the comptroller of the Southern Railway, five weeks ago in Ashville, North Carolina where I was in attendance on a railway rate case and made the request of him to allow the examination of these books. I understand that there has been considerable correspondence since to see whether they could be obtained from other officials of the company, though the comptroller is the proper custodian, and that those also are without avail, that they have not got them.

The Master: You did not learn when the fire took place?

The Witness: I did not ask that, but I understood it was some years ago.

Mr. Holt: I was also informed by Mr. Thom, the general counsel of the Southern at the present time, that those ancient records were destroyed by fire several years ago.

The Master: Was this an accidental destruction or intentional?

Mr. Holt: Accidental.

The Witness: I would say, your Honor, that it was long before this case was thought of.

The Master: I did not mean that. I was wondering whether they were old records that they had got through with and had burned up or whether the fire was accidental.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. What was the last trial balance if any you found for this road in the records of Virginia?

A. On this same public document No. 17 which has been mentioned before, in the report of 1856, in the trial balance of this road, wherein the par of the stock is shown as $1,975,040.

The Master: What was shown on that trial balance?

The Witness: The par value of the stock.

The Master: Is that par value or book value?

The Witness: The par value of the stock on the books of the company.

The Master: You mean the total stock?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

The Master: Not stock held by Virginia?

The Witness: No, sir.

The Master: Then that explains an apparent discrepancy on these schedules. I understand that this item of $1,975,040 was the total capitalization so far as stock is concerned of this railroad, but that the State of Virginia held only $1,200,000 in par value, is that it?

The Witness: Yes, sir, certainly.

The Master: That explains it.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Mr. Hillman, you might run through with this since we have started on it. Hereafter I would like to abbreviate in some way if I can.

A. In 1857 we find that the operating profit is $139,489.12, which added to the previous profit was $337,008.02, or $117.04. Here again the method of reporting to the State had been changed and we were without complete trial balances and had therefore carried the profits from year to year above operating expenses, taxes, interest and dividends as a profit which should be added to the profit and loan account of the last trial balance which we had on hand. In 1858 there was added a profit of $154,305.76, making a total profit up to date of $491,313.78, showing the stock to have a book value of $124.80. In 1859 there were added $103,287.94 to the profit and loss account, making the surplus $594,601.72, or $130 per share. In 1860 there were added $145,821.08 to the previous surplus, making $740,422.80 per share, which gives a book value of $137.37 per share of $100 of the Richmond & Danville stock at the nearest date to January 1, 1861. In order to avoid any trouble or criticism I have applied that value which I found of $137.37 to the amount of money which the State had invested in this road and not to the 12,000 shares which it had invested in the road.

The Master: You have treated the actual purchase price as par value instead of nominal par value?

The Witness: Yes, sir, for this purpose only.

The Master: For the purpose of reaching the book value?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

The Master: Had there been any dividends declared and paid by this company during this period?

The Witness: Yes, sir, in 1859—

Mr. Holt: That is shown in Class D.

The Master: Then I am anticipating. Does that complete that branch of it?

Mr. Holt: That completes that, I think, your Honor.

The Master: Then we will suspend for five minutes.

Mr. Holt: My idea was simply to show, Mr. Harrison, the book value of that Richmond & Danville Railroad stock by the supporting exhibit, asset No. 2.

Q. What was the exhibit that you just testified to, how was it marked, Mr. Hillman?

A. Hillman Exhibit No. 3, Asset 2, in the upper right hand corner; it should be marked Class C in the upper left hand corner.

Q. Was there anything further that you wanted to explain with reference to the stock of the Richmond & Danville Railroad Company? You have given us its book value on Exhibit No. 3 and the process by which you arrived at it on No. 3, Asset 2, have you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You completed all there was on that Asset No. 2 sheet, did you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will take up the loan now of the Richmond & Danville, and that is where you get into a sheet that has both the stock and the loan mixed up?

A. Class C and D in the upper left hand corner.

Q. Mr. Hillman, we come now to the loan to the Richmond & Danville Railroad. It is set down on Exhibit No. 3 as of the value of January 1, 1861, of $565,803.34. Have you prepared a supporting exhibit showing how you have arrived at that value of that loan as of that date?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. How have you marked the Exhibit?

A. Hillman Exhibit 3 and 4.

Q. Is it not Exhibit No. 3, ought it not to be so filed at least, Exhibit No. 3? Is there more than one sheet of it?

A. There are two sheets of it.

The Master: One is not marked at all, and the other one is marked Sheet 2.

Q. Go on and tell how you have marked it?

A. I have marked it Hillman Exhibit 3 and 4, Asset C-2, Asset D-2, in the upper right hand corner; and Class C and Class D in the upper left hand corner.

Q. Will you file this exhibit and mark it Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, Asset 2, Sheets 1 and 2?

A. Yes, sir; I now file it marked as you have stated.

The sheets were admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, Asset 2, Sheets Nos. 1 and 2, August 18, 1914, C. B.

Q. Please take the exhibit just now filed and explain to the Master how you arrived at the value of the loan to the Richmond & Danville Railroad Company, as set down in Defendant's Exhibit No. 3.

A. The loan is shown upon Ledger B at folio 240 of the Internal Improvement Fund as of January 1, 1861, to have a value of $600,000.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. To have a value, do you mean that is the amount of the loan?

By the Master:

Q. You mean that is the entry on the book?

A. That is the entry on the book, yes, sir.

The Master: That settles that, and it is all you can say about it. Now you establish the value of the loan by other evidence. The entry speaks for itself.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. When you start out with your answer I wish you would state what sheet you are testifying from. I am looking mainly on one, and you seem to be speaking from No. 2?

A. On sheet No. 2 of this exhibit is shown an entry from Folio 240, Ledger B, Internal Improvement Fund, date January 1, 1861, $600,000, for the Richmond & Danville loan. Due to the partial payment plan on which this and other loans were computed, as shown by page 12 of Senate document and Journal No. 12, in 1881-82, its value on September 30, 1860, was $567,786.54.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. You mean that was what was shown on the books?

By the Master:

Q. You mean that the books show that on that date the amount of that loan, after those computations and entries were made and taken into account was $567,786.54—that is what you mean, is it not?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. The value, Mr. Hillman, is what we are trying to prove; we do not want to assume it.

The Master: Get the amounts in the books in the first instance, and then follow it up by trying to show its value.

Mr. Holt: Proceed, Mr. Hillman?

A. Following this plan we arrive at a value on January 1, 1861, as follows—these now are my computations, based on the same plan, since the next entry on this book which I have quoted, Senate document and Journal, carries it far beyond January 1, 1861.

By the Master:

Q. Do you mean by that that this item that you are now giving is not predicated upon actual entries on the books or that it is predicated upon items of yours independent of the books?

A. The item at which I am going to arrive is predicated upon a computation.

Q. But the computation does not appear upon the books?

A. No, sir, for the reason that the next computation is a year later on, on this book. They make no computation January 1, 1861. The next computation is September 30, 1861, so I have to follow the same plan.

Q. Is your computation predicated upon entries in the books and made to fit the date of January 1, 1861?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that the computation is predicated upon actual entries? You say following this plan—when you say following this plan, you mean that you take the entries upon the books, and while they only carry you up to September 30, you make a computation on the same plan from September 30, 1860, up to January 1, 1861?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have to make the computation in order to get the figure on that date, there being no computation of January 1, 1861?

A. Yes sir. That would add interest from September 30, 1860, to January 1, 1861, of $8,516.80. There would then be due an annual payment upon this stock.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Is it stock or loan?

A. Upon this loan interest was accrued on January 1st of $21,000, being a six months interest for annuity payments. As the computation had already been made on the Senate document up to September 30th, we are only entitled to a credit of one-half of that amount, or $10,500. We have therefore deducted $10,500 from the sum of the principal on September 30, 1860, plus interest up to January 1st, which amounted to $576,303.54, and thus obtained the value of this loan on January 1, 1861, as $565,803.34.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. What do you mean by less one-quarter annuity of $42,000?

A. Each year they were compelled to pay 7 per cent. on $600,000, which made $42,000. They had established in this Senate document the value of this loan—excuse me, the face of this loan, as $567,786.54 on September 30, 1860. There was therefore due on January 1, 1861, one-quarter of the annual payment, which amounts to $10,500.

Q. Well you add first $8,516.80 of interest up to January 1st, from September 30th?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then deduct the one-quarter of the $42,000?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that paid?

A. Yes, sir, that was afterwards paid. On February 4, 1861, the $21,000, of which this $10,500 was a part, was paid into the treasury of Virginia.

By the Master:

Q. How was it paid, in semi-annual installments?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you have treated it as a credit here in order to carry both sides of the account up to January 1, 1861?

A. Yes, sir. It was due January 1, 1861, but it was not paid until February. There was no account made of that lapse of interest, however.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. What was the final disposition of this loan as shown by this exhibit, if so shown?

A. The loan was finally paid on July 8, 1884; as shown upon the Journal N, Board of Public Works, Folio 631, on July 1, 1882, for the first payment—

Q. What was that payment, how much and what manner of payment?

A. $282,000 of coupon bonds of the State of Virginia and fractional certificates of $10,436.41.

Q. When was the next payment on it made, and where do you get the record on it, if you get any record?

A. The next payment was made on September 28, 1882, folio 632 of Journal N, Board of Public Works Department, wherein there was paid in State bonds $38,500, and fractional certificates of $13.76. On the same date, page 635 of the same book, there was paid in bonds of $91,996 and fractional certificates of $86.91. On July 8, 1884, from the record book of the Sinking Fund, on file in the Second Auditor's office, folio 285, it was shown that $15,700 of bonds was turned in, and fractional certificates for $166.37, and cash for 55 cents, making a total payment of $438,900, to which amount the principal of this loan has been reduced on the partial payment plan upon this date.

By the Master:

Q. How did you happen to get that last item in out of its order in your exhibit, was there any reason for that?

A. No, sir, it was accidental, and I do not know how it occurred.

Q. I did not know but there might be some occasion for it?

A. No, sir, it was accidental. I do not know how it occurred.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. In that connection, does your record show when those bonds were issued?

A. No, they do not.

Q. Do you mean to say the State records do not show? I asked you if your record did not show?

A. My record does not show.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Have you examined the records of Virginia or the records and books of the Richmond & Petersburg Railroad Company with a view of ascertaining the ownership of stock in that company by the Commonwealth of Virginia on and prior to the 1st day of January, 1861?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Mr. Harrison: Before you continue that subject, Judge, I would like to call your attention to the fact that we were handed a sheet in connection with the Richmond & Danville Road, dealing with stocks, showing their disposition, I suppose, which has not been testified to.

Mr. Holt: The point about it is just this—

Mr. Harrison: If it is not intended to be, I want to know.

Mr. Holt: A part of that exhibit we now use and a part we do not use until we come to Class D.

Mr. Harrison: You did, however, use that same sheet with reference to the Orange & Alexandria?

Mr. Holt: But only for the purpose of showing what it showed on the subject of loans.

The Witness: But I think a red pencil should be drawn across those to show what I have not testified to. Owing to the haste in which those exhibits were gotten up, the final disposition of the stock was not shown upon them.

The Master: I should like to have the counsel see that that is taken care of, because if I should find that a certain schedule was not supported by oath I should have to disregard it.

Mr. Holt: It was not my intention to make any inquiry at all concerning the disposition of those stocks.

The Master: But you do intend to inquire about it later?

Mr. Holt: Yes, when we come to Class D it may become necessary. What I am trying to get through with is this omnibus Exhibit No. 3. Take the Orange & Alexandria by way of illustration, it sets down thereunder the number of shares of stock and what its book value was on a certain date. Then we come to a supporting exhibit, which is Asset No. 1, Exhibit 3, which shows the process by which he arrived at the book value of that stock set down in the omnibus exhibit. Then we come to loan on that railroad, and then we come to supporting exhibits to show the value of that loan on a certain date. But those exhibits have certain things on them which I did not intend to inquire about at this time.

The Master: Of course it will be understood by counsel on both sides that the blue prints submitted by Mr. Hillman are not proof and go for nothing, unless supported either by Mr. Hillman's evidence or that of some other party. If my attention is later called to the fact that it is not supported by oath, the blue print of itself will go for nothing.

Mr. Holt: Of course the Master understands that we have reserved the right to inquire about those things if we choose.

The Master: Oh, yes, it is open to anybody at any time until the hearing is closed to do that. But I would like to have the counsel see that whatever they desire is at some time in the case put in. My recollection is that in the main you have supported all the schedules you have put in here before.

Mr. Holt: Yes, sir, we have undertaken to do so at least.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. How many shares of stock did the Commonwealth of Virginia own in the Richmond & Petersburg Railroad Company on January 1, 1861, if any?

A. 3,856 shares, par value of $100 each.

Q. Have you undertaken to ascertain from the books and records of Virginia, examined by you, or any other books and records, especially of this company itself, the book value of its stock as of January 1, 1861?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. What have you ascertained it to be?

A. At the nearest date to January 1, 1861, which is September 30, 1860, I have ascertained it to be $121.86 per share, the shares being $100.

Q. Have you prepared a schedule or exhibit showing the processes and the figures and the references to books from which taken, by which you have ascertained that book value?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. How have you marked it?

A. I have marked it in the upper right hand corner Hillman Exhibit No. 3, Asset 3.

Q. Will you file it now as part of your deposition and mark it Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, Asset 3?

A. I now file it so marked.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, Asset 3, August 18, 1914, C. B.

Q. Does this exhibit show the processes by which you arrived at the book value per share of the Richmond & Petersburg Railroad Company on January 1, 1861, or September 30, 1860?

A. Yes, sir, it does.

Q. Will you please go over this exhibit in detail and explain to his Honor how you reached the par value per share of $121.86?

The Master: As far as I am concerned, Judge, I do not know how it may appeal to the other side, but prima facie, as far as I go, all you need to ask him is whether this blue print correctly states the method of computation; unless you desire it more in detail as far as you go, leaving the criticism of it to the other side.

Mr. Holt: I was going to do that after the process was thoroughly understood by going over one exhibit.

The Master: So far as I am concerned it is sufficient to have the witness state that the exhibit states accurately the computations that he has made.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. You may tell the Master, Mr. Hillman, whether or not this exhibit, Hillman No. 3, Asset 3, correctly and truly sets forth the result of your examination and your calculation indulged in in making or ascertaining the book value of this stock?

A. Yes, sir, it does.

Q. Under the third item on Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, under the heading of Richmond & Petersburg Railroad stock, I find the item Dividend bonds, $33,408. What is meant by that item?

A. It means that in lieu of issuing dividends in cash for some prior years, the Richmond & Danville had issued a bond to its stockholders to represent the dividend, of which the State had received $33,408, which it had on January 1, 1861, as a dividend.

Q. What road were you talking about then?

A. Richmond & Petersburg.

Q. You said Richmond & Danville?

A. I will ask the stenographer to correct it if I did.

Q. Have you prepared an additional exhibit on this item?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. How have you marked it?

A. Hillman Exhibit No. 3, Asset 3, Sheet 1, in the upper right hand corner; Class C and D in the upper left hand corner.

Q. Will you file this exhibit and mark it Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, Asset No. 3, Sheet 1, as part of your deposition?

A. I now file it, so marked.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, Asset No. 3, Sheet No. 1, August 18, 1914, C. B.

Q. You may tell us whether or not this exhibit truly sets forth the result of your examination of the records of Virginia or the books of the company involved and the calculations made by you therefrom?

A. Yes, sir, it does.

Q. Does this exhibit give the reference to the volume, file, book, page, etc., of the records examined by you upon which these conclusions are based?

A. Yes, sir, it does. Perhaps I had better call attention to the fact that the dividend bonds were cashed in in this instance.

By the Master:

Q. They were paid in cash by the railroad?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. With interest?

A. Yes, sir, interest being kept up on them continually from the time they were issued until the time they were paid off, paid regularly.

Q. That is, interest on these dividend bonds was paid when due by the railroad company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The item of inteest does not appear on this schedule; I do not see any item of interest here.

A. No, sir, it does not appear, as it had been paid, upon these dividend bonds; it had been paid, though due January 1st, it had been paid right up to this date by an entry on December 31st.

Q. Whatever the fact was about the interest, the interest that had accrued was paid?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you also said that the principal of these bonds was paid to the State in cash November 7, 1861?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is the entry that you have, dividend due January 1, 1861, paid February 28, 1861? That is in addition to the bond dividend?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is in addition to the dividend paid by bond?

A. Yes sir. The dividend paid by bond had been paid on account of dividend due some years prior and had been entered on the company's books as bonds.

Q. This next entry, ledger B, internal improvement fund?

A. It is ledger of the internal improvement fund, folio 184, January 1, 1861, which shows the par of the stock outstanding to be $385,600, and immediately below it we show the disposal of that stock. In showing the disposal of the stock, the original ledger entry had been lost sight of, as the stock was disposed of at 150.

Mr. Harrison: You mean all stock of the Richmond & Petersburg Railroad Company?

The Witness: Yes, sir; that is, the amount held by the State.

Mr. Harrison: That is the amount of stock owned by the State?

The Witness: Yes, sir, the amount of the stock held by the State was $385,600, which was disposed of at $150 per share, and made a return of $578,400.

Mr. Harrison: Settled by bonds of the State taken at $150?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

Q. To whom was that stock sold?

A. It was sold to the Richmond & Petersburg Railroad Company, and that railroad now forms part of the Atlantic Coast Line Railway.

Q. The railroad bought its own stock?

A. Yes, sir, paying for it as shown immediately below the entry.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Mr. Hillman, in the exhibit under discussion as well as the exhibits heretofore filed, covering Classes A and B and E, and Class C, as far as we have gone through with it, they refer to various books and records, giving the volume and page, folio, etc. Where are those books kept?

A. The books of the Commonwealth Fund are kept by the First Auditor of the State of Virginia; the books of the Literary Fund, Sinking Fund and Department of Public Works or the Board of Public Works are kept by the Second Auditor.

Q. Second Auditor of what?

A. Of the State of Virginia. Some of the old journals of the Department of Public Works—

The Master: You say Board of Public Works or Department of Public Works?

The Witness: It is the Board.

The Master: Do not then confuse it. Keep to the Board all the time.

The Witness: The Board of Public Works, they are kept or are in custody of the State Corporation Commission, though they keep no books, but some of them are there on file and are held by them.

Q. The State Corporation of what, Jericho or Jerusalem?

A. State of Virginia.

Q. These various entries that appear here, Mr. Hillman, under the heading of C, showing the manner in which this $578,400 was paid—

Mr. Harrison: That was not an obligation; that was the value of the stock. It took $578,400 of bonds to pay off—

The Master: I understand that $578,400 was the amount that the State received for its stock at $150 a share.

The Witness: Yes, sir.

Mr. Anderson: That was paid in State bonds.

By the Master:

Q. Referring to the various entries that appear under this, showing the details of that payment, were those payments in cash or what were those payments in? What do the books show? For instance, here is page 351-2, journal, Internal Improvement Fund, $100; is that cash or State bonds or what?

A. They were paid in State bonds.

Q. How about all the other items; were they paid in State bonds or in cash?

A. All of them were paid in State bonds.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. That is, on this sheet?

A. On this sheet, yes, sir.

The Master: I mean on this schedule. The payments in State bonds aggregate $578,424.13?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

Q. Now, your item of $525.93, was that paid in State bonds or is that a computation of interest upon State bonds?

A. That is interest on bonds.

Q. Was that in cash?

A. No, sir; it was accrued interest on bonds that were turned over.

Q. Here are a number of payments; they were principal of bonds?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then the others were interest on bonds, that is, they took the bonds that were paid in and computed the interest and then credited the parties making the payment with the principal and interest, is that right?

A. Yes, sir; it was accrued interest on the bonds which were turned in.

Q. So that if the bonds were paid in they were figured with the amount of the bonds with the accrued interest at the date of payment?

A. Yes, sir.

The Master: That covers that. The next item I think is 4, Virginia Central Railroad.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Mr. Hillman, item No. 4, in Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, is Virginia Central Railroad stock. Have you examined the records of Virginia or the books of that railway company for the purpose of ascertaining the ownership of stock therein, and if any such stock was owned by Virginia, the extent of the holding on the 1st of January, 1861, or prior thereto?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. What did you find her stock ownership to be on January 1, 1861, and prior thereto?

A. I only found the entry on the books of the company showing the aggregate amount which it had invested in the stock and which was on the books of the company $1,927,382.57.

Q. What did you say that aggregate was?

A. The amount paid for the stock of this company as shown upon the books, $1,927,382.57.

Q. You don't know how many shares that covered?

A. No, sir, I don't know exactly how many shares that covered. There is a statement which shows that at one time they owned—

By the Master:

Q. What is the statement, where do you find it?

A. It is found in a disposal of this stock later on, which we will come to when the Virginia Central is absorbed by another road, where they sold 26,433 and 39/100 shares.

Q. Who sold?

A. The State of Virginia sold to the Virginia Central; it sold it in 1888 and in 1890. The stock was disposed of on various dates and in quantities and prices seen below, as per journal O, Board of Public Works—

Mr. Harrison: What are you reading from?

The Witness: From a subsequent exhibit which I intend to file.

Q. Do you mean to say that there is not anything in any of these accounts of the State of Virginia which contains entries relating to the investment in the stock of this road, which tends to indicate the amount of that stock prior to some twenty-seven years after 1861?

A. No, sir. I have not been able to find anything on either side of the account; there was nothing that would show the par of the stock which they held. I know the amount of money which they had expended to acquire what they had.

Q. We know what the books show as to the purchase, but just exactly what that represents in par value you were not able to ascertain from the books?

A. No, sir.

Q. Where are the books of this Virginia Central Company, are they also destroyed or lost?

A. Yes, sir, there is no trace of them.

Q. And is there anything on the books of Virginia indicating any purchase of stock between January 1, 1861, and this date in 1888?

A. Yes, sir, they purchased; they made several payments.

Q. You introduce them later on?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does this entry from which you get your item of $1,927,382.57 consist of one entry or is it the aggregate of entries?

A. It is the aggregate of several entries.

Q. Covering what period of time?

A. It was prior to January 1, 1861.

Q. Yes, but it is the aggregate of several entries?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then my question is what period of time do those entries cover?

A. I have not got that data here with reference to that. I can get it for you in a very short time if you desire and answer your question in ten minutes.

Q. Is there not anything on those books that indicates the amount of stock that was purchased by those various payments?

A. No, sir.

Q. How does the entry read, if you can remember? Just give me the verbatim entry.

A. It is generally credit the Treasurer and debit the stock with payment on account of stock on such and such company, so much money; sometimes shares are mentioned, and then we are able to determine, and sometimes they are not.

Q. But in this particular road are the shares mentioned.

A. No, sir. I would not like to say that in no instance are they mentioned.

Mr. Anderson: I do not think there is any doubt in the world that certificates of stock were issued, and were held by the Board of Public Works for all this stock in this road. All this evidence that we have had today has not, so far as I can see, the remotest bearing upon the question of the value of these assets either on the 1st of January, 1861, or on the 20th of June, 1863.

The Master: That is a matter of course to be discussed later.

Mr. Anderson: It is such a waste of time. This Virginia Central Railroad stock was sold as low as two dollars, in the public market in New York, and sold by the thousand shares as low as two dollars.

Mr. Holt: When?

Mr. Anderson: Before this transaction we are talking about, along in 1880 and 1881, 1879 and 1880.

Mr. Holt: We are not interested in 1881.

The Master: Is it contended that the book values as disclosed by competent testimony, either from the books of Virginia or from the books of the railroad company, is not competent evidence bearing upon the question of the actual market value? Because that is the single question raised by the testimony.

Mr. Anderson: What Virginia got for the stock has nothing to do with its value, we claim.

The Master: That depends altogether upon the remoteness or otherwise of the evidence. Of course if Virginia had this stock on hand January 1, 1861, and succeeded in selling it on January 31, 1861, it would be difficult to say that the price that she obtained was not some evidence of value. That only shows that the period and time when the sale took place may of course affect the probative value of the evidence, and it may be so remote that in my judgment it won't have any value at all; but the question now before us is whether or not the book value as evidenced by the books of the Commonwealth or by the books of the railroad company or any legitimate source, whether that is or is not a competent factor bearing upon the question of value.

Mr. Holt: Our position is this, we are not asking this witness nor do his schedules show whether Virginia ever sold those stocks. In the case of the Virginia Central Railroad he sets out the book value as of January 1, 1861, as $131.16. Then we come in a moment to the underlying exhibit that shows the processes by which and the records from which he arrives at that book value, the contention being, as your Honor has already indicated, that a very strong evidence always of the value of a stock is its book value, because the courts have held from the earliest periods—

The Master: I do not think that the Virginia people seriously contest the fact that that may be a factor entering into the value. I will not say in advance what I am going to hold, but I may not hold that book value is actual market value. The only question here now is, if Virginia raises the question that the testimony is not competent, as to whether or not I shall admit the testimony as having a bearing upon the question as to what the market value is. Everything that you have put in up to date practically relates to the book value.

Mr. Holt: Except that in the case of some of these companies we have given you the dividends received semi-annually, which is another factor. The Supreme Court of the United States and all of our courts have repeatedly held that those are the factors from which—you may not do it singly and alone, but from which in the aggregate the actual value is determined. There may be a difference between market value and actual value; it may have an actual value, but may have no market value, and we have to be governed by the circumstances of each particular case, and especially where there is no market value, the Supreme Court held that you must ascertain its actual value by a comparison of its assets and liabilities and the activities of the securities in arriving at the book value, which is the main factor for actual value.

The Master: The only question I wished to ascertain right now was whether the counsel for Virginia seriously contest the competency of the testimony as to the book value as a factor bearing upon what may ultimately be held to be the actual value.

Mr. Anderson: We cannot answer that, because we do not know what you propose to make of this evidence; but what my remarks related to was this, that what Virginia got ten or fifteen or twenty years after the formation of West Virginia has nothing on God's earth to do with the value of that property. We will prove that the stock was worthless at intermediate times.

Mr. Holt: There is not a word on that exhibit about what she got for this stock.

The Master: There is no contention about that. I understand perfectly General Anderson's proposition, and when we come to that question, that is a question which will be considered and passed upon; but the only question now is whether the testimony showing the book value is a competent factor to take into account in determining the actual value, whether it is a factor to be taken into account, one of the factors.

Mr. Anderson: I just want to call attention to the worthless testimony of the witness, as to its probative value I mean, as to the value of this stock twenty or thirty years ago; I am not talking about these exhibits, but his testimony.

Mr. Holt: We showed when loans were finally paid off; we had to show that to show a solvent debtor, in order to get at the value of the loan as an asset.

Mr. Anderson: Capital stock is not a loan.

Mr. Holt: It has some bearing upon it. To use the illustration of Brother Robinson, if I loan A five hundred dollars, whether or not it is worth anything at all depends upon the financial condition of Mr. A, but if we find that Mr. A comes up and settles in full principal and interest we can take it for granted that he was solvent at least and the loan worth something.

The Master: That of course is one way of answering the proposition.

Mr. Harrison: In response to your Honor's inquiry as to whether or not we were raising the objection as to the competency of the evidence, the proof as to the book value of this stock as having a bearing upon its actual value, so far as I am concerned, and I think I state the views of my associates, we will contend at the proper time that the so-called book value established here is no evidence whatsoever and does not aid at all in establishing the question of the actual value of these securities at that particular time; but we are not raising that question now and making an objection to it and asking your Honor to pass upon it, because, as I understand from your ruling this morning, you do not propose to throw any obstacle in the way of the introduction of anything that our friends on the other side or we either may choose to put in which we may think has a tendency to support our respective positions.

The Master: The ruling which I announced this morning is not quite as broad as that. I propose to make a liberal application of the rules of evidence, but when it comes to the question whether or not it is competent or otherwise, I am going to determine that; I am not going to turn that over to the counsel on either side.

I do not understand now that serious objection is made to this line of inquiry, and that being the case it is not necessary for me to rule. When a question arises and there is a reasonable doubt about the matter I shall probably give counsel on either side the benefit of the doubt, but I am not going to admit everything that counsel think they want to get into the case, that is, I am not going to admit in advance that their judgment is going to guide mine; but within reasonable limits whatever either side wishes to put in I shall let in; if it is a reasonably debatable proposition I am going to give either party the benefit of the doubt, and if you get beyond what I think is a reasonable limit I shall shut you out.

Mr. Holt: I have one suggestion, and that is this, taking up one illustration, on the schedules that we introduced on the bank stocks we showed unquestionably, I think beyond controversy, in the case of all these banks that on the dates selected by us that they had a book value above par. We showed that during five years before and upon that year, and five years succeeding they were paying 8 per cent. dividends; we put in that evidence, and the market quotations might go in at the same time. Then we come to these railroad stocks, and put in evidence the actual demonstrable values from the records as of that date. Then when that evidence was all in we expected to discuss that question before your Honor as to the factors to be considered for the purpose of ascertaining the actual value of stock. We have already briefed the case, but we do not want to put the cart before the horse.

The Master: Precisely. There is no misunderstanding of course. I appreciate General Anderson's proposition too. You may proceed.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. I will ask you, Mr. Hillman, what you ascertained to be or to have been the book value of the Virginia Central Railroad Company's stock as of January 1, 1861, or the nearest date thereto ascertainable.

A. $131.16 per share.

Q. Is that set down on your Exhibit No. 3?

A. It is, yes, sir.

Q. Have you prepared a supporting or underlying exhibit showing the records upon which you relied and the calculations made by you therefrom in ascertaining this book value?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. How have you marked it?

A. I have marked it in the upper right hand corner Hillman Exhibit No. 3, Asset No. 4.

Q. Will you file it as part of your deposition, marking it Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, Asset No. 4.

A. I will file it, marked as stated in the upper right hand corner, and also mark it Class C in the upper left hand corner.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, Asset No. 4, August 18, 1914, C. B.

The Master: I understand the witness has testified that this is an accurate statement of his computation from the records.

The Witness: I have one explanation that I wish to make.

The Master: Certainly, make it.

The Witness: You will note on Exhibit No. 3, the original exhibit of which this is the supporting exhibit, that the par of the stock or the value of the stock which we have used, is $131.16, which is less than the face holding of the stock—

The Master: What you mean is that it is less than what appears by the books to have been paid for the stock?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

The Master: In the absence of any number of shares you cannot state any of the holdings; why do you make that change?

The Witness: For this reason, that the amount of stock upon which $131.16 per $100 was shown, when we found the value of this stock, showed only $1,891,670.60 paid by the State, and therefore we could not derive a value from a lesser amount of stock and then apply it to a larger amount of stock; that we had to take the stock paid in on that date when we determined the value of $131.16, paid in by the State on that date and apply that value to that lesser amount.

The Master: Let me see if I understand this. Do I understand that the books that you had access to showed paid in by the State on January 1, 1861, $1,891,670.68?

The Witness: No, sir.

The Master: What did they show?

The Witness: They showed that on September 30th, the date upon which we determined the value of this stock was $131.16.

The Master: Where did you find the entry of $1,927,382.57?

The Witness: That is the amount that the State had invested on January 1st, three months later.

The Master: Then the books showed this; on September 30, 1860, they showed an aggregate of $1,891,670.68, and the books also showed that between that date and January 1, 1861, enough in addition had thereto been paid in to make up the aggregate of $1,927,382.57, is that right?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

The Master: As I understand it now, you have in making your computation of the book value, predicated your $131.16 per $100. par value a share upon the amount that appeared to have been paid off September 30, 1860, instead of upon the amount that appears to have been paid off by the State, January 1, 1861?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

The Master: In other words, you have given to the State the benefit of the doubt, is that it?

The Witness: That is my intention.

The Master: Was there any other reason why you took the smaller instead of the larger sum?

The Witness: None at all.

The Master: And that explains the discrepancy between the two?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

Mr. Holt: Let me see if I understand it, your Honor. He finds that on the 30th day of September, 1860, which was a settlement period, that Virginia owned the lesser amount of stock.

The Master: He finds that she had paid that sum, the lesser sum.

Mr. Holt: But that then three months after she had paid more and owned more stock.

The Master: Precisely.

Mr. Holt: Now, he does not undertake to get the book value sharply as of January 1, 1861, but as of the nearest ascertainable date, namely, September 30, 1860; therefore he must take the lesser amount of stock on hand or paid for at that time, is that the idea?

The Master: That is the way I understand it.

The Witness: That is correct.

The Master: Of course counsel upon both sides understand that whenever I put an inquiry here the object is to clear up something that is not entirely clear in my own mind. I ought to say perhaps that since I made my report I have not examined either the report or anything in this case; I have not made any examination of any kind. I thought I would come here with my mind entirely open, and it is not only entirely open but pretty nearly vacant as to a great many of these details, so it is necessary for me to make some of these inquiries in order for me to get into touch with the details. I thought I would take the case as it developed and I would have it fresh in my mind.

Mr. Hogg: Your mind will not be vacant when you get through with this case.

The Master: I thought the better way for me would be to wait for the case to develop, and the result is that on many of the details I will need to refresh my mind when I come to write my report, so I may make some apparently unintelligent inquiries as I go along.

Mr. Holt: No. My experience has been that in your inquiries you not only help yourself but you are helping us too. We are not complaining at all.

Q. Mr. Hillman, you may tell us whether or not the exhibit just filed, No. 3, Asset No. 4, correctly sets forth and accurately and truly the calculations made by you upon this subject derived from the books and records examined by you?

A. Yes, sir, they do.

Adjourned to August 19th, 1914, at 10 A. M.

BEFORE THE MASTER.

Richmond, Va., August 19, 1914.

Present same counsel as on yesterday.

[NOTE.—Mr. Holt, of counsel for the State of West Virginia, moved the court for a continuance of the cause for a period of two weeks from this date, stating as his reason that the witness on the stand on the day previous, Mr. C. W. Hillman, had received a telegram that his wife was probably dying, and that he had gone to her bedside in Evanston, Ill.

In further support of his motion, Mr. Holt informed the court that Mr. Hillman was the chief accountant for West Virginia and had prepared all the schedules which would be offered in evidence and that he alone knew the facts set forth in the numerous items, and that as one of counsel for the defendant he felt that he and his associates could not proceed further in the absence of the witness.

After a full discussion of said motion, it was agreed by counsel representing both States, with the consent of the Master, that a continuance be had until September 2, 1914, at 10 A. M., providing, however, that the defendant file in evidence all schedules as of 1861, then prepared, the same to be treated as having been testified to as true by the witness, Mr. C. W. Hillman, but subject to cross-examination.

The facts as contained in this note were inadvertently omitted from the stenographer's record by counsel having charge of the editing of the same, and this interpolation is inserted to preserve its continuity.]

The Master: In the multitude and magnitude of this work, of course we can appreciate what Judge Holt says, that the schedules involve a prodigous amount of work. It is easy to see how with the multitude of work these schedules may not have been passed over as quickly in some instances as they might have been. I make the suggestion this morning that from now on when you get your schedules such as you are going to use, after they have had the approval of Judge Holt and of the other counsel for West Virginia, that you hand them to the counsel for Virginia as early as may be before we get around to the hearing. All those things will facilitate progress. I do not know whether Virginia has any schedules or not, but if they do have—

Mr. Anderson: We have not.

The Master: Whatever you may have, as soon as they are completed hand them to West Virginia. I understand that the counsel for Virginia feel that their duty to their clients requires them to say they ought to have the whole case of West Virginia before they begin with the case of Virginia. Am I right about that?

Mr. Harrison: Yes, sir, substantially right.

The Master: I am going to say this, it is just as well to be frank with both sides, I am not going to compel West Virginia to proceed with this case, humanly speaking, unless it is absolutely necessary, in the absence of the testimony of the witness that they believe to be essential to the proper presentation of the facts from their viewpoint. Of course that involves Mr. Hillman, and for the reasons that they have already given, which seem to me at least very satisfactory. Now, the probabilities are that Mr. Hillman would be available for this case as early as the first of next week. Of course we cannot be absolutely certain of that, but I understand from the report made by Governor Hatfield that the great misfortune is liable to occur sometime today. That is the impression you got, Governor?

Governor Hatfield: That is the statement of the doctor.

Mr. Holt: I think we have solved it, your Honor, as far as we are concerned along the same line exactly. I just had a talk with Mr. Harrison. We are willing to do this, and we do not mean to say that things are always dependent upon our volition, we do not state it in that sense at all, but, we are willing to do this, to put in, in accordance with the suggestion made by these gentlemen this morning, the residue of the schedules covering Classes C and E, let them go into the hands of counsel for Virginia, into the record and into the hands of the Master. Then go right along and put in the schedules covering Class F, and then the final Class G; in other words, all schedules in the case covering all classes relative to the year 1861, January 1st. Now, when we shall have done that, your Honor, we will have gone just as far as we presently can go. The accountants are working up the other material now, and as I understand the suggestion of Mr. Harrison, when we shall have accomplished that, they will not oppose the two weeks adjournment for the completion of the schedules.

The Master: That is the way I understand the suggestion; and in the meanwhile it will give you an opportunity, which I have no doubt you will be able to arrange among yourselves. Will you be able meanwhile, will you have anybody connected with your office who will be able to help some one that may represent Virginia to look to the original sources so as to verify so far as they can?

Mr. Hogg: They are all indicated on the schedules.

The Master: I do not know how that may be.

Mr. Hogg: Most of them are.

The Master: There may be something that is not covered on the schedules, and can you have some one who will be available to co-operate with some representative of Virginia so that when we get together at the end of two weeks—can it be understood, Judge, will it be feasible for your people to have some one representing you so far as the sources of information are not indicated on the schedules, to co-operate with some expert accountant representing the plaintiff, so that during this two weeks, they can get at the original sources and then be able to either co-operate or intelligently criticise when they get together at the end of the two weeks?

Mr. Holt: Here is our situation in that regard, we have three or four men here, I do not recall the number, and it is going to keep them exceedingly busy, even if they are free from interruption, to complete all the schedules covering June 20, 1863.

The Master: Yes.

Mr. Holt: Now of course, we have to appreciate the fact all the while, your Honor, that when we hand a schedule over to Virginia for the purpose of being checked up by her accountant, that he might meet with some difficulty unless he had the man who made it to go over it with him; but in order to obviate that trouble you will find that every one of these schedules has on it the folio, the page, the volumes, just where the item comes from; and under the circumstances we thought it would not be necessary for one of our men to stay with Mr. Potter, their accountant, all the time; it would hardly be fair to take him away from the work on our side of the case to just go and turn pages for another man.

The Master: No, I do not see why it should be.

Mr. Holt: And when we have set down in this schedule the books, the office, the folio, the page where this thing appears, then he will be able to find it for himself. Of course if he should find any difficulty, mere ordinary courtesy would compel the other man to answer the questions. They will help as far as they can.

Mr. Harrison: Of course we do not mean for you to direct a man to work for Virginia entirely, but Mr. Potter has worked here before with your experts together whenever one wanted to know what the other was doing.

Mr. Holt: I really believe, Mr. Harrison, that we will find that our accountants when they begin to check up will get along pretty well together.

The Master: The understanding is then that in the verification of these schedules if Mr. Potter runs across anything that he is not able to ascertain from the schedules, he will have no embarrassment in calling on some one representing West Virginia to help him solve the difficulty.

Mr. Holt: We will ask Mr. Potter now whether even up to the present time he has not been working with these gentlemen and if they have not been answering his questions.

Mr. Potter: Yes, sir. There are certain calculations on these schedules that are not in the records of Virginia, and I will be compelled to ask the accountants on the other side for explanations of their calculations. So far as relates to the original books, I have most of them already.

The Master: Now, the understanding is that there will be no embarrassment so far as the accountants on either side are concerned in having them confer with each other when there is anything that develops in the investigation as to which either accountants desire information; they will be quite at liberty to talk with the accountants on the other side.

Mr. Holt: We will go and give explicit directions to that effect to the accountants.

Mr. Anderson: I would like to ask our friends to furnish us with the schedules for June, 1863.

The Master: They have not got those prepared.

Mr. Holt: There is a mass of stuff there out of which the schedules for 1863 are now being evolved. This much is all completed, and when we return here on the eve of this adjournment, whatever the arrangement may be, the schedules covering January 1, 1861, will be completed; and then just as soon as the schedules for June 20, 1863, are completed they will go to you, at the same time they come to us, that is, after we have examined them, I should not say at the same time, but immediately thereafter. Of course I understand that the Master wants to open wide the door to the truth of the situation, and where these accountants can get together and agree, why it is all folly to have any delay or fuss about it.

The Master: Yes. Now, of course I do not know whether Judge Holt may be familiar with the situation that developed in the other case. I will refer to it as indicating the course which was then pursued and which facilitated progress very much. At the original hearing both sides came in with very elaborate and extensive schedules, and the first question that was raised was whether or not they agreed with each other, and it very promptly developed that there were minor items of disagreement involving anywhere from one to five hundred or one thousand dollars, and we heard testimony bearing upon those discrepancies for half a day or so, and finally I ordered the hearing suspended in order that the accountants on each side could get together with their two sets of schedules and harmonize them if possible and so far as they were able, to adjust differences, and the result was that when we got to the next hearing we had one set of schedules covering the whole case, and every schedule harmonized so far as the amount was concerned, which saved a great amount of trouble. I do not mean to say that this same situation will develop here, but I am not going to sit here if it comes down to that and listen to controversies over small items in these various schedules without in the first place making an effort to compel these accountants on either side, assuming that this should develop to get together on those items. I cannot spend my time and the time of the counsel in struggling over small details of that sort, that is mere details that in all probability can be agreed upon; and my hope is that when we get through here, that so far as the computations are concerned and statistics and the figures, there will be an agreement upon all of them, so that all I will have to do is give to them the proper legal weight that they may be entitled to, and it is with that in view that this suggestion is made on the part of Virginia. Do you get my point Mr. Holt?

Mr. Holt: I get your point, and I think this matter will settle itself in the present case in this way, that the schedules for 1861 will be in the hands of Mr. Potter and his accountants and he will check them up, and our people will assist him in checking them, and the chances are that so far as figures are concerned upon which these calculations are based, that there will be no divergence of opinion.

The Master: I do not anticipate that there will be.

Mr. Lilly: I suggest, if your Honor please, that during the two weeks, they will prepare counter statements possibly, and we would like to have those as soon as we can get them.

The Master: The understanding is that any counter statements that are statistical in their character which involve an examination of the books of any kind are to be prepared and presented as early as prepared by Virginia. Now, do you want to go right along, or suspend until the afternoon?

Mr. Harrison: Let us go right along and finish it.

Recess until 2:30 P. M.

AFTER RECESS.

The Master: This printing, I suppose, is going on, and the understanding is that some responsible attorney for both the plaintiff and the defendant supervise this manuscript and eliminate as they go on what they think can be properly eliminated from the record. My own notion is that most of the colloquies that take place, although they are not very extensive, may just as well be eliminated from the record, and so far as that is concerned what ever I may have said during the progress of the hearing, I see no reason why that should not go out of the record. Still, if you want it in it may stay in.

Mr. Holt: Wherever it is necessary to preserve the exact condition of the case it may go in.

The Master: It is not so important to have the colloquy printed in this hearing, because this testimony will be considered on rather broad grounds, and whatever is admitted will be considered if it is competent, no matter what the particular objection was or what assertion may have been made by counsel when it was offered. So my own notion is that you do not need either the colloquies or any suggestions that I have made. Of course if you want them in you may have them in.

Mr. Hogg: Your idea is to have an attorney for each side, working together?

The Master: Yes. I think you ought to have a responsible man on each side who will take the responsibility of saying what ought to go out of the record, and what you do not both agree upon as being proper to go out of the record will be printed. Have some responsible attorney to represent each side, and let them cut out whatever they can agree on.

Mr. Pollard: Will some attorney from West Virginia stay here?

The Master: The stenographer will give you this afternoon everything up to date, and they will have an opportunity to look it over some time this afternoon or evening, and then you can attend to the printing afterwards. All these schedules as far as I can see will have to be printed, and that is going to involve quite a good deal of work, but the printer might just as well be putting it in type. When we get back here we shall have substantially the whole case up to date in print, so far as I can see—I don't see why not.

Mr. Pollard: Are you gentlemen prepared to designate some counsel for that purpose?

Mr. Holt: I suppose Mr. Gregory will be here all the time, and we will try and make some arrangement about it.

The Master: Now, Judge Holt, have you your material in order so that we may proceed?

Mr. Holt: We will do the best we can, your Honor. At the adjournment on yesterday we had reached item 4 on Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, Virginia Central Railroad Company stock, but had not as I recall offered the underlying or supporting exhibit showing the processes by which a book value of $131.26 was given to the stock of that company as of September 30, 1860. I now therefore offer that exhibit.

The Master: That is marked Defendant's Exhibit 3, Asset 4, Sheet 1?

Mr. Holt: I think that asset had only one sheet. This exhibit seems to have been marked by Mr. Hillman as Hillman Exhibit No. 3, Asset 4. We now desire to file it and mark it. Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, Asset 4. It is offered, exhibited and filed as marked, with the understanding, in the absence of Mr. Hillman, that he has testified and the record may so show that said exhibit correctly and truly shows the result of his examination, just as if he had testified to the items herein set down and thereon appearing.

The Master: That same statement and understanding will apply to all of the schedules that are offered this afternoon, so it won't be necessary to repeat it. That covers the whole ground.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, Asset 4, August 19, 1914, C. B.

Mr. Holt: We come now to item No. 4 on this Exhibit No. 3, loan by the Commonwealth of Virginia to the Virginia Central Railroad Company, and in support and explanation thereof—

The Master: Brother Holt, the accountant has handed me one that relates to the disposition of the stock. Which do you wish to offer?

Mr. Holt: We do not care to take up the question of the disposition of the stock at this time, your Honor. The exhibit that I have just filed shows the processes by which the accountant arrived at the book value of the stock.

The Master: Then I will lay that one on one side.

Mr. Holt: We come now to the loan by the Commonwealth of Virginia to the Virginia Central Railroad Company, amounting to $90,032.82, and file in support and explanation thereof an exhibit that we mark Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, Asset C-4 and D-4.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, Asset 4, August 19, 1914, C. B.

The Master: Now, have you one relating to the dividends?

Mr. Holt: This exhibit also covers and explains the item dividend bonds embraced under No. 4 on main Exhibit No. 3. You will find towards the bottom of the page that dividend bonds are there set forth in detail.

The Master: After the letter C?

Mr. Holt: After the letter C. These dividend bonds amount to $143,508.

Next is Item No. 5, on Exhibit No. 3, Blue Ridge Railroad, built by the State, $1,604,723.23, with a value as shown on the main Exhibt No. 3, as of January 1, 1861, of $625,348.80; and we file in support thereof Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, Asset C. No. 5.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, Asset 5, August 19, 1914, C. B.

Mr. Lilly: There is an error in the caption.

Mr. Holt: We observe that in the caption of this exhibit the Blue Ridge Railroad is described as having been built by the State of West Virginia, and it should read built by the State of Virginia.

The Master: Strike out "West."

Mr. Holt: The sixth item on the main exhibit, Defendant's

Exhibit No. 3, is Alexandria, Loudoun & Hampshire Railroad stock, $993,248., with a value indicated thereon as of January 1, 1861, of $49,662.05; and in support thereof we file the supporting or underlying exhibit marked on the right hand corner Hillman Exhibit No. 3, Asset C-6, and mark the same as Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, Asset C-6. Now it may eventuate, your Honor, that some of these letters may mix the thing up somewhat; I stated that yesterday; but if we can make it plain we will get at the truth somehow.

The Master: We will have these printed up to date, and when we come to look the print over if there is any inconsistency or confusion we will straighten it up and have the print correspond.

Mr. Holt: That is the idea exactly..

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, Asset 6, August 19, 1914, C. B.

Mr. Holt: The seventh item on the main exhibit of the defendant, No. 3, is Winchester & Potomac Railroad loan, $83,333.33, with an indicated value thereon as of the date of January 1, 1861, of the same amount; and we file in support thereof an underlying or supporting exhibit marked in the top right hand corner, Hillman Exhibit No, 3, Asset C-7, Asset D-5; in the left hand corner at the top, Class C, Class D, and ask that the same be marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 3.

The papers were admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, Asset 8, Sheets Nos. 1 and 2, respectively, August 19th, 1914, C. B.

Mr. Holt: The ninth item on the main exhibit No. 3, is Southside Railroad Company loan, indicated thereon at $800,000.; and in support thereof we file the underlying exhibit marked in the right hand corner at the top, Hillman Exhibit No. 3, Asset 8, and ask that the same be marked as Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, Asset 8.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, Asset 8, August 19th, 1914, C. B.

Mr. Holt: Coming now to No. 10, upon the main Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, we have Norfolk & Petersburg Railroad loan, indicated there as $300,000., and likewise indicated thereon as of the value of January 1, 1861, of $137,000.; and file in support thereof the underlying exhibit marked in the right hand corner, Hillman Exhibit No. 3, Asset C-10 and Asset D-9, and in the left hand corner, Class C and Class D, and mark the same Exhibit No. 3, Asset No. 10.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, Asset No. 10, August 19, 1914, C. B.

C-12, and ask that it be marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, Asset 12.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, Asset 12, August 19, 1914, C. B.

Mr. Holt: The name of the company, your Honor will keep us straight even if our letters should confuse us. There are so many letters and figures here, and although somewhat of a mathematician, I am confused.

The Master: It is likely to result in confusion unless great care is exercised.

Mr. Holt: No. 13, on the main Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, is Upper Appomattox Company stock, shown as $56,500, and with an indicated value thereon of $16,144.26 on January 1, 1861; and we file in support thereof the underlying exhibit marked in the right hand corner, Hillman Exhibit No. 3, Asset C-13, and in the left hand corner at the top, Class C, and ask that the same be marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, Asset 13.

We come now to Class D, as indicated by the exhibits to the supplemental answer filed in this cause; and in support of that class file a schedule marked in the right hand corner, Hillman Exhibit 4, in the left hand corner at the top, Class D and ask that the same be filed as Defendant's Exhibit No. 4.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 4, August 19, 1914, C. B.

Mr. Holt: We will state in connection with this exhibit that the underlying or supporting exhibits heretofore filed in connection with Class C perform likewise the office of supporting exhibits to this class, and they are specified in detail as follows:

Class D.	Class C.
Asset 1	Defendant's Exhibit 3, Asset 1	(2 sheet)

Asset 20	Defendant's Exhibit 3, Asset 5

Mr. Holt: In addition to the supporting exhibits filed with Class C, we now file in support of Class D, an exhibit marked in the upper right hand corner, Hillman Exhibit 3, Assets D-14 to 19, and in the left hand corner marked Class C and Class D, and this we ask to have marked as Defendant's Exhibit No. 4, Assets 14 to 19.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 4, Assets 14 to 19, August 19, 1914, C. B.

Mr. Holt: In addition to the foregoing we will have to prepare and will present at the next meeting an exhibit in support of this main Defendant's Exhibit No. 4, underlying or supporting item No. 10, which is not yet completed.

The Master: It occurs to me to make this suggestion, that something has been said with reference to what the record in the prior hearing already contains relating to these matters now in controversy. As to what the fact may be in that regard I do not know. But of course it is competent for either side to call attention to whatever may be bound in that record, but I should want each side to be prepared when we come together again to give to the other side a reference to such pages of the original record as they may have occasion to refer to or rely upon, so that if Virginia has any reference she desires to make, you will have them, and so on, and the understanding will be that those will be the pages and the only pages to which my attention will be directed on final argument. Whatever may be in the record I shall want pointed out by page so that I won't have to look it up, and so that the other side will have notice in advance, if there is anything of that sort.

Mr. Holt: That will be done, your Honor, of course. In the briefs we will not only make a citation of authorities, but it is our purpose to spare no labor or expense in making printed comments on the citations, so that we may aid your Honor; but the suggestion that you now make brings me to a matter that I wanted to speak to this morning, but had no opportunity to do so. Of course the statement is persisted in by the gentlemen on the other side that we are bringing nothing new into the record. Of course we do not agree with them on that proposition. Our understanding of it is this, and that brings us right to the matter you mention, that while a great many of these assets may have been mentioned in the record as it formerly stood, the main point now is the value of those assets as of given dates. Our contention is that their values were never ascertained at all heretofore and that those values are not set down in those records. That is the supplemental work that we are trying to do now. In the argument before the court at Washington, every time that we would mention one of these assets our friend upon the other side would produce the record and say, well, here is the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac embraced in the former hearing and embraced in the former report, and we were only threshing over for the second time straw from which the wheat had been theretofore winnowed.

Now, while the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac was mentioned in the former hearing, the value of the stock as of January 1, 1861, in that company and its value as of June 20, 1863, was not determined, and those are the matters that we are now trying to inject into the record, in case your Honor did not hear theretofore, nor the court theretofore hear, of the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac stock, but that the inquiry as it then stood did not call for its valuation, but that the court has sent us back to you now with authority to supplement the record by ascertaining the value as of those dates.

The Master: Your point is that whatever may have been said about these various items in the previous hearing was for one purpose, and whatever is said about them now is for another purpose?

Mr. Holt: Yes.

The Master: And that they are entirely distinct and separate?

Mr. Holt: Yes, sir.

The Master: Whatever the fact may be, of course it is entirely open to you, the purpose that you are now undertaking to serve, there is no question about that. My only suggestion is that if there is anything in the old record that has any legitimate bearing upon this issue, of course if the old record was introduced for one purpose, and the fact that it was introduced has no relation whatever to the pending purpose, it is of no consequence whatever. Upon the other hand, if it has any legitimate bearing upon the present issue, that I believe is a matter for fair consideration.

Mr. Holt: And we should put our fingers, and so should they, upon that portion of the record that has that bearing.

with citations of authorities as to the various propositions upon which the counsel relied, and I did not then have printed briefs going into detail—of course I did not have the questions then that I have now; but this time when we get around to the argument I want each side, and the bondholders as well, prepared to give me a full detailed brief as to both authorities and the analysis of the facts. Then I will have the full contention of either side.

Mr. Holt: Your Honor, in support of Class F as exhibited with and as a part of the supplemental answer in this cause we file and ask to be marked as Defendant's Exhibit No. 6, being Class F, the following schedule or statement, marked in the upper right hand corner, Hillman Exhibit No. 6.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 6, August 19th, 1914, C. B.

Mr. Holt: And as a supporting and underlying exhibit thereto we likewise file a schedule marked in the upper right hand corner, Hillman Exhibit 6-A, and ask that the same be marked as Defendant's Exhibit No. 6-A.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 6-A, August 19, 1914, C. B.

Mr. Holt: We come now, your Honor, to Class G, as exhibited with the supplemental answer, and in support thereof we file a paper marked in the upper right hand corner, Hillman Exhibit No. 7, Asset 1, and in the upper left hand corner, Class G, consisting of two sheets, and ask that the same be marked as Defendant's Exhibit No. 7, Sheets Nos. 1 and 2.

The papers were admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 7, Sheets 1 and 2, August 19, 1914, C. B.

Mr. Holt: We likewise file as a supporting exhibit thereto one marked in the upper right hand corner, Hillman Exhibit

No. 8, and in the upper left hand corner Class G, and ask that it be marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 7-A.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 7-A, August 19, 1914, C. B.

Mr. Holt: We also file in support thereof another supporting exhibit, marked in the upper right hand corner, Hillman Exhibit No. 9, and in the upper left hand corner Class G, and ask that it be filed and marked as Defendant's Exhibit No. 7-B.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 7-B, August 19, 1914, C. B.

Mr. Holt: Gentlemen, you have noticed what was offered here. We stopped, you will observe on Class G, Exhibit No. 7-B. Attached to the papers that were handed to you I suspect were a lot of our schedules concerning taxes and so on. Now, we want to get those papers back, because they are mere private memoranda, and if they should be used hereafter we will furnish them beforehand; but the purpose is not to use them now and perhaps not at all.

The Master: With that suggestion, does that conclude the exhibits?

Mr. Holt: Yes.

Adjourned on motion of defendant to which plaintiff did not object to September 2, 1914, at 10 A. M. because of the extreme illness of the wife of the witness, Hillman, the expert accountant of the defendant.

BEFORE THE MASTER.

Richmond, Va., September 2, 1914.

Met pursuant to the adjournment of August 19th. Present, the same counsel who appeared on the previous days.

The Master: While we are waiting for Judge Holt and Mr. Hillman, I want to find out whether either side has given any notice to the other side of any evidence that was taken in the former hearing that they expect to use and rely upon in connection with this hearing.

Mr. Hogg: If your Honor please, we are at work on that now, but we have not completed it yet on our side.

The Master: Then that will be attended to?

Mr. Hogg: That will be attended to in due time, your Honor.

Mr. Harrison: We have not attempted to do that because we are at liberty to rely on any evidence in the record.

The Master: For the convenience of the other side and myself I want to know what there is in the other hearing that either side may decide to rely on.

Mr. Harrison: That will be pointed out.

The Master: You ought to point out to the other side and they ought to point out to you what is relied on.

Mr. Hogg: We are arranging that, and we will call their attention to it later.

The Master: Do not fail to have it done a sufficient time before the hearing closes so that either side may have an opportunity to put in anything further that they may desire to put in. The suggestion I made to Judge Holt last evening was that he put on Mr. Hillman and complete his direct-examination in relation to the schedules relating to January 1, 1861, and then if it was agreeable to the counsel for Virginia, they could cross-examine as to all the schedules up to 1861, and then later on take up June 20, 1863, and take the direct and cross-examination as to that date, and that will get the testimony all together, if that is agreeable.

Mr. Harrison: I think, if your Honor please, it would be very much more satisfactory to have the witness in chief not only introduce whatever evidence they propose to put in through him relating to the date of January, 1861, but also to June, 1863.

The Master: Before you cross-examine at all?

Mr. Harrison: Yes, sir. It would be not only more logical, but would be in accordance with our own plan and arrangement to complete with both of those dates at the same time.

The Master: Well, whatever you think is the proper method, as far as you are concerned, is agreeable to me. Judge Holt, the counsel for Virginia think that the better way would be to have all the evidence in chief on the part of West Virginia, both as to 1861 and 1863, come in before their cross-examination as to either period. They have so arranged their case, and I should be inclined to allow them to follow their own ideas in connection with that. So that we will start right along this morning with Mr. Hillman, if it is agreeable to you, finishing up with your 1861 schedules, and then taking up your 1863 schedules, and going on with those, if that is agreeable to you, Judge.

Mr. Lilly: If the Master please, we do not want to be captious or over insistent on their going ahead with the cross-examination, but it occurs to me in view of the fact that they have had our schedules and evidence two weeks and have had full and ample time to go over them and check up on our schedules, that they would be in as good position now to cross-examine as at any other time; and ordinarily in investigations of this kind each paragraph is taken separately. I remember recently in an investigation in the Senate of the United States they had several paragraphs or sub-headings, and they completed one at a time; and your Honor on the previous reference finished a paragraph at a time. I think there were seven specifications in the decree and you took them separately; and it occurs to me that it would tend to facilitate the case and tend to bring the direct issue to bear by cross-examining Mr. Hillman as soon as we get through with 1861. 1861 is separate from 1863, and there is going to be a serious contention, I take it, on both sides as to which will control and govern; and it occurs to me that the more distinct and separate you can keep those dates the more marked will be the contrast, and we will be better able to determine which date ought to prevail. They cannot be taken by surprise because they have had plenty of time to be up; and besides, we hardly are in shape to go ahead with 1863. We have been blue printing a good part of the night and having our stenographers at work, and I cannot see any real objection to that course and while it is true that the plaintiff may object, yet it is a matter in the discretion of your Honor, and they are separate and distinct dates and we feel that we ought to finish up 1861 as to the schedules, and as to the examinations. Another thing, Mr. Hillman's wife is yet in a very delicate condition and we do not know how long he can remain here, and it would be better if possible to get 1861 finished up while we are at it, especially as to the record evidence and cross-examination in relation thereto.

The Master: While that is in accordance with my own personal notion about it, I do not feel at liberty to require Virginia to pursue the examination in the method that does not appeal to them as being the one best calculated to produce advantageous results to them. I do not know what their special reasons may be, but assume that they are at least satisfactory to counsel.

Mr. Harrison: Absolutely.

The Master: And while I would rather prefer the method suggested by Mr. Lilly, I do not want to so much take the direction of the case as to deprive the counsel for Virginia of handling it along the line which they consider most advantageous to Virginia. If they agree to that I will be very glad to give the case that direction, but inasmuch as they feel that the better method for them is to have the whole case from

Mr. Hillman, both as to 1861 and 1863, before they cross-examine, I suppose I should not feel inclined to require them to go on contrary to their judgment. We will start right along with Mr. Hillman if that is agreeable.

Mr. Lilly: All right.

The Master: Of course it is understood all along that we maintain this chronological order so far as is feasible so that when we come to look our record up we won't have confusion and have to run the record all over for examination as to the various classes.

I will say for the benefit of the gentlemen who represent either side, in connection with the preparation of the record, that if they will take up the matter carefully and see that the record is scrutinized and excised so far as they can excise it, as soon as may be after the transcript is placed in their hands by the stenographers, Mr. Harris has an arrangement by virtue of which the printing will go right along concurrent with the hearings. The sooner he gets the transcript the sooner he will be able to print the record, and for that reason the gentlemen representing both Virginia and West Virginia should devote their time to it immediately upon receipt of the transcript from the stenographers. They will get the forenoon transcript sometime in the afternoon, and they will get the afternoon transcript early in the evening, and then they can have it all ready.

Mr. Anderson: I understand colloquies are to go out.

The Master: Yes. I suppose the stenographer is taking what we said now, but there is no use in having it printed.

CONWAY W. HILLMAN

recalled for further examination, testified as follows:

The Witness: Your Honor, I would like to ask the correction of a clerical error on my first exhibit.

The Master: What page?

The Witness: Second exhibit, page No. 2, of the exhibit.

Mr. Holt: We do not understand what is going on.

The Master: This is simply the correction of an error.

This is a very nice arrangement; I want to compliment the men on the manner in which they have gotten up the record. So far as I have seen it looks to me to be in very nice shape. These exhibits are all by themselves and separated by a red sheet, which makes it very handy. When we come to the exhibits of 1863 they will be put in in the same way, which will help us a great deal. The matter just now pending before the Master is the suggestion made by Mr. Hillman that he wants to correct an error in Defendant's Exhibit No. 2, found on page 2.

Mr. Holt: Is that Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac?

The Witness: Yes.

The Master: What is the correction you want to make?

The Witness: On page 2 of Defendant's Exhibit 2, on page 481 of said record I have marked March 31, 1859, that the outstanding stock was $1,033,600., and surplus was $352,-967.30, and book value was 144.2. The correct figures should be: Outstanding stock, $1,043,700.; the surplus should be $461,134.54; the book value remains as it is. That will be showr to be correct by pages 4 and 5 of the same record. It seems that after having determined the 144.2 from my record, my eye going back caught 1858, which was just ahead of that, and the figures for 1858 were inadvertently copied.

The Master: Unless there is some objection I am going to order the original record to be corrected in accordance with the suggestion of Mr. Hillman, and not have the colloquy appear in the record at all, so that when we get the final print the record will be accurate without the necessity of an explanation at all. Mr. Harris, you will see, please, that that change is made in accordance with the suggestion made by Mr. Hillman. Everything of this kind can be corrected without taking any space in the record, or causing any confusion; so that the original record will read, outstanding stock, $1,043,-700.; surplus, $461,134.54. And this colloquy will not appear in the record at all. Is that agreeable, Mr. Harrison?

Mr. Harrison: Yes, sir.

The Master: Is there any other change desired, Mr. Hillman?

Mr. Holt: There is one other thing, your Honor, it seems that some of the headings of the columns of exhibits for 1861 now printed should be changed. By way of illustration, a column will be headed book value when it plainly appears it should have been face value or par value. We have made the discovery in the preparation of the exhibits for 1863, and I think those corrections, when we have them noted, may be made without tearing down the type at all, but just simply changing the column.

Mr. Harrison: Are not the corrections which you suggest corrections of your own account? The witness has given the caption to the columns embraced in his own work, and you want to correct those captions. You want to correct your own account?

Mr. Holt: No, he should correct his account.

Mr. Harrison: In other words, if the accountant has called a thing "book value" and has made a caption accordingly, counsel want to correct it and call it something else; and I do not think that is proper.

Mr. Holt: We want to correct that through him; he is making the correction, not we.

The Master: There won't be the slightest difficulty about it. The direction I am trying to give to the hearing is to save all the time I can for both sides. Judge Holt, please make a memorandum in order to make your schedules in accordance with what you think the facts are, and submit that memorandum to the other side, and if they have no objection we will have the changes made. If they want to cross-examine as to why those changes are made, that is open to them. But meanwhile, you submit the memorandum, and if they agree to it that is the end of the controversy. If they think that impeaches the integrity of the account, that is another thing. On the other hand when they look them over, if they think that the changes are not material and are willing they should be made, we will have them made the same as this first change has been made. You submit your memorandum.

Mr. Holt: We will do that. I only wanted to bring it up now because your Honor inquired whether there were any other corrections.

The Master: Of course this does not preclude anybody from having the record changed to be in accordance with the facts, but if there are any others that you can think of now, you may correct them. Can you think of anything further, Mr. Hillman?

The Witness: Page 16 of the testimony, the eleventh line from the top, reads now, "It was necessary for me to make the receipts and disbursements," it should be, "take the receipts and disbursements."

The Master: Any objection to changing that?

Mr. Harrison: No, sir.

The Master: Mr. Harris, are you keeping track of these?

Mr. Harris: Yes, sir.

The Master: Of course leave out all this colloquy when you print the report. Do you think of anything more, Mr. Harrison?

Mr. Harrison: No.

The Master: Do you, Judge Holt?

Mr. Holt: No, not now.

The Master: Of course if any changes are to be made in this record as printed, why before they are made we will have attention called to them in open session, so that if any question is suggested upon either side it can be raised then. There is no reason why, as we go on, we should not have this record in complete, perfect shape. Of course you have just received your copy and have not had a chance to give it critical examination. Now, I think we are ready, Judge Holt. Mr. Harris, I suppose while this record is going on you can be gradually getting together your final index of the witnesses and exhibits, and all that sort of thing, so that when you get your final print made your index will be practically completed.

Mr. Harris: Yes, sir; all this matter is standing for correction, and we will keep the index up-to-date.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Mr. Hillman, if you have the printed volume of the evidence before you, so far as it has gone, please turn to page 46 of the exhibits, under the heading Defendant's Exhibit No.

4, and to item 10, James River & Kanawha Co., $250, and state whether or not you have prepared from the records of the State of Virginia an underlying or supporting exhibit in explanation and confirmation of that item?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. Will you file that schedule or supporting exhibit as a part of your deposition, and mark it Defendant's Exhibit No. 4, Asset D 10.

A. Yes, sir, I now file it so marked in the upper right hand corner, and in the upper left hand corner marked Class D.

Q. This exhibit seems to be marked State of Virginia, or entitled rather, State of Virginia, Kanawha Board of the James River and Kanawha Company. Please explain that schedule to the Master.

A. Treasurer's blotter, January 4, 1861, which is not paged, shows the receipt of an interest item of $250 from the Kanawha Board of the James River & Kanawha Company, and that this is a partial payment of the interest on a loan of $100,000., to the above company made by the State of Virginia, and which interest was due on January 1, 1861.

Q. You may state whether or not that schedule truly gives the figures therein set down as ascertained by you from the records of Virginia therein referred to?

A. Yes, sir, it does.

By the Master:

Q. That shows that $250 went into the treasury of the State of Virginia?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does that $250 item enter into any other aggregate that appears in any of your computations as a part of the fund on hand in the treasury of Virginia?

A. No, sir, it does not. It does not enter into any subsequent computations of interest or payments of principal.

Q. It does not enter into any computation that you have made showing funds in the hands of the State of Virginia on January 1, 1861?

A. No, sir.

Q. So it is not duplicated?

Mr. Holt: As I understand the object of the Master it is to ascertain whether that $250 constituted any part of the cash set down in Schedule A as of January 1, 1861.

The Master: That is it exactly.

Mr. Harrison: That was not the Master's question.

The Master: That was what I wanted. Of course I have not examined these schedules that I assume you have here somewhere—schedules showing cash on hand at some date. What I wanted to find out was whether or not this $250 was a part of an aggregate.

The Witness: It was not.

Mr. Harrison: What was not? What was the question?

The Master: It is not part of the aggregate contained in any schedule showing cash on hand in the State of Virginia on January 1, 1861. That is what I understand.

The Witness: Yes, sir.

Mr. Holt: Mr. Harrison, the very first exhibit, Defendant's Exhibit No. 1, undertakes to show the total of cash on hand December 31, 1860, or January 1, 1861, and the funds among which it has been apportioned. The question was whether this $250 was embraced in that.

The Master: Yes.

Mr. Harrison: I understand that; but the Master's question in the beginning was broader and the answer was broader, and he said it did not enter into any computation.

The Master: My question was broader, but it was directed mainly of course to that state of facts. What I simply wanted to know was whether that item of $250 was an item to be added to any previous fund or whether it was included in some other sum, and I understand it is not included in any other sum which is shown in your schedule; is that right?

The Witness: You are correct.

The Master: Some of these questions I put may be unintelligible, but I am simply making these inquiries as they occur to me.

Mr. Holt: I think, if you will pardon me, that I caught it right off the reel—what you intended. It was plain to me.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Have you the copy of the printed supplemental answer before you?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. Please turn to page 60 thereof.

A. Yes, I have it.

The Master: What is this, Judge Holt?

Mr. Holt: I am referring to the printed answer.

Q. I see a statement therein, at the page referred to, as follows: "In addition to the foregoing, the State of Virginia, after the division of the old Commonwealth into two states, June 20, 1863, collected large amounts of money from several counties then and now located in the State of West Virginia, and aggregating the sum of $[illegible],078.06.;" and I will ask you whether or not you have examined the books and records of the Commonwealth of Virginia for the purpose of ascertaining the truth or falsity of that statement.

The Master: This item, Judge Holt, as I understand it, is not included in either one of the seven classes.

Mr. Holt: That is the reason I am taking this pains to describe it.

A. Yes, sir, I have made such an examination.

Q. What did you find the total of taxes thus collected, if you found that any had been so collected?

A. For the taxes and the redemption of lands which had been sold for taxes. I found the sum of $224,799.63 had been collected from the West Virginia counties from June 20, 1863, up to April 1, 1865.

Q. Have you prepared an exhibit setting forth in detail this examination and the result thereof?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. Will you please file the same as a part of your deposition and mark it Defendant's Exhibit No. 10?

A. Yes, sir, I now file the paper marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 10.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 10, September 2, 1914, C. B.

Q. Turning now to that exhibit, I find, Mr. Hillman, the first item thereon, general taxes assessed after January 1, 1861, and, under the heading, period June 20, 1863, to April 1, 1865, the sum of $189,643.31. Please explain that item.

A. That is the amount which the West Virginia counties paid into the treasury of Virginia on account of general taxes assessed after January 1, 1861. This amount was taken off in detail from the books of the Commonwealth of Virginia, First Auditor's office, wherein the receipts of taxes are set out in detail. These are on my working papers, showing the pages and the amounts on each page, and are susceptible of check if so desired. They were too voluminous to put into an exhibit to present to the Court.

Q. During what period were the taxes embraced in this item paid?

A. Between the period June 20, 1863, and April 1, 1865.

By the Master:

Q. Does that mean that there were no taxes paid on account of those prior to June 20, 1863?

A. No, sir, it does not; it means that there were paid subsequent to that date, June 20, 1863, and up to April 1, 1865, the amounts which I have stated.

Q. Then that simply means this, that after the organization of the State of West Virginia, the people living in the counties, what was after that time the State of West Virginia, paid this amount of taxes?

Mr. Harrison: In some of the counties.

Q. In some of the counties?

A. Yes, sir, that is what it means; and I have the details.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. You may now explain the second item on Exhibit 10.

A. Those are the law processes assessed, or the amounts collected by the County Clerks of amounts assessed after January 1, 1861, and collected during the period mentioned, June 20, 1863, to April 1, 1865.

By the Master:

Q. What do you mean by law processes assessed?

A. They have certain fines and certain charges against litigants in courts, which are collected not through the regular tax department but through the County Clerks, instead of through the Sheriff. They are listed separately from the regular taxes collected at that time by the Sheriffs of the counties, and therefore they appear separately from the general taxes such as the per capita tax and the regular taxes upon land and property.

Q. Well, they are not really assessed at all, but they are simply the costs of legal proceedings during that period?

A. During the period prior to January 1, 1863.

Q. It is not assessed by any public body constituted for the purpose of making assessments, but simply the costs of legal proceedings which are collected by these various county officers?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Holt: If I understand it, and I do so understand, subject to correction by the gentlemen who practiced under those laws, this was simply a tax on legal processes.

The Master: I understand it now.

The Witness: They are court costs rather than tax assessments.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Mr. Hillman, you may take the third item upon that Exhibit 10.

The Master: That is of the same character I take it?

The Witness: Yes, sir, it is of the same character, law process assessed—

The Master: Became due, or a tax, you may put it that way, costs taxed against litigants prior to January 1, 1861, that is what that is?

The Witness: Yes, sir, prior to January 1, 1861, and collected during the period June 20, 1863 to April 1, 1865.

Q. What was the amount of that third item?

A. $1,158.13.

Q. Now the fourth item?

Mr. Anderson: It is understood we are not now interposing objections. They are attempting to charge loyal Virginia with the acts of the Richmond government.

The Master: The materiality of this of course is open to both sides.

Mr. Holt: That will have to be taken care of when we come to it.

Q. (Question repeated).

A. The fourth item consists of the general taxes assessed prior to January 1, 1861, and collected during the period from June 20, 1863, to April 1, 1865, from the West Virginia counties, and amounts to $22,715.93.

By The Master:

Q. What is it that differentiates that from your first item?

A. One was taxes which were assessed subsequent to January 1, 1861,—

Q. One is after and the other is prior?

A. Yes.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Explain the fifth item, license taxes of May, 1861, and give the amount thereof as shown by the exhibit.

A. License taxes were assessed and collected twice a year. For convenience in auditing I have separated license taxes of May, 1861, from the other general taxes, and therefore simply noted that license tax of 1861 instead of consolidating it with the other general taxes which had accrued after January 1, 1861, making simply a separate item.

By The Master:

Q. What were these licenses on, occupations?

A. On occupations, dogs, horses, guns, vehicles, for bars and peddlers' licenses and all other items. It is merely for convenience that it was placed there in that way. That amounts to $1,231.33 paid in the period June 20, 1863, to April 1, 1865.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Explain the sixth item of Exhibit 10, lands redeemed.

A. Lands had frequently been sold for taxes. They were allowed to be redeemed, and this represents the amount, $552.49, which was collected from these counties on account of the redemption of lands in the West Virginia counties which had been sold for taxes. It amounted to $552.49. The items were on account of lands redeemed prior to January 1, 1861, which had been sold for taxes which accrued prior to January 1, 1861.

By The Master:

Q. When did the redemption take place, after January 1, 1861?

A. The redemption took place in the period June 20, 1863, to April 1, 1865.

Q. But you say the sales had been made prior to January 1, 1861?

A. Yes, sir, or had been sold for taxes which accrued prior to that date.

Q. Predicated upon taxes assessed before January 1, 1861?

A. Your Honor, I would like to say right here that where the date was not mentioned, and quite frequently it was not mentioned—

Q. You mean the date of the sale or the date of the assessment?

A. The date of the tax.

Q. The date of the assessment?

A. The date of the assessment, and the tax for which the land was sold, where that was not definitely mentioned I omitted it because it was not so distinctly stated, and therefore I could not locate it as being prior to 1861.

Q. That is, where you found an item of lands redeemed from tax sales, where the records did not disclose the date of the assessment of the tax, you did not include that in your item, did you?

A. I did not, no, sir.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. The next item appears to be delinquent taxes. Explain it, please.

A. In this item are the delinquents, where the taxes had run into the delinquent column and were afterwards collected frequently with some costs added to them. I have included in this case not only the amount of the tax but the amount of the assessment for delinquencies.

By The Master:

Q. What do you mean by that, assessments for delinquencies? Do you mean by that that you have included the tax, with the interest and cost of collection, or was there some separate independent assessment made upon delinquent tax payers which increased the amount due from them on account of the fact that they were delinquent?

A. Yes, there was an item in addition to the tax for delinquency, there were also included certain costs where they had to sue for them. In this case I have taken the entire amount of the taxes, of the penalty for being delinquent, and of the costs, and included the whole amount.

Q. You have the original tax, the amount of the penalty and the amount of the costs all included, is that right?

A. Yes, sir, for the reason, your Honor, that the records did not show exactly how much was tax, how much was penalty and how much was costs, but it was lumped in one sum. And the papers of course for that amount would be so inaccessible that I did not go into details on that.

Q. You were not able to find anything in the records that differentiated between the three items?

A. I was not.

Q. And you therefore gave the aggregate item, assuming that in some cases at least the three items were included is that right?

A. That is right, yes, sir.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Well, what was the amount of the delinquent taxes in that item?

A. $351.95.

Q. And when collected?

A. Collected during the period June 20, 1863, to April 1, 1865.

Q. Please explain now the last item upon that Exhibit 10.

A. This is an account of delinquent and forfeited lands, where the land had been seized and sold for delinquent taxes and afterwards had been redeemed. This again is taken for the total amount, and also only where I could locate the fact that it was prior to January 1, 1861.

By The Master:

Q. You mean "it" was prior, that the tax was assessed prior to January 1, 1861?

A. Yes, sir.

The Witness: The amount is $8,210.30, for the period June 20, 1863, to April 1, 1865.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. What is the sum total, now, of the moneys embraced in that exhibit?

A. $224,799.63.

Q. How does that sum compare with the amount alleged in the answer?

A. The amount alleged in the answer was $225,078.06, a difference of $278.43.

Q. That is that much less than the allegation of the answer?

A. Yes, sir. Perhaps it might be well to explain, your Honor, that I stopped at April 1, 1865, for the reason that there was a very decided break in the books of Virginia at that period, for from three to six months. And having done it thus far, it seemed to me to be a very good stopping place, and I stopped at that point and did not continue the investigation beyond April 1, 1865.

By The Master:

Q. What do you mean by break in the books, that there seemed to be minus entries after that date?

A. Yes, sir, for three months there are no entries.

Q. They were apparently doing something else at that time besides keeping books?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Harrison: The witness has stated that he has the detail figures upon which the totals in this exhibit that he has been testifying about are based, and that they can be checked up if desired. We would like to have him turn those detail papers over to Mr. Potter, in order that he may check them up.

The Master: There is no objection to that, I suppose?

Mr. Holt: The two accountants will get together, and Mr. Potter will be given an opportunity to check them.

The Master: Then Mr. Potter will call at his convenience upon Mr. Hillman or upon one of his assistants for these detail statements so as to make the verification. If you have it in separate shape you had better hand it to Mr. Potter. If you have only one copy, that is one thing, but if you have duplicate copies you may hand it to him.

The Witness: I have only one copy, but I see no reason why Mr. Potter should not have that copy to check it.

The Master: Well, hand it to him for the purpose of checking it up.

The Witness: Of course it is understood, your Honor, that he return the copy.

The Master: Oh, certainly, we won't have any trouble about anything of that kind.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Have you prepared another exhibit or schedule, being a a summary of all your exhibits or schedules for January 1. 1861, from one to ten inclusive?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. What caption have you given that summary?

A. State of West Virginia, summary of claims of West Virginia for consideration in settlement of debt, as set up in Hillman Exhibits January 1, 1861.

Q. Will you please file the same and mark it Defendant's Exhibit No. 11?

A. I file it so marked.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 11, September 2, 1914, C. B.

Mr. Holt: I suppose, your Honor, it is not worth while to go into that. These gentlemen and your Honor will see at a glance what it is; it is a summary of what we claim these exhibits show.

The Master: It is understood that these items, although they may not be specifically called to the attention of Mr. Hillman, are in the record with the support of his oath that they are correctly made, and that of course opens the whole question to cross-examination by the other side.

Mr. Holt: Yes, sir.

Q. I will ask you this question, however. Is this a correct summary of these exhibits?

A. Yes, sir, it is.

Mr. Holt: Will your Honor please turn to page 41 of the printed exhibits. We now offer in support of Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, Class D, Asset 13, and Class C, Asset 17, two certificates. The first is the certificate on the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury of the United States in accordance with an act of Congress, as we understand it, and under the seal of the department, relating to a settlement between Virginia and the government of the United States on account of the moneys owed by the latter to the former and set forth in the exhibits referred to.

The Master: Why can't you have the record show, if there is no objection on the part of Virginia, that the accounts of the United States government show the following facts for whatever they may be worth? You do not need to print this certificate and you do not need to print any formal matter in connection with it unless it is required by the other side. If there is no objection I see no reason why you may not put in an excerpt from the books of the United States.

Mr. Holt: The truth is that the exhibit—

The Master: It may be that you cannot accomplish what you want by this suggestion; if not, proceed by your own method.

Mr. Holt: The truth is that Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, Assets 13 and 17, really set forth all the details that are embraced in these certificates of the Assistant Treasurer, but our only idea was to—

The Master: I would suggest this, submit them to the other side and let them examine them, and if this schedule is an accurate statement of this certificate, simply have an entry made in the record that the certificate is in accordance with the facts as disclosed by the books of the United States, instead of encumbering the record with the details, unless you prefer it the other way.

Mr. Holt: We do not prefer it. Allow me however to make the second offer before I hand it to them. The second certificate is likewise that of the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury of the United States, dated August 4, 1914.

The Master: Submit that to the other side and have them examine it during the recess and see if a short statement can be put in the record that will make it unnecessary to print the whole certificate. You get my point?

Mr. Harrison: Yes, sir.

The Master: If for any reason either of you wish the details printed, that may be done, but otherwise it may just as well be stated what the certificate shows unless one side or the other requires that the details be printed. There is no occasion for lumbering the record up with duplication of proof.

Mr. Anderson: There will be no contention as to the figures.

The Master: Everything of that sort may just as well be summarized and stated provided there will be no controversy about it.

Mr. Holt: This completes as now advised our schedules covering January 1, 1861; but before proceeding to the schedules for June 20, 1863, we desire to offer in evidence and in support of Defendant's Exhibit No. 7, sheets 1 and 2, James River & Kanawha Canal Company, and for other purposes, a copy of an act of the General Assembly of the State of Virginia entitled "An act to amend the charter of the James River and Kanawha Company passed March 23, 1860—

Mr. Harrison: It is already in the record.

The Master: In the old record?

Mr. Harrison: Yes, sir.

The Master: Do you need the whole act for your purposes, Judge?

Mr. Holt: I rather suspect to.

Mr. Harrison: The whole act is already in the record.

Mr. Holt: Let me finish this statement, and then we will discuss your point.

The Master: If it is in the record the probability is, if it was relied upon by the other side, I shall have it reprinted in this record. That is one reason why I want these matters referred to. I do not know what turn this may take ultimately, but I do not want to leave the Supreme Court of the United States in a position where they have not only to look over this record but have to go to work and hunt up the other record in the old case. When we get to the end of this I will endeavor to present to them in one volume the whole thing. Everything that is already in the original record that is material here we will have reprinted in this record. Of course you can hardly expect the Supreme Court of the United States to look over both these records and read through them both. That strikes me to be very much the most convenient and handy way and does not involve very much, so that so far as this is concerned here, if it is printed on the suggestion of Judge Holt it would render unnecessary the reprinting of it from the original record. Do you get my point?

Mr. Harrison: Yes, sir.

The Master: Of course it is going to leave the case, that is if I am going to put the case before the Supreme Court predicated partly on this record and partly on the other record, it is going to be in rather clumsy shape. I think everything that is going to be called attention to should be in this record. If that involves reprinting something that is in the other record, I think a few dollars spent in reprinting would be counterbalanced by the convenience to everybody.

Mr. Holt: I desire to add, your Honor, that the copy of this Act offered will be found on pages 113 to 118 inclusive of a volume entitled, Acts of Assembly, 1859-60. These are Virginia Acts.

The Master: What is the rule here in Virginia with reference to private and public acts, public acts the court takes judicial notice of and private acts have to be proved, is that right?

Mr. Harrison: Yes.

The Master: In some states, I know, both private and public acts are made matters of judicial notice, and you do not have to prove them; but in this State that only applies to public acts.

Mr. Harrison: I think so.

The Master: If counsel on either side wants these things on the record they ought to go in.

Mr. Holt: We are going to go over all these acts again, and we are going to use as few of them as possible, because we have no disposition to encumber the record. But we do appreciate the suggestion of your Honor, the question of convenience.

The Master: I am not going to decide this case on two records, and I think the court would be rather bothered if I should put it up to them on two records. It is too much to ask the Supreme Court to look over two records, it seems to me. I would not want to do it if I were situated as they are; and I do not want to do it as I am situated here.

Mr. Harrison: We do not want to consider two records; but I want to emphasize the fact that we are permitted to rely upon anything in the old record.

The Master: Certainly.

Mr. Holt: The copy of the act referred to which I now hand the stenographer is simply an unattested, uncertified copy; but I suppose there will be no objection to it on that ground.

Mr. Harrison: We will take the printed copy as correct.

Mr. Holt: I supposed you would. And I may add that we construe it to be a legislative declaration on the part of Virginia as to the value of that date of the James River and Kanawha stock.

The Master: In other words an admission of the State of Virginia that at that time there was the value declared upon admitted by them.

Mr. Holt: Yes, sir. That is why it is offered in connection with the exhibit that I have mentioned.

The Master: I understand you.

Mr. Holt: Your Honor, would it be convenient for the gentlemen upon the other side, and for your Honor as well, to have us start in on 1863 after lunch?

The Master: Yes.

Mr. Holt: I want to get 1861 out of my head before I start with the other, if I can.

Chapter 21 of Acts of General Assembly 1859-60 was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 12, September 2, 1914, C. B.

The Master: We will suspend here until two o'clock.

Recess until 2 P. M.

AFTER RECESS.

The Master: Judge Holt, as I understand it you begin this afternoon on your schedules relating to the values as of June 20, 1863.

Mr. Holt: Yes, sir.

The Master: Unless there is some special explanation that you desire from Mr. Hillman, is there any objection to these schedules going right in as the testimony of Mr. Hillman, and then simply call his attention to items that you may desire to have him explain? That is it would be shorter than to take them up one by one. Of course I do not control the method by which you put them in, but I simply suggest this as a method of saving time.

Mr. Holt: My idea is that after the first one or two, your Honor, in order to get the hang of the matter, we would put them in one at a time, but without inquiring of their details.

The Master: I assumed the other side would have no objection to the schedules going in as the testimony of Mr. Hillman.

Mr. Holt: It may be that we may catch something going along that needs correction.

The Master: I only suggest that as facilitating progress and saving time.

Mr. Holt: I will be very brief with them after the first one or two.

The Master: All right. At the conclusion of the introduction of these schedules, and the testimony in chief of Mr. Hillman, I understand that Virginia will be prepared to go on with the cross-examination.

Mr. Harrison: Yes, sir.

The Master: I am just in receipt of a telegram indicating that it is very desirable for Mr. Hillman to return as early as possible to Chicago, under the unfortunate and painful circumstances, and of course we want to do everything that we can to facilitate that result, subject of course to both sides having an opportunity to get from Mr. Hillman everything that they desire.

Mr. Harrison: At the close of the examination in chief of Mr. Hillman we will be ready to go on and cross-examine right away.

Continuation of the direct-examination of

CONWAY W. HILLMAN.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Mr. Hillman, we come now to the schedules upon the subject of values as of June 20, 1863, and I will ask you whether or not you have examined the books of the State of Virginia for the purpose of ascertaining the amount of cash in the hands of the Treasurer of that State to the credit of its various funds of June 20, 1863.

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. Have you prepared an exhibit or schedule showing the detail of your examination?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. Will you please file the same and mark it Defendant's Exhibit No. 1, 1863?

A. I have filed the exhibit marked as requested. This consists of two sheets.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 1, 1863, September 2, 1914, C. B.

Q. What did you find on that date to the credit of the Literary Fund?

A. $20,916.29, of which amount $8,600. was the Dawson or trust fund, leaving as the State funds $12,316.29.

Q. What to the credit of the Board of Public Works Fund?

A. $563,930.99.

Q. What to the credit of the Commonwealth Fund?

A. $1,739,773.11.

Q. What to the credit of the Sinking Fund?

A. $143,195.90.

Q. What was the total cash on hand in all the funds as of that date?

A. $2,459,216.29.

Q. You may state whether or not this exhibit truly sets down the figures as taken from the records of Virginia and the result of your examination derived therefrom.

A. Yes, sir, it does.

Q. Have you examined the records of the State of Virginia with a view of ascertaining the ownership by that State of stock in the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac Railroad Company on the 20th day of June, 1863?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. Have you prepared an exhibit showing the result of your examination?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you please file it, marking it Defendant's Exhibit No. 2, 1863.

A. I file it, so marked.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 2, 1863, September 2, 1914, C. B.

Q. Of how many sheets does that exhibit consist?

A. It consist of one sheet with three supporting sheets, wherein the trial balance—

By The Master:

Q. What are they called, sub-sheets?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You will excuse me, but keep your nomenclature harmonious.

A. Yes.

Q. In your testimony follow right along with your exhibit, so that there won't be any confusion.

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. As I understand the answer then, it consists of one sheet and three sub-sheets?

A. Yes, sir.

The Master: I suppose, Judge, and Mr. Hillman, that up to January 1, 1861, so far as they relate to the same items it is a duplicate of the preceding exhibits under January 1, 1861?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

The Master: That is, so far as the same items are peculiar to each exhibit it is a duplicate of the preceding exhibit?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. How many shares of stock of that company did Virginia own on the 20th of June, 1863?

A. 2,752 shares, of $100 each, $275,200.

Q. What did you ascertain the book value of those shares to be as of that date, if you ascertained it at all?

A. I ascertained the book value to be $184.50 per share. I was compelled to take the value of the stock as shown by the books of the company for the year ending March 31, 1863, to March 31, 1864, as there existed no intermediate balance which would show this.

By The Master:

Q. How did you get the date, on a pro rata basis?

A. Yes, and on these two dates I ran the date on time pro rata up to June 20, 1863, as is shown in the notation on this exhibit.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. I notice now on this exhibit that you have a column which is headed value, June 20, 1863, per share $184.50. What value do you mean in that column?

A. I mean that that is the value of the stock as shown by the books of the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac Railroad Company on that date.

Q. Do you mean by value, book value?

A. Yes, sir, book value per share.

Q. Should then not that column be changed to read book value?

A. Yes, sir, I would so mark it.

By The Master:

Q. And the next column the same?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The third column the same?

A. Yes, sir.

The Master: That is, if you want to make it consistent.

Mr. Holt: Yes, let him do that also.

The Master: I suppose it is understood that all the values given by Mr. Hillman in these schedules are book values?

Mr. Holt: Except where there is a value based upon dividend declarations.

The Witness: Your Honor, that is noted in the immediate line just below here where book value is mentioned, but I should have repeated it above as you have suggested.

Q. Don't indicate any departure from your usual plan because the term book does not happen to be inserted prior to value, and we want to understand unless there is a mark specially to indicate to the contrary, the values that you give are book values that you found from the books; that is right, is it not?

A. Yes, sir.

The Master: That will save examinations as to details if there are any other items as to which that criticism may be applied.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. You may now state the total value of the stock held in that company by the State of Virginia on that date.

A. $507,744.

Q. Did you likewise examine the books of the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac Railroad Company for the purpose of making up this exhibit?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You may now tell us whether or not this Exhibit No. 2, 1863, with its sub-sheets 1, 2 and 3, correctly set forth the result of your examination of the records of Virginia and the books of the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac Railroad Company.

A. Yes, sir, they do.

Q. Have you examined the records of the State of Virginia with a view of ascertaining the sale of securities by her after January 1, 1861, that were owned by her prior to that date, and embraced in Class C in the exhibit to the supplemental answer?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. Does the exhibit prepared by you cover the 18 items embraced in Class C of the supplemental answer, and likewise an item No 19, being a dividend bond of the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac Railroad Company?

A. Yes, sir, it does.

Q. You may state whether or not the exhibit so prepared correctly shows the result of your examination of the records of Virginia upon these 19 subjects.

A. Yes, sir, it does.

Q. Will you file that exhibit and mark it Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, 1863?

A. Yes, sir, I file it so marked.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, 1863, September 2, 1914, C. B.

Mr. Holt: I suggest, your Honor, that I may make some inquiry about the items here, but when I come to the supporting schedules, in order to save time we will just file them.

The Master: Yes.

Q. I see that the first item in the exhibit just filed is Orange & Alexandria Railroad Company stock, and you have the amount there $874,500., under the word "Par." Please explain that.

A. That means 8,745 shares of the Orange & Alexandria Railroad Company owned by the State of Virginia, $100 each.

Q. That then is the total par value?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Of that stock as owned by her on that date?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was the book value of that stock on that date?

A. The book value was $134.25.

The Master: That is June 20, 1863, Mr. Hillman? That is the date you refer to, Judge Holt?

Mr. Holt: Yes.

The Witness: That is the date of September 30, 1863.

The Master: You should keep a little more careful watch. This date is September 30, 1863, and you have an adjusting computation by which you reach the result?

The Witness: It has not been adjusted.

The Master: The $134.25 is predicated on September 30, 1863?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

The Master: And you made no adjustment to bring it back to June 20, 1863?

The Witness: Upon that there has been none made.

Mr. Holt: I observed that yesterday, your Honor, and I supposed that June 20th to September was such a short time that I did not pay any attention to it.

The Master: That simply develops the fact, and just exactly what conclusion follows from it is a matter of argument.

The Witness: Under the circumstances my man had overlooked that little adjustment.

The Master: The only thing is to develop what the fact is, and the general question as to what it is worth will be taken up later. Of course strictly speaking the book value on a particular date must be predicated upon what is found on the books, but as long as we know what it is there will be no trouble.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. What did you find the book value of that total stock to be on June 20, 1863, if you ascertained it and put it upon this exhibit?

A. I did not ascertain it for June 20, 1863, it was ascertained for September 20, 1863.

Q. Then should not your column, next to the last, "Value, June 20, 1863," be changed to September 30, 1863?

A. For that item, yes, sir.

Q. What is the meaning of the item $874,500 relative to the Orange & Alexandria Railroad Company stock under a column designated "Disposed of for?"

A. That is the amount which was finally received by the State of Virginia for this stock.

Q. When did she sell it?

A. In 1872, the first payment being March 28, 1872, the next payment being October 17, 1872, and the final payment October 28, 1872.

Q. Are those facts shown upon any supporting exhibit, Mr. Hillman?

A. Yes, sir.

By The Master:

Q. What is this $874,500; is that the aggregate of the three items that you referred to?

A. No, sir; that is the aggregate of the par of the Orange & Alexandria stock.

Q. But the question was when was it sold, and you have given the dates of the sale and given three dates. My question is whether the amounts that appear to have been received on those dates make up this item of $874,500.

A. They make up the aggregate of $874,500, plus a loan which was settled at the same time of $212,844.

The Master: That all appeared in the previous examination; I remember now.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Have you prepared a supporting exhibit to this stock, statement of the Orange & Alexandria Railroad Company, just discussed in the main exhibit?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

The Master: Haven't you already got one in that takes care of that under your 1861 date?

Mr. Holt: I have it here; I think there are some additions to it.

The Master: Very well.

Q. Will you file this supporting exhibit and mark it Defendant's Exhibit No. 1, 1863, Asset 1—it is Asset 1, is it not?

A. Yes, sir. I file it, so marked.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 1, 1863, Asset 1, September 2, 1914, C. B.

Q. What books and records did you examine for the purpose of making up this supporting exhibit, Asset 1?

The Master: Where does that appear in this exhibit that I have?

Mr. Hogg: It is the first page after Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, containing the nineteen different railroads.

Mr. Holt: Right up in the right hand corner you will find page No. 8; it runs along consecutively.

The Master: And then the following schedule is a continuation of it, I understand.

A. I examined the records of the State of Virginia in the Congressional Library at Washington; these reports for the years being missing from the files in the Library of the State of Virginia in this building. That is the same report which we examined in making up our 1861 schedules, that is the report of the Board of Public Works of the State of Virginia, document 15, pages 7 to 24, for 1862, and pages 25 to 39 for 1863.

Q. Of how many sheets does this supporting exhibit consist?

A. Of but one sheet.

Q. You may state whether this supporting exhibit, Asset 1, correctly represents the records that you have examined of Virginia.

A. Yes, sir, it does.

Q. The second item under Orange & Alexandria Railroad Company is a loan, $377,772.65. Have you prepared a supporting exhibit to what appears concerning this loan on the main exhibit No. 3?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. What records did you examine in making up these supporting exhibits?

A. Ledger B, folio 241, Internal Improvement Fund, State of Virginia, showing the face value of this loan on June 20, 1863, following the details taken from pages 389 to 392 of Journal M, Public Works Department, or the Internal Improvement Ledger, State of Virginia, showing the final disposition of this loan and its eventual settlement up to November 1, 1868, and from that point on Journal N of the Internal Improvement Department, State of Virginia, pages 407 to 410, showing the final settlement of the loan.

Q. Was the loan paid in full?

A. Yes, sir, it was paid in full, and $1.02 over.

By The Master:

Q. It was paid by bonds, was it not?

A. Yes, sir, bonds and discounts.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. I see down on the main exhibit under the column headed, disposed of for, this item, $377,772.65. What does that mean?

A. That means that on June 23, 1863, there was a payment and settlement made, or the settlement was brought up to that date, on this Journal N, pages 389 to 392, being within three days of June 20, 1863, and the actual value of the loan on that date was $377,772.65, as will be shown by reference to page 10.

Q. Of how many pages does the supporting exhibit consist?

A. Of three.

Q. What pages are they as you have them marked here consecutively?

A. Pages 9, 10 and 11.

Q. You may state whether or not that supporting exhibit, 9, 10 and 11, correctly represents and reports the records of the State of Virginia upon that subject?

A. Yes, sir, it does.

Q. We come now upon the main exhibit, Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, 1863, Richmond & Danville Railroad Company stock. I find an item of $1,188,598.50 in a column designated par. What is meant by that?

A. That is the cost of the stock to the State of Virginia.

By The Master:

Q. In that case you were not able to find the number of shares that were purchased; the only thing you did find was the amount of money paid for the stock, is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

The Master: That is the same item, isn't it, Judge?

Mr Holt: I think so.

Q. That accounts for the odd figures there?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. What is the meaning of the item 162.27 under the column designated book value?

A. It means that that was the book value of this stock on September 30, 1863, the nearest fiscal year date to June 20, 1863.

Q. What is the meaning of the item of $1,928,738.79 under value June 20, 1863?

A. It means that the par of the stock or the face value of the stock on the books of the State of Virginia was multiplied by 162.27, the book value, and the result is a cash book value of $1,928,738.79.

Q. As of what dates, Mr. Hillman?

A. As of September 30, 1863.

The Master: I do not find that sum as the result of any computation on any of the supporting schedules. I simply want to get the identity here so when I come to look the matter up I wont have any confusion about it. Where do you find that on your supporting schedules, this $1,928,738.79, what supporting schedules do you find that result on?

The Witness: There is no supporting schedule to that It is simply the multiplication of the face value of $1,188,598.50 by 162.27.

The Master: So I do not have any occasion to look at a supporting schedule for any computation that results in the sum of $1,928,738.79?

The Witness: No, sir.

The Master: That is a computation that is made entirely independent of the schedule?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

The Master: Except as you get your data from the schedule you make it from?

The Witness: Yes, sir. The book value is determined from the sub-schedule. No computation is made.

The Master: Ordinarily you carried those details out in the schedule, and I did not know but what I had omitted or failed to find it in this instance. I get your point now.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. What is the meaning of the amount $1,085,636.57 set down under the column designated "disposed of for"?

A. That means that the stock of the Richmond & Danville Railroad Company was finally disposed of for the sum of $1,085,636.57.

Q. Do you mean the stock in that company owned by the State of Virginia was disposed of?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When was the disposition made?

A. Commencing December 13, 1870, ending August 31, 1871 as far as negotiations were conducted between the R. & D.

Company and the State, and final payment made under a decision of the Court, which was made in 1877, April 13.

By The Master:

Q. Was that all settled for in bonds?

A. Yes, sir, it was all settled for in bonds with the accrued interest on those bonds.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Have you prepared a supporting exhibit to this item of stock, Richmond & Danville Railroad Company?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. Of how many sheets does it consist?

A. Of one sheet.

Q. What is the page of it as you have it here?

A. Page No. 12.

Q. In order to prepare this supporting exhibit, page No. 12, what records or books did you examine if any?

A. The report of the Board of Public Works of the State of Virginia, on file in the Congressional Library in Washington, D. C., Document No. 15, pages 127 to 144 for 1862, and pages 145 to 161 for 1863.

Q. Will you file that exhibit and mark it Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, 1863, Asset 2.

A. Yes, sir, I file it, so marked.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, 1863, Asset No. 2, September 2, 1914, C. B.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Does it correctly exhibit the records and the result of your examination thereof which you have referred to?

A. Yes, sir, it does.

Q. Coming back now to the main exhibit, Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, 1863, I find under Richmond & Danville Railroad Company a loan of $544,861.46. What does that item mean, Mr. Hillman?

A. It means the value of the Richmond & Danville loan on June 20, 1863.

Q. How did you ascertain the value of that loan as of that date?

A. By taking the settlement made for that loan and tracing it up to June 20, 1863, and thus determining its value.

Q. Was the loan paid?

A. No, sir, it was never paid in full.

Q. How much was paid on it?

A. $438,900.

Q. When was that paid?

A. Paid in 1882 and 1884.

Q. Under the caption, disposed of for, I find the sum of $439,900. What does that mean?

A. It means that that amount in bonds and interest on those bonds, Virginia bonds, was received for this loan.

Q. Have you prepared a supporting exhibit on the matter of this loan to the Richmond & Danville Railroad Company?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. How many sheets does it contain?

A. It contains one sheet.

Q. What is it paged?

A. Paged 14. I would like to call your Honor's attention to one thing on page 14, and that is I make the statement there, "Loan was finally disposed of as follows"—

Q. Mr. Hillman, wont you wait a moment until I get that exhibit in, and then you may make your comments on it.

A. All right, sir.

Q. What books did you examine in making up the supporting exhibit referred to?

Q. These are all records of the State of Virginia, are they?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now you may tell us whether this supporting exhibit is true or not?

A. Yes, sir, it is.

Q. Will you file it as a part of your deposition and mark it Defendant's exhibit No. 3, 1863—what are the assets?

A. Assets C-2 and Assets D-2.

Q. What do you say to that, will you file it?

A. Yes, sir, I so file it.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, 1863, Asset C-2 and Asset D-2, September 2, 1914, C. B.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Now you desired to make a statement in explanation to the Master concerning this supporting exhibit. What is it, Mr. Hillman?

A. That there is no record that I could find whereby this loan had been reduced to the final settlement figure of $438,900, but that as the settlement was made on that date we have made the statement on this exhibit that it had been reduced by the partial payment plan used above to this sum, which would correct my statement which I made a moment ago that the loan was not paid in full. I found no method of bringing it down to that figure, $438,900, but I presumed that it had been brought down by some computations somewhere extant to that figure, as the loan was finally settled in full and as the Richmond & Danville was a company which could afford to settle in full.

By The Master:

Q. So far as the books are concerned, it does not appear on the face of the books that it was paid in full, but the amount paid in settlement you assumed to have been the result of some computation that reached that amount?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Before you leave that schedule, explain to me where you get your $515,194.79 which I find on here in red pencil marks and also $544,861.46, just explain to me how those are the results of any computation you made upon that subject. This is page No. 14 that I have, Hillman Exhibit, Asset C-2. On my exhibit here is a red pencil mark $515,194.79 under $580,126.36.

Mr. Harrison: Those figures are not on this exhibit which I have at all.

A. I discovered in the interval at noon there had been a mistake made in the computation of this interest. I had it corrected. I had time only to correct yours, the Judge's and mine, and I handed those corrections to the accountant for the other side and asked him to put it on their sheets. It seems he did not have time to do it.

Q. Make it a little more clear to me just exactly what it corrects. Give me the details. I want to know how you reach this result of $515,194.79. Put it in the record so that I know where you got your figures from and if there is an error, give me the amount of the error and give me the details of it so I can see myself what the result was and how the error occurred, because as it stands here I cannot understand it at all.

A. Your Honor, will you allow Mr. Leeds just to put a figure in on that now?

Q. Yes. I want you to state on the record how you got that result of $515,194.79. State it so that everybody can hear it.

Mr Holt: We supposed that their accountant could accommodate us by making the correction now.

The Master: I am not going to take a chance. Make the statement orally so that the reporter can get it, because what you tell me here I wont carry in my head. Make the explanation so that it goes in the record, so that everybody can understand it. There is not a thing on this exhibit that tells me where those figures come from.

Mr. Holt: He is going to undertake that, but they have engaged him now to do something else, which is what I am complaining of.

Mr. Harrison: I think I have a right to have him show me what his correction is. The thing is absolutely unintelligble to me what he is talking about.

Mr. Holt: That may be true, but he has explained that he had it corrected, and he asked your accountant to correct yours.

Mr. Potter: He made a mis-statement in that regard, because he did not show me the figures that he wanted changed.

Mr. Holt: That I know nothing about.

Mr. Harrison: I only ask him to give me the figures that he now relies upon.

Mr.Holt: There is no reason for being disturbed about it I presume.

Mr. Harrison: No, I do not think so.

The Master: Instead of 515 it should be 574.

Mr. Holt: If you will be kind enough to ask him for the explanation, your Honor, I think we will all get through.

The Master: This item that I have been inquiring about is not $515,194.79, but $575,194.79. Your assistant has put upon my sheet $23,749.84 to take the place of $28,681.41, and tells me that that sum added to $551,444.95 produces the result of $575,194.79; that is right, is it?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

The Master: Where do you get $544,861.46?

The Witness: That is the value of September 30, 1862, of this loan as shown on page 12 of Senate document and Journal for 1881 and 1882.

The Master: Is $544,861.46 to take the place of $544,198.32? You have on my exhibit in red pencil $544,861.46, and right under it is $544,198.32. Is the last item assumed to be stricken out?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

The Master: And $544,861.46 treated as in its place?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

The Master: And that you say is the result of a computation showing the amount due on that loan on June 20, 1863?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

The Master: I get it now.

The Witness: Did I understand your Honor wished me to explain how we arrived at June 20, 1861?

The Master: I would like to have you put into the record the computation which results in $544,861.46.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. If you have it right handy by just put it into the record so that we can see what it is.

A. Yes, sir. The value of this loan as shown upon Senate Document and Journal, page 12, 1881 and 1882, on September 30, 1862, was $551,444.95. The interest is calculated upon this sum from September 30, 1862, up to the end of June 19, 1861, at the rate of six per cent. per annum, which gives us 262 days of the 365 days which make up the calendar year. Therefore, taking it upon that basis, the amount of interest which would have accrued in that period, 262 days, would be $23,749.84, which we add to the principal which was due on September 30, 1863, and that gives us the $575,194.79. There was an annuity of $42,000 a year due upon this loan each year and paid by the company. Of that annuity 8 months and 20 days had elapsed up to June 20, 1863.

Q. Or 8 months and 20 days had accrued of the annuity?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The time had elapsed but the annuity had accrued?

A. Yes, sir, that is correct.

Q. And for that reason you deduct that from the sum you have last mentioned?

A. Yes, sir, since that annuity was afterwards paid in cash, and that makes a deduction from that amount of $575,194.79 of $30,333.33, and leaves this loan as of a value of $544,861.46.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. As of what date?

A. As of June 20, 1863.

By The Master:

Q. My impression is that you have inadvertently stated a date as to which you have computed interest. I think you said you computed interest up to 1861 when you must have meant 1863; is not that so?

A. Yes, sir, that is true.

Mr. Holt: We will travel more rapidly your Honor, after we have passed this omnibus blue sheet we have now.

The Master: I will watch you and see if you do.

Mr. Holt: You can apply the spur.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Mr. Hillman, on the main exhibit, Defendant's Exhibit

No. 3, 1863, the third item is Richmond & Petersburg Railroad Company stock. How much of the stock of that company as shown by that exhibit did the State of Virginia own at par in that company on June 20, 1863?

A. 3,856 shares, $100 each, $385,600.

Q. What was the book value of that stock as shown by the exhibit on June 20, 1863?

A. $141.24 per share at the nearest date, September 30, 1863.

Q. What was the total value of the stock as of September 30, 1863, according to the books?

A. $544,621.44.

Q. Explain the item on that same subject of $578,404.13. You find it, do you, in the column?

A. Yes, sir. That was the price which was finally obtained for the stock when it was sold in 1871.

Q. By whom?

A. By the State of Virginia to the Richmond & Petersburg Railroad Company. The item there where it says "with interest" refers to the fact that there was an over payment of $4.13 due to accrued interest on bonds which was never adjusted, which means that the stock was sold at $150 per share, paid in bonds, and that there was $4.13 left over, owing to accrued interest on the bonds which was not adjusted by cash or otherwise.

By The Master:

Q. That is there was an overpayment of that amount?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Affecting the interest on the bonds?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Have you prepared a supporting exhibit explaining and sustaining this matter of the stock of the Richmond & Petersburg Railroad Company?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. What page is it?

A. Page No. 16.

Q. Is it page 15 or page 16?

Q. Page 15 and page 16 seem to relate to that matter of stock.

A. Yes, sir, page 15 relating to the book value and page 16 to the amount received.

Q. Then you have two supporting exhibits instead of one?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you file the first supporting exhibit and mark it Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, 1863, Asset No. 3.

A. I file it so marked.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, 1863, Asset No. 3, September 2, 1914, C. B.

Q. Will you likewise file the second supporting exhibit referred to and mark it Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, Asset 3-C; Asset 3-D.

A. I have filed it so marked.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, 1863, Asset 3-C; Asset 3-D, September 2, 1914, C. B.

Q. What books or records did you examine if any for the purpose of making up the supporting exhibit referred to, asset No. 3?

A. I examined the report of the Board of Public Works of Virginia, Document No. 15, Pages 103 to 208, years 1863 and 1864, on file in the Congressional Library in Washington, D. C.

Mr. Holt: My information further is this that the Governor of this State in 1865 undertook to remove the capitol to the City of Lynchburg from Richmond, and they got as far as Buckingham with these records. The water in the canal gave out, and they stopped their journey; and in the meantime the Federals came along and scooped the whole business, and these records went to Washington, and have been there ever since.

The Witness: I understand that since this investigation has been in progress the officials have taken steps to have the records returned.

Q. You have stated that you examined certain records of the State of Virginia, deposited in Washington, from which you made up the exhibit referred to. You may now tell us whether you found those same records or not in the achives at the Capitol at Richmond?

A. No, sir, I did not find them there.

The Master: I suppose that is true in each instance, wherever he predicates his conclusions upon records found in Washington, there was an absence of the same records here in Virginia.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. How is that, Mr. Hillman?

A. That is right.

By The Master:

Q. And those there were simply used to supplement the absence of those that you could not find here?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Is the supporting exhibit, Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, 1863, Asset 3, page 15, true?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is the supporting exhibit, Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, 1863, Asset 3-C, Asset 3-D, true?

A. Yes, sir, it is.

The Master: Is that page 16?

Mr. Holt: That is page 16.

The Witness: The small foot note there shows how that $4.13 originated.

Q. That you have already explained, have you not, orally?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Coming now to item No. 4 on the main Exhibit No. 3, 1863, we have Virginia Central Railroad Company stock, $2,013,987.52. What does that represent?

A. That represents the par of the Virginia Central stock owned by the State, as far as it could be determined, we not being able to determine just how many shares were held. It is the amount which they expended in order to obtain whatever stock they owned in the Virginia Central.

Q. Did it own that stock on the 20th of June, 1863?

A. Yes, sir, it did.

Q. What is the meaning of the item $164.61?

A. That represents the book value of the Virginia Central stock on September 30, 1863, the nearest date to June 20, 1863, that was obtainable.

Q. What is the meaning of the item $3,315,224.86?

A. It means that the par or face value of the stock owned by Virginia in the Virginia Central Railroad Company, viz, $2,013,987.52, calculated at a book value of $164.61 per share of $100, amounts to $3,315,224.86.

Q. Then that is the total of the book value of the holdings of Virginia in the stock of that company on September 30, 1863?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is the meaning of the figure in the last column $241,858.50?

A. That means that the holdings of the State of Virginia in the Virginia Central Railroad Company were finally disposed of for the sum of $241,858.50.

Q. When was that disposition or sale made?

A. It was made in 1888 and in 1890.

By The Master:

Q. Was it cash or bonds?

A. It was made in cash.

Q. Do the books show to whom it was sold?

A. No, sir, they do not, and I did not examine back of that to show to whom it was sold. I simply took the fact of the sale on the face of the books and made no investigation of that.

Q. In some of these other cases the transactions seem to have been between the company and the State, but you have no recollection as to how it was in this case?

A. No, sir, my recollection is, however that they were sold through brokerage firms.

Q. Sold in the public market?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does it appear that the total holdings were sold for that sum?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that whatever they held in par value in 1863 on the date that you have now given was ultimately sold in the public market for the sum of $240,000?

A. Yes, sir, and I would state that in that sale they sold 26,433.39 shares.

Q. Does that tally with your original estimate of the par value that they held?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. It does?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Look now, please, Mr. Hillman, at blue print marked page No. 17, and you will find—

Mr. Holt: We have not offered that yet, your Honor. We are coming to that now.

The Master: Very good. Excuse me.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Mr. Hillman, have you prepared a supplemental exhibit supporting and explaining the Virginia Central Railroad Company's stock about which you have just testified?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. Will you please file it, marking it Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, 1863, Asset No. 4.

A. I file it so marked.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, 1863, Asset 4, September 2, 1914, C. B.

Q. What books and records if any did you examine in making up this supporting exhibit?

A. The report of the Board of Public Works, State of Virginia, Document No. 15, pages 41 to 64 for 1862, and pages 65 to 85 for 1863, on file in the Congressional Library at Washington, D. C.

Q. You may state whether or not this supporting exhibit is true and correctly sets down the result of your examination?

A. Yes, sir, it does.

Mr. Holt: Now your Honor, we would be glad to have you ask any questions.

By The Master:

Q. How do you reconcile these two items? Under item 4 Defendant's Exhibit 3, Virginia Central Railroad Company's stock is stated as $2,013,987.52, and on this schedule you have just put in you have stated here that the par of the stock is $3,292,444.73. Just tell me how you reached that result?

A. This is the total amount of outstanding stock of the company, but it is necessary to divide into the profits in order to determine the book value.

Q. It is the total for the whole company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That of course explains it, although there does not need to be anything on the exhibit to indicate what that is.

Mr. Holt: Is it in the record now, your Honor.

The Witness: Perhaps I ought to add this, your Honor. We do not know nor have we any trace until the State of Virginia commenced to dispose of this company's stock as to how much par value they held, and in order to take the safe side of the matter I did not take and make this calculation on 26,433.39 shares, which were afterwards sold, but took it at the figure which appears on the books of the company.

Q. Instead of taking what the value was declared to be by the number of shares that they held as a basis of your computation, you took what it appears they actually paid for the stock?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You predicated your conclusions on that?

A. Yes, sir.

The Master: That takes care of that. I understand that now. Of course it is easy now to see how that conclusion was reached, but they did not put anything on the exhibit to indicate it.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Have you prepared a second supporting exhibit concerning this Virginia Central stock?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. That is page No. 18, is it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you file it as Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, 1863, Asset C-4?

A. I file it so marked.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, 1863, Asset C-4, September 2, 1914, C. B.

Q. Does it truly represent the result of your examination?

A. Yes, sir, it does.

Q. Taking the item, loan to the Virginia Central Railroad Company, I find an item amounting to $210,000. What does that represent, Mr. Hillman?

A. That represents a loan made by the State of Virginia to the Virginia Central Railroad Company.

Q. Was that loan made prior or subsequent to January 1, 1861?

A. My recollection is that part of that loan was made prior to 1861, $90,000, and that the balance was made subsequent to January 1, 1861, $120,000.

Q. Well, what was the date of the last part of the loan?

A. On March 31, 1861, $90,000 in addition to the $90,000 prior to it, January 1, 1861. On June 30, 1861, $30,000.

Q. Making a sum total of what?

A. $210,000.

Q. Was that loan ever paid in full?

A. Yes, sir, it was paid in full with interest.

Q. Do you recall when it was paid?

A. July 1, 1870.

Q. Have you prepared an exhibit in support of and giving the history of this loan?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. Will you file it, marking it Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, 1863, Asset C-4, Asset D-4?

A. I file it so marked.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, 1863, Asset C-4, Asset D-4, September 2, 1914, C. B.

Q. It is page 19 of these exhibits, is it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What books did you examine in making up this supporting exhibit?

A. Ledger B., Internal Improvement Fund, State of Virginia; Cash Book 10, Internal Improvemnt Fund, Second Auditor's office, State of Virginia; and a statement on file in the File Room of the Corporation Commission of the State of Virginia, dated July 1, 1870, which is on file in a filing box in that Corporation Commission's rooms, and which is confirmed by the report of the Second Auditor in the State Book of Virginia of 1871.

Q. Does that exhibit state the truth?

A. Yes, sir, it does.

By The Master:

Q. How was that loan paid, in bonds or cash?

A. That was paid in bonds.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. The next item under the Virginia Central Railroad Company is dividend bonds, face value $58,650, as shown on the main exhibit. What does that mean?

A. That means that the Virginia Central had issued in lieu of dividends a bond, and that the State of Virginia owned $58,650, face value, of these dividend bonds, and that they were afterwards paid off in full by the Virginia Central Railroad Company to the State of Virginia.

By The Master:

Q. How were they paid, in bonds or in cash?

A. They were paid in bonds, sir.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. You have the same amount set down in the second column on the main exhibit, under the heading value June 20, 1863. What do you mean by that?

A. I mean that these dividend bonds were of par value in 1863, $58,650.

Q. What is the meaning of the same item in the last column?

A. It means that they received this amount for those bonds when they were finally cashed in.

Q. Who received them?

A. The State of Virginia.

By The Master:

Q. On what date were they paid?

A. August 25, 1870. And I would say that in the meantime these bonds had carried interest, and the interest had been paid upon them, as is shown in the same exhibit that we have just filed.

Q. How does that interest appear to have been paid, in cash or was it accumulative and finally adjusted by an exchange of bonds?

A. It was sometimes paid in the interim in cash and sometimes in bonds, paying it along as it accrued.

Q. That practice does not seem to have been uniform so far as the payments were concerned?

A. No, sir.

Mr. Anderson: Does your Honor refer to the principal of those dividend obligations or the interest on them?

The Master: The interest on them. A part of the interest on these bonds was paid in cash as it accrued, and such as was not paid in cash, as I understand it, was taken account of and paid in bonds.

Q. Am I right about that?

A. Yes, sir. Your Honor will note that this last payment which appears on page 19, the exhibit we have just filed, happened to be a cash payment and was paid in money.

Q. That is the item of $2,390.99?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Mr. Hillman, is this item of dividend bonds explained in detail in any of your supporting exhibits?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Which one is that?

A. Page 19.

Q. And that is Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, 1863, Asset C-4, Asset D-4, is it?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Holt: The point there was that we did not have a separate underlying exhibit for that item.

The Master: Yes.

Q. We come now to the fifth item on the main Exhibit 3, 1863, Blue Ridge Railroad Company, built by State of Virginia. Please explain the item, $1,674,723.23 thereon appearing.

A. That is the total cost to the State of Virginia for the construction of the Blue Ridge Railroad.

Q. What is the meaning of the same item in the first column on the main exhibit under the heading, value June 20, 1863?

A. It means that the value of the Blue Ridge Road in 1863 was taken as its cost to the State of Virginia.

By The Master:

Q. When was it constructed?

Mr. Holt: I think the underlying exhibit would show that, may be.

Mr. Anderson: It was all constructed prior to 1861.

Mr. Holt: Yes, I think so.

Q. Yes, but how long prior to 1861?

A. I can tell you in just a moment, your Honor.

Q. When was the road constructed?

A. It was constructed almost entirely prior to January 1, 1861.

Q. Oh yes, but when prior? That does not give me any information; that amounts to nothing. Was it one year or ten years? When did they begin the construction and when did they complete it? Simply to say prior to January, 1861, is no use to me.

A. I will give you that date in just a moment, your Honor.

Q. Of course what you have done is you have carried along as the value of this road on June 20, 1863, what it cost as an aggregate at some prior time. What I want to know is what that prior time was.

A. The construction of the Blue Ridge Railroad was commenced September 30, 1850, first payment, and it was finished in 1861. The amount invested after January 1, 1861, was $90,147.62.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. My next question, Mr. Hillman, is what do you mean by the item on the main exhibit in the last column $625,348.08?

A. That is the price which was obtained by the State of Virginia when they sold the Blue Ridge road to the Virginia Central.

Q. When was that sale made?

A. April 1, 1870.

Q. What was used in payment, bonds, cash or what?

A. Bonds for $574,921.48, accrued interest on these bonds of $50,417.64, and a check for $8.96, making a total of $625,348.-08.

Q. Have you prepared an exhibit in support and explanation of this item?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. What page is it?

A. Page No. 20.

Q. Will you please file this exhibit as a part of your deposition, marking it Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, 1863, Asset C-5; Asset D-20.

A. I file it, so marked.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, 1863, Asset C-5; Asset D-20, September 2, 1914, C. B.

Q. What books did you examine in making up this underlying or explanatory exhibit?

A. Ledger B., Internal Improvement Fund, folio 187; Journal D. Internal Improvement Fund, State of Virginia, folio 171.

Q. Is that exhibit true?

A. Yes, sir, it is.

Q. As appears from the books examined by you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Turning now to this supporting exhibit, I find that you have the same amount, $625,348.08, that appears on the main exhibit, and that you have added an item thereto that does not appear on the main exhibit of $5,833.81, making an aggregate of $631,201.89. Please explain the same?

A. The item of $5,833.81 belongs to our Schedule D which is an accrued dividend and does not appear in Schedule C, which relates to the sale of stocks and bonds and holdings of the company.

By The Master:

Q. While you claim you are entitled to the benefit of it, you claim it under another schedule and not this schedule?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does anything appear on the books that shows these transactions where the consideration paid to the State for bonds, that indicates the issuance of bonds that were involved, or is the entry just simply bonds?

A. The entry is generally coupon bonds or registered bonds with the interest.

Q. Does the entry refer to the class of bonds, I mean by that the purpose for which they were issued, or anything of that sort, or just simply coupon bonds or registered bonds?

A. Coupon bonds or registered bonds. Sometimes the date of issue of those bonds is mentioned, and they could probably be traced back by that.

Q. But that is not universal?

A. No, sir.

Q. That is, that is not true of every entry.

A. It is not. I suppose, your Honor, by going back to the bond record where individual bonds are mentioned, and picking out that date, covering the several thousand numbers which would be there, that it could be obtained.

Q. That is, with a sufficient amount of work they could probably be traced?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that you would be able to tell from what issues they were made?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But there is nothing in the books that gives that information so far as the entries are concerned?

A. No, sir, now and then there might be an isolated case where we could.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. The sixth item on the main exhibit is Alexandria, Loudoun & Hampshire Railroad Company stock, $1,017,248 Please explain that sum.

A. That is the amount of the money which the State of Virginia had invested in the stock of the Alexandria, Loudoun & Hampshire Railroad Company, and there is no record, as far as I know, to show how many shares of that stock were obtained by the state for this expenditure of money.

Q. What does the same item mean in the first column of the main exhibit?

A. It means that that was considered the value on June 20, 1863, it being carried on the books of the State of Virginia at that sum.

Q. What is the meaning of the item, $50,862.40 in the last column?

A. It means that this stock was disposed of at $5. a share on November 25, 1867.

Q. To whom? Who was the purchaser?

A. Bought by the Alexandria, Loudoun & Hampshire Railroad Company.

By The Master:

Q. By what?

A. By the railroad company itself.

Q. The same company purchased its own stock?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Have you prepared an exhibit, a supplemental exhibit, in support and explanation of this item?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. What page is it marked, please?

A. Page 21.

Q. Will you file it as a part of your deposition and mark it Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, 1863, Asset C-6?

A. I file it so marked.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, 1863, Asset C-6, September 2, 1914, C. B.

Q. In making up this supporting exhibit what record or books, if any did you examine? Instead of enumerating those I will change that and put it in this way. Does this supporting exhibit show upon its face the books and records examined by you in making up the same?

The Master: And why don't you say, and are the amounts correctly stated, and that will cover it all.

The Witness: Yes, sir, it does.

By The Master:

Q. And the amounts are correctly stated?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. The seventh item upon the main exihibit 3 is Winchester & Potomac Railroad Company loan, $83,333.33; and on that exhibit it is set down as of the same value as of June 20, 1863, and in the last column as having been paid in full. Is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. Have you prepared an exhibit in demonstration and explanation of this item?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. What page is it, please?

A. Page No. 22.

Q. Will you file this supporting exhibit as a part of your deposition and mark it Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, 1863, Asset C-7?

A. I file it so marked.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, 1863, Asset C-7, September 2, 1914, C. B.

Q. Does this supporting exhibit upon its face show the books and records examined by you in making up this exhibit?

A. Yes, sir, it does.

Q. And does the exhibit correctly represent those books and records?

A. Yes, sir.

By The Master:

Q. How was that loan paid, in cash or bonds?

A. Bonds. Your Honor, there is no record of whether that was a bond or cash received; it was received by the Treasurer of the Commonwealth, and no statement made as to whether it was money or bonds.

Q. Is there no cash book extant?

A. There is no cash book, it was journal entry, Journal D. September 30, 1862.

Q. Is there any cash book covering that period? Is there or is there not?

A. There is a cash book, yes, sir, for that period.

Q. What does the cash book show as to that item?

A. I cannot say, but I will know in a few minutes.

Q. Look it up. The cash book ought to determine whether it was cash or bonds.

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Holt: When we get through all of this we are going to ask a general question about that matter of bonds and cash.

The Witness: I find it was paid in bonds.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. The next item upon the main exhibit No. 3, 1863, is No. 8, Vrginia & Tennessee Railroad Company, Loan, and the item is $800,000. Please explain it.

A. That is the face value of a loan made by the State of Virginia to the South Side Railroad Company.

Q. Is it the South Side now or the Virginia & Tennessee?

A. I beg pardon, the Virginia & Tennessee.

Q. When was that loan made, Mr. Hillman, if you know?

A. It was made prior to January 1, 1861.

Q. We find the same item in the first column, $800,000., on the main exhibit. What does that mean?

A. It means that this loan was taken at its face value, being so carried upon the books of the State of Virginia.

Q. What does the item $686,685, upon that subject in the last column mean?

A. It means that that was the amount for which the loan was finally disposed of.

Q. Do you mean settled or paid?

A. Paid, yes, sir.

Q. To whom?

A. Paid to the State of Virginia by the Virginia & Tennessee Railroad Company.

Q. When was it settled or paid?

A. There was a payment of $200,000, made on it on June 19, 1863, reducing the loan from $1,000,000 to $800,000; on June 30, 1863 a further cash sum of $300,000 was paid; on August 6, 1863, $100,000 was paid; on August 7, 1863, $100,000; on September 11, 1863 there was $186,685 paid. There were no further payments made, as far as we can find on account of this loan.

Q. Have you prepared an exhibit in support of this item?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. What page is it?

A. Page 24.

Q. Page 23 here is a statement of loans and interest, Virginia & Tennessee Railroad Company and page 24 is the same thing.

The Master: Page 23 does not seem to fit in very well.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Please explain what is the difference between page 23 and page 24, composing the underlying exhibits. One relates to one subject and the other to another, does it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What are they?

A. Page No. 23 relates to the payment of the interest on the loan of this million dollars, of which the $800,000, was a part; and page 24 relates to the payment of the principal.

Q. Very well. Now then, in support of this item you have prepared two exhibits, one relating to interest and one relating to principal; is that so?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you please file the one relating to interest on this loan as Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, 1863, Asset C-8 and Asset D-7.

A. I file it, so marked.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, 1863, Asset C-8 and Asset D-7, September 2, 1914, C. B.

Q. Will you now likewise file the second supporting exhibit, page No. 24, relating to the principal of this loan, and mark it Defendant's Exhibit 3, 1863, Asset C-8 and Asset D-7.

A. I file it so marked.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, 1863, Asset C-8 and Asset D-7, September 2, 1914, C. B.

Q. Do these two supporting exhibits last mentioned set forth the records and books examined by you in making up the same?

A. Yes, sir, they do.

Q. Do they correctly represent those books?

A. Yes, sir.

By The Master:

Q. As I understand it all payments on this loan were cash payments?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do the books show anything as to whether or not this loan was adjusted for the final payment of $186,685, leaving the total payments on account of principal at $686,685?

A. They show no such adjustment.

Q. The account of that transaction stops with that item?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that leaves a balance due on the principal?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Which apparently has not been paid?

A. Yes, sir, and in addition to that I call your attention to the foot note on page 24, wherein I state that the loan was never paid in full, but the unpaid balance was turned over to the A. M. & O., together with other items of the Southside Railroad, Virginia & Kentucky Railroad and Norfolk & Petersburg Railroad, for four million dollars; see our Exhibit 6 of Class F.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. What was the amount of the unpaid balance?

A. From this statement in the Journal entry where this statement is made it does not show what the unpaid balance was.

Q. Does your exhibit show?

A. It does not show any unpaid balance.

Q. Don't you show how many payments were made?

A. Yes, sir.

By The Master:

Q. The computation is not made on the schedule?

A. That is what I mean.

Q. Where do you find the account of the balance that appears to be due on this loan that entered into this aggregate of four million dollars that you have just been speaking of? Do you find that on the books of Virginia somewhere?

A. Yes, sir, we find the mention of the balance of the loan made, but no amount mentioned, it simply mentions turning over Vrginia's interest in this loan to the A. M. & O., but not mentioning any value.

Q. What is the A. M. & O.

A. The Atlantic, Mississippi & Ohio Road.

Q. Well, is there anything anywhere that shows the items which aggregated the four million dollars?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Holt: That is in a separate schedule, your Honor, that A. M. & O.

Q. Then when we come to that that will show how the various items are accounted for?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that ought to leave a balance due on this loan?

A. Yes, sir, but there are no figures representing what that balance was; it simply turns over all the State of Virginia's interest in the loan, without mentioning any amount.

Q. Yes, but there are other details mentioned which go to make up the four millions?

A. Yes, sir, but the aggregate of the other details mentioned amounted to considerably more than four million dollars, and four million dollars was taken in settlement.

Q. A lump sum adjustment?

A. Yes, sir.

The Witness: There was an act passed on February 22, 1866, to relieve this road from the amount that they owed the State, which then amounted to about $146,000, by the payment of $83, 333.33, in State bonds.

The Master: That is the Winchester proposition?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. The next item upon the main exhibit is No. 9, South Side

Railroad Company loan, $800,000, is the first sum mentioned. Please explain it, Mr. Hillman?

A. That was the face value of the loan by the State of Virginia to the South Side Railroad Company prior to January 1, 1861.

Q. What is the meaning of the same item in the first column of the main exhibit, $800,000.

A. That this loan was carried on the books of the State of Virginia at face value of $800,000.

Q. What is the meaning of the note, turned over to Atlantic, Mississippi and O., on this subject in the third column?

A. That the A. M. & O. bought this loan as well as other items when they paid $4,000,000., to the State of Virginia for their holdings in the Virginia & Tennessee, South Side, Norfolk & Petersburg, and the Virginia & Kentucky Road, which Virginia & Kentucky Road was not mentioned here.

By the Master:

Q. You refer to that transaction when they gave a second mortgage on the road for $4,000,000?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Have you prepared an exhibit in support and explanation of this item No. 9?

A. Yes, sir, I have prepared a sub-statement showing the interest, the settlement of the interest upon the above loan.

Q. Of $800,000?

A. Of $800,000, yes, sir.

Q. Is it page No. 25?

A. It is, yes, sir.

Q. Will you be kind enough to file it as part of your deposition, marking it Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, 1863, Asset D-8; Asset C-9?

A. I file it so marked.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, 1863, Asset D-8; Asset C-9, September 2, 1914, C. B.

Q. Does that supporting exhibit indicate upon its face the books and records examined by you in making up the same?

A. Yes, sir, it does.

Q. Does it correctly and truly set forth the condition of the books and records so examined by you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. No. 10 on the main exhibit is Norfolk & Petersburg Railroad Company loan—

The Master: On page 25, these items of payments are noted in detail here as payments of interest?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

The Master: And payments in cash?

The Witness: Payments of interest in cash, yes, sir.

Q. No. 10 on the main exhibit is Norfolk & Petersburg Railroad loan, $300,000. What do you mean by that?

A. I mean that on June 20, 1863, the Norfolk & Petersburg Railroad Company had a loan from the State of Virginia of $300,000. It was not discovered apparently by the State of Virginia until 1870 that part of this investment in the Norfolk & Petersburg Railroad was stock and part of it was a loan. The entry was then made separating the two and relating at length that such an error had been made on its books.

Q. The $300,000 represents the loan when separated from the stock, does it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What does the item $137,000 in that connection mean in the first column?

A. It means that of this $300,000 loan there had been paid in cash $137,000 prior to the date of December 22, 1870. This appears from the Journal entry wherein the $4,000,000 is taken up as the purchase price of these four roads and shows that there was a balance outstanding in this road of that date of $168,000. and that $137,000 had been paid. It is the only evidence of value we have of that loan at the date June 20, 1863, or how much it was disposed of for outside of its inclusion in the lump sum of $4,000,000 and therefore the sum of $137,000 is entered as its value June 20, 1863, and disposed of for the same amount.

By the Master:

Q. Was there a regular account of the State of Virginia with this road dating back to the time when they appear to have invested in the sum of $1,499,970?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is there anything about that account that indicates how they ascertained that $300,000 was a loan and not an investment in stock?

A. No, sir, nothing except this Journal entry, which was not made until 1870.

Q. $137,000 in cash had been paid in meanwhile, which must have thrown the account out of joint a good deal.

Mr. Harrison: Why do you speak of that entry as a discovery?

The Witness: I mean that the State of Virginia did not discover the fact that they had a loan outstanding until 1870, or if they did discover it, no record of it was made on their books until that date when the Journal entry states that they had discovered that $300,000 was a loan.

Mr. Holt: I expect the underlying exhibit will give that history.

Q. On that very date the $137,000 was probably paid in I infer from what you say about the books.

A. Yes, sir; I have an inference that it was paid in from the fact that only $163,000 of that was outstanding when they turned it over to the A. M. & O.

Q. Was that in 1870?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. At the very time that the entry shows that there was a loan of $300,000 it also shows the facts from which you infer that the loan was only $165,000?

A. No, sir, there is no entry on the books to show that fact; there is only the inference that they disposed of the entire amount for $4,000,000.

Mr. Holt: All he can do, your Honor, is to give the facts for whatever your Honor may consider them to mean hereafter.

Q. I understand the fact is that there is a Journal entry in these records that shows that in making this mortgage of $4,000,000 there also among other things was taken into account $163,000.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That was said to be a loan to this Norfolk & Petersburg Railroad?

A. Balance of the loan, yes, sir.

Q. And that same entry is the first entry that indicates the existence of a $300,000 loan, am I right about that?

A. No, sir. There is an entry on the books transferring from the stock of the Norfolk & Petersburg to a loan of the Norfolk & Petersburg $300,000.

Q. Does that antedate this general entry upon which the $4,000,000 transaction was predicated, and if so by how much?

A. It is made the same date.

Q. On the same day?

A. Yes, sir.

The Master: Of course we have to take it for what it is worth.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Have you prepared, Mr. Hillman, an exhibit in support and explanation of this loan—

The Master: I think we had better have those entries copied and put in the record. You can simply say "I make the entries above referred to part of my testimony and put them in," so that when we have occasion to look for it we can see just exactly what the entries show. Put in the date and everything.

The Witness: Your Honor, I will have copies of those entries made and filed.

The Master: Just simply say "I make those entries part of my testimony," and then let them go right in here.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. My question is whether you have prepared an exhibit explaining this loan to the Norfolk & Petersburg Railroad Company or have you prepared a supporting exhibit covering the loan and stock; the stock we have not inquired about yet?

A. I have prepared an exhibit covering the loan and the stock.

Q. Then before coming to that Exhibit I will ask you about the stock of the Norfolk & Petersburg Railroad Company, No. 10, Main Exhibit. What is the meaning of the item $1,199,970 in that connection?

A. It means that that is the amount of the money which the State of Virginia invested in Norfolk & Petersburg Railroad stock.

Q. Distinct from the $300,000 loan or included in the $300,000 loan?

A. Distinct from the $300,000 loan.

Q. What is the meaning of the same item in the first column of the main exhibit?

A. It means that this was carried on the books of the State of Virginia at $1,199,970. I would like to say here that they had an even amount of stock of $1,200,000 for an investment of $1,199,970.

Q. What is the meaning of the note in the last column, turned over to A. M. & O.?

A. It means that this stock was turned over to the Atlantic, Mississippi & Ohio Railroad Company.

Q. In the $4,000,000 transaction?

A. In the $4,000,000 transaction.

Q. Does page No. 26 represent the exhibit in support of the loan and stock of the Norfolk & Petersburg Railroad?

A. Yes, sir, it does.

Q. Will you please file it as part of your deposition and mark it Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, 1863, Asset C-10 and D-9.

A. I so file it, marked as requested.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, 1863, Asset C-10; Asset D-9, September 2, 1914, C. B.

Q. Does this supporting exhibit last referred to show upon its face the books and records and official documents examined by you in making up the same, and is it correct?

A. Yes, sir, it does and it is.

Q. The next item upon the main exhibit is No. 11, Roanoke Navigation Company stock. The item is $80,000. Please explain it?

A. It represents the amount of the Roanoke Navigation stock held by the State of Virginia June 20, 1863, par value and amount expended to acquire the stock.

Q. What is the meaning of the same item in the first column on the main exhibit?

A. It means that it was carried upon the books of the State of Virginia at par on $80,000.

Q. As of what date?

A. June 20, 1863.

Q. What is the meaning of the items $3,832 in the item marked "Disposed of for?"

A. It means that this stock was disposed of for the amount of $3,832 face.

Q. Who sold it?

A. It was sold by decree of the court.

By The Master:

Q. What sort of a proceeding was it, a dissolution of the company?

A. What is it?

Q. Was it a dissolution of the company or what was it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. A dissolution of the company?

A. A dissolution of the company.

Q. And the result of the dissolution and the sale of all the stock was a distribution to the State of that sum of money?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Harrison: What was the amount?

A. The sale was made in 1875, with the first payment, and then the payments dragged along until 1884 before they were finally settled.

By The Master:

Q. To whom was it sold? No matter, if you cannot remember.

A. It was sold to its ownself, it was bought by the Upper Appomattox Company.

Q. Well, the corporation bought its own stock?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. How did it pay for the same?

A. On February 24, 1875, there was a cash payment made of $3,000; on January—— date omitted——1881, there was a payment made of $2,280.

A. I file it so marked.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, 1863, Asset C-14, September 2, 1914, C. B.

The Witness: I call the attention of the Court to the fact that the Board of Public Works, after receiving this money, invested it in Virginia bonds, and turned those into the sinking fund in lieu of the cash, as will appear from an investigation of the foot note upon the exhibit which I have just filed.

Q. Do you mean the underlying exhibit, the supporting exhibit?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Page 30?

A. Page 30.

Q. It is explained there?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does this supporting exhibit indicate upon its face the books, records and official documents from which you made up the same?

A. Yes, sir.

By The Master:

Q. And is it true?

Mr. Holt: I was going to ask him.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Did you truly make it up?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Holt: I am a little awkward on that, your Honor. I beg your pardon.

Q. The fifteenth item upon the main Exhibit 3 is loan to Washington College. The item is $2,000. What does it mean?

A. It means that upon June 20, 1863, Washington College owed the State of Virginia $2,000 on account of moneys advanced to that college.

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. How was this payment made, in cash or in securities of any kind?

A. In money.

Q. Have you prepared an exhibit in support and explanation of this item?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. What is the page number of it?

A. Page 31.

Q. Will you file the supporting exhibit and mark it Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, 1863, Asset C-15, Asset D-11?

A. I file it so marked.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, 1863, Asset C-15, Asset D-11, September 2, 1914, C. B.

Q. Does this exhibit show upon its face, books, records, and official documents from which you made up the same, and is it true?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The sixteenth item upon the main exhibit is Richmond Academy bonds, and the item is $400. Tell us what it is.

A. It is an investment of the State of Virginia in the bonds of the Richmond Academy at par, $400, or at face value.

Q. What is the meaning of the same item in the last column?

A. That on February 5, 1896, the State of Virginia received the par of this bond, it having in the meantime paid the interest regularly.

By The Master:

Q. In cash?

A. In cash.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Have you prepared an exhibit in support and explanation of this item?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. What is the page number?

A. Page No. 32.

Q. Will you file the same as a part of your deposition marking it Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, 1863, Asset C-16, Asset D-12?

A. I file it so marked.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, 1863, Asset C-16, Asset D-12, September 2, 1914, C. B.

Q. You may now tell us whether or not this exhibit indicates upon its face the books, records, and official documents from which you made it up, and whether or not it truly represents these documents?

A. Yes, sir.

.....

Q. The 17th item upon the main exhibit is claim against the United States Government; the item is $298,369.74. Please explain it.

A. This is the principal of a loan made by Virginia to the United States Government as of the date of July 1, 18—.

Q. What is the meaning of the same amount set down in the first column of the main exhibit?

A. It means that the value of that loan on June 20, 1863 was $298,369.74.

Q. Do you mean that was the principal of the loan as of that date?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. As shown upon the books of Virginia?

A. No, sir, it does not show upon the books of Virginia. There is no place that it shows on the books of Virginia.

By The Master:

Q. It does not have any account with that loan?

A. There is no record that we can find of that loan on the books of Virginia.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Where then do you get your authority for this, Mr. Hillman?

A. From a record of the settlement of this claim with the United States Government, which is on file in the Second Auditor's office in a particular file kept in his vault.

Q. Of Virginia?

A. The Second Auditor of Virginia, yes, sir. And the settlement is confirmed by the papers which we have here this morning, a statement from the Assistant Treasurer of the United States—

Q. Do you mean the two certificates I offered in evidence this morning, made by the Assistant Treasurer of the United States?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That relates only to principal, as I understand, this amount?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is the meaning of the same amount in the last column?

A. It means that the State of Virginia received $298,369.74 for the face of this loan.

Q. When was it received?

A. It was received in 1903, but the transaction was dated back to 1894.

Q. Have you prepared an exhibit in support and explanation of this item?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. What is the page number?

A. Page No. 33.

Q. Will you file this supporting exhibit and mark it Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, 1863, Asset D-13, Asset C-17?

A. I file it so marked.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, 1863, Asset D-13, Asset C-17, C. B.

Q. Does this exhibit show upon its face the documents, records and books upon which it is based, and does it truly represent the same?

A. Yes, sir, it does.

Q. The next item upon the main exhibit is No. 18, claim against Selden, Withers & Co., and it seems to be $132,842.74. Please explain it?

A. This is the amount which was collected from the firm of Selden, Withers & Co., which had failed and which at the time of the failure had had in their hands a large amount of Virginia securities for disposal, and also had disposed of a large amount of securities which were unaccounted for; and these were the relics that they were able to collect on account from their various assets and assignments for their debt after 1861.

Q. When was this collection made by the State of Virginia?

A. It was made in the years from 1866 on to 1891, at various dates.

Q. Have you prepared an exhibit in confirmation and explanation of this item?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. What is the page number?

A. Page No. 34.

Q. Will you file this supporting exhibit as a part of your deposition, marking the same Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, 1863, Asset C-18?

A. I file it so marked.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, 1863, Asset C-18, September 2, 1914, C. B.

Q. Tell us now whether or not this exhibit indicates upon its face the records, books and public documents from which you made it up, and whether or not it truly represents the same.

A. It contains the pages and references to each document from which the amounts were drawn. Whether or not it represents all that was received from this firm on account of the debt I am unwilling to say, but I am willing to state that at least this much was received, and it is all that I could trace.

By The Master:

Q. Well, it represents all that you could find on the books?

A. All that I could find, yes, sir. May I call your attention—

Q. Is there anything on the books to show the total amount of the indebtedness of the stock broker's concern to the State?

A. No, sir. May I call your attention to the fact that some of these accounts which were received in Marietta & Cincinnati stock were converted into cash, and afterwards the cash invested in State bonds.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. What State bonds?

A. The State bonds of Virginia, sir; and that is shown in a foot note on this Page 24, and explains how the item of $152,023.04 claimed in our supplemental answer was originally determined.

Q. Did you mean page 24 or page 34?

A. 34.

Q. The last item on the main exhibit is No. 19, Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac Railroad Company, dividend bonds. The item is $122,464. Please briefly explain that item.

A. This is the amount of bonds issued by the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac Railroad Company in lieu of cash dividends and is called not only a dividend bond but is sometimes called a certificate of debt of the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac road. This is the amount which the State of Virginia received on its account, $122,464.

By The Master:

Q. Then they carried it on their books at that sum, and they still have it on, is that right?

A. Yes, sir, and it has paid interest and dividends ever since.

Q. Do you mean to say that they have regularly paid interest on the dividend bonds?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And are they still held in the treasury of the State of Virginia? I see your schedule here says they are on hand.

Mr. Holt: He is looking for the answer to your question.

A. They are not on hand. They were sold.

Q. Explain it?

A. It was paid on July 1, 1863.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. You say "it;" do you mean they, the bonds?

A. Yes, sir, the bonds, or the certificate of debt.

By The Master:

Q. Then what you mean by on hand is that they were on hand June 20, 1863, is that it?

A. They were on hand, but the notation says on my exhibit that they are on hand; they are not; it is an error in that second column.

Q. Sold or paid—were they paid?

A. Yes, sir, paid, as my supporting exhibit or sub-exhibit shows that sale.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Have you prepared an exhibit in support and explanation of this last item, No. 19?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. What is the page number?

A. Page No. 35.

Q. Will you file the supporting exhibit and mark the same Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, 1863, Asset D-6; Asset C-19?

A. I file it so marked.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, 1863, Asset D-6; Asset C-19, September 2, 1914, C. B.

Q. Does this exhibit indicate upon its face the books, records and documents from which you made it up and have you truly made it up therefrom?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Holt: Now, your Honor, I believe that finishes that omnibus and is at least one half of all these exhibits.

The Master: That would seem to be, yes.

Mr. Holt: Now, if your Honor is willing to let us go, we will be glad to do it.

The Master: We will adjourn in a few moments to tomorrow at 10 o'clock. It may be that I ought to make a suggestion something like this. In the first place, I am offering no opinion one way or the other on anything that is before me; but there is a large mass of detail material that has been placed in here by the State of West Virginia and as to which they contend that their evidence either does show or will ultimately show or tend to show a certain condition as to value. I would expect the State of Virginia, so far as those contentions can be answered by available proof, to meet each one of the items. If it should happen to turn out that there is an item suggested by West Virginia as to which there may be some evidence tending to establish a certain value and there is no countervailing testimony, it may place me in a position where I would have to find in accordance with whatever testimony might be submitted by them. I only make this suggestion with the object of having each side be careful as to all these items, whatever they may be. I cannot carry these in my head, and if it should turn out that some of these items do not happen to be certain, of course the parties must bear in mind that the Master may have to take into account the case exactly as he finds it, even though the evidence may not be very strong, if there does not happen to be anything in opposition. The parties must understand that the Master may be in a position where he may have to take what he finds, and report accordingly.

Mr. Harrison: We expect to deal with each item.

The Master: Then we will suspend until tomorrow at 10 o'clock.

The Witness: This cash that I have marked on hand here will change the total of this omnibus exhibit, and I will have Mr. Leeds of my force just make the changes.

The Master: Certainly. Make the changes on the schedule which you submit to the stenographer and make a like change upon the exhibits that they have, so that they will be in a position to check the thing up accordingly.

I think we have made very good progress today.

Adjourned to September 3, 1914, at 10 A. M.

BEFORE THE MASTER

Richmond, Va., September 3, 1914.

Present the same counsel as on yesterday.

Mr. Holt: Your Honor, in looking at page 379 of the typewritten report of the evidence, I find that pages 9, 10 and 11, constituting one of the underlying exhibits inquired about yesterday, were proven but not filed and marked. It seems that we came to the point where Mr. Hillman stated that they correctly represented the books of the State of Virginia, and then we became diverted for some reason or other, and they were not filed.

The Master : If there is no objection the stenographer can insert right there, wherever you wish it, the statement that they are filed, or that they were filed and marked. This correction need not appear this morning in the record, but the record will be corrected in accordance with that suggestion.

Mr. Holt: They should be marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, 1863, Asset C-1, Asset D-1, consisting of sheets 1, 2 and 3.

The papers were admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, 1863, Asset C-1, Asset D-1, three sheets, September 2, 1914, C. B.

Mr. Holt: We have also discovered that page 13, being one of the underlying exhibits, was not filed, and we desire now to file it and mark it Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, 1863, Asset C-2, Asset D-2.

The Master: We will have that filed and have it appear in the transcript in the place where it ought to have been put in. When the case is printed, Mr. Harris, you will look out for that.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, 1863, Asset C-2, Asset D-2, September 2, 1914, C. B.

The Master: I understand Mr. Hillman wants to make some change in some schedule.

Mr. Hillman: They have all been changed.

Continuation of the direct-examination of
CONWAY W. HILLMAN

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Is there any explanation, Mr. Hillman, that you desire to make or any correction relative to the exhibits introduced yesterday?

A. No, sir. That correction of which I spoke will appear in the exhibits which we are about to take up, and I have corrected the copies.

The Master: My attention is called this morning to the fact that so much of the case as is already printed, involving several hundred pages here, is of course still in type, and with the capacity of the office here it would be a convenience to them to be able to distribute this type as soon as may be. In order to do that they will have to strike off their final number of copies and then distribute this type and keep going on. They are in a position where they can do that provided that this record as we have it now is satisfactory to both sides. I would like to inquire whether or not you have made such examination of it upon both sides that we can now tell the printer that he can distribute this type after he has printed the required number of copies, and if not—how is it from Virginia? Have you examined so that you are satisfied that the record is all right?

Mr. Harrison: I did not examine it with a view of anything except refreshing my mind about the matter. I have been over a good part of the report that was handed to me last night.

The Master: Then before it is distributed you prefer to have somebody look at it carefully?

Mr. Anderson: I observed some typographical errors in the printing.

The Master: There are several changes to be made, that is, changes that have already been called attention to are to be made. If with those changes made the record is agreeable to both sides, it would be a convenience to the printer to let him print his complement of copies up to that stage and distribute his type and go on. I suppose he has not type enough without embarrassing him to keep all standing. If it is agreeable I will simply say to Mr. Harris that when the corrections that have been suggested are made the record may be considered as final and he may print the final hundred copies and distribute his type and then be prepared to go on with the balance of the case. Is that agreeable? Of course the suggestion is that if either side desire additional copies in addition to the one hundred they will notify the printer so that he will print them. I thought one hundred would be all that we would need.

Mr. Anderson: I would like to examine the record a little more critically than I have.

Mr. Holt: I would rather the printer would hold his type for a little while yet, for this reason, there are some additional corrections to be made, not of a formal nature but of a substantial nature. Mr. Hillman has called my attention to them. We will try and accomplish them to-day so that the type may be used.

The Master: We will let the question of distributing the type suspend until to-morrow morning. Of course I do not wish to push you unduly, but other things being equal it would be great convenience to the printer if we could let him distribute his type. So the understanding will be if possible to-morrow morning both sides will report such changes as they desire to be made.

Mr. Anderson: As to any variations in the schedules, we will have to leave that to our friends of West Virginia.

The Master: Whatever either side does, the record should show and our attention be called to it in open session and if there is any objection to any correction, of course that correcttion must not be made until each side has the opportunity to make examination.

Mr. Holt: Of course, your Honor, any corrections that we will undertake to make will be made upon the witness stand.

The Master: Certainly. Subject to a substantial controversy about some item, what I intend is to have the original record, with these corrections that may be suggested, printed, so that the record will not disclose the fact that any errors have been made. There is no reason why that should not be done. There is no reason why the record should be encumbered with immaterial changes or immaterial errors. We will have one clean record when we get through, unless something comes up which anybody thinks should be changed on the record.

Mr. Anderson: I have to report to your Honor that in going over the typewritten copy of the proceedings of yesterday, the representative of West Virginia and myself were not able to agreee as to what might be eliminated. It seems to me that we might eliminate a large mass of that report containing the colloquies between the Master and counsel, as to immaterial questions, because the court will never consider them for a moment, as to the mode of procedure here, and matters of that kind. Deferring to the wishes of our friends from West Virginia I have not insisted on striking it out, but I think it is my duty to report the facts to the Master.

The Master: I am not going to enter into the question of whether it ought to go out or whether it ought to stay in. Of course I am required to report this record. I cannot perhaps anticipate in advance just what may be material on one side or the other. My own view of it is that you ought to agree among yourselves and make the record as concise as possible, but I shall expect that you agree on that, because I am not going to be in a position when I get through with this case of being criticised by one side or the other for having eliminated anything from the record which either side may think would shed some light on the controversy. This need not go into the record.

(The Master then made some further observations which were not recorded by the stenographer.)

Mr. Hogg: I think we shall have no trouble about agreeing what ought to go in and what ought to come out.

Mr. Holt: Your Honor, the reason why—of course your Honor does not know it, but my colleague does—why I have been rather a stickler for the printing of the whole thing is this. You will observe when you come to read over some of those colloquies even, that they partake of the nature now and then of stipulations, some of them do, and would not be subject to dispute hereafter. And it is for fear that something in the nature of a stipulation or an agreement might be omitted that I feel that it should all be printed. Now, so far as your Honor's statement of a moment ago was concerned, while it was not taken, by your direction, I think it would have been very well if it had been taken.

The Master: I have no objection to its being taken.

Mr Holt: It shows that you have warned us about certain things, and nobody can raise any complaint hereafter. I find it best always to get what has occurred, and let either side utilize it afterwards as they think proper.

The Master: There is no suggestion of criticism from me. There is only one purpose to be accomplished in narrowing down this record, and that is the convenience of counsel in looking over the record and making up their argument, it makes less material for them to go through; and then, so far as I am concerned, it will make less material for me to wade through when I am making my report. I would not leave anything out of the record that had any reasonable tendency to affect any of these issues, whether it was testimony or whether it was discussion. So far as your cutting anything out is concerned, it is only a matter of a few dollars, and I do not think that makes much difference in a case of this importance.

Mr. Holt: It wont make a matter of a hundred dollars difference.

The Master: And suppose it was four or five hundred dollars; what is a matter of four or five hundred dollars in printing in a case of this size.

Mr. Anderson: I do not propose to strike a word out of the record; the record of this hearing is this transcript made by the stenographer. I only propose that we shall strike out of this record immaterial matter so far as the Court is concerned, matter that would not be informing to the Court in this case, and which the Court would not consider for one minute, and which simply encumbers the record and is confusing. As far as any stipulation is concerned, it will remain here in black and white in the stenographer's transcript to refresh the memory of either party.

Mr. Holt: My idea would be to get the stenographic report in print and let them correspond. So far as General Anderson is concerned, we all know that he will be both safe and fair in anything that he might strike out. I would not care even to look at it. I will say that.

The Master: The record that this case is going to be determined on, unless there is some decided objection to this procedure—you may take this down—the record that this case is going to be determined upon by me, and of course it will be ultimately determined upon by the Court, will be this printed record. That is what I am going to certify. I am not going to send up this typewritten transcript. Of course we are taking the typewritten transcript for the purpose of preserving what has been done here, but when I decide the case I am going to decide it on the printed record, and of course the Court will do the same thing. Whatever you both agree on will go up as the record. If there is anything that you do not both agree on, it will all be printed. If you agree to eliminate it, it will go out; and if you do not agree, it will go in. I think that makes it all clear. And consistently with that, of course both sides will do the best they can to give us as concise and as brief a record as is compatible with the interests of both parties. I am very glad to have these matters called up. A little statement of the matter clarifies the atmosphere and leaves us so that we know where we are. Now, you may proceed, Judge.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Mr. Hillman, we come now to Class D as it appears in the exhibits to the Supplemental Answer, consisting of interest on loans and dividends on stock accrued prior to January 1, 1861, upon common investments and collected by the State of Virginia after January 1, 1861. Have you prepared a general or main exhibit analyzing this Class D?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. What is the page number on the blue prints of this exhibit?

A. Page No. 36.

Q. You may state what records, books and public documents, if any have been examined by you and upon which you have based this exhibit.

A. The list is a very long one.

The Master: Excuse me, Judge. This is the summary you are inquiring about?

Mr. Holt: No. We have now come to Class D., page 36, and this is the omnibus, just like the other was the omnibus in Class C. But I want to say for the consolation of the Court that all of the underlying exhibits, with the exception of one that supports this omnibus, have already been introduced in support of the other omnibus or main Exhibit No. 3, so that this will be very short compared with the other.

The Master: Would it be a satisfactory answer to you for him to say—

Q. If you can state that they are set forth in the underlying exhibits heretofore filed in support of Schedule C, you may do so.

A. Yes, sir, they are stated in the underlying or sub-exhibits heretofore filed, with one exception, and that is on items 14, 15 16 and 17, wherein the supporting exhibit will be filed with another class and as you call for it.

Q. Will you file this exhibit, page 36, and mark it Defendant's Exhibit No. 4, 1863?

A. Yes, sir, I file it so marked.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 4, 1863, September 3, 1914, C. B.

Q. Does this exhibit just filed, or does it not, correctly state the figures and records examined by you?

A. Yes, sir, it does correctly state them.

Q. Looking at the first item thereon I find the Orange & Alexandria Railroad Company stock and after the same the amount $31,604.09. Will you please explain that item?

The Master: Can an explanation be made that is characteristic of all of the items that follow?

Mr. Holt: I think I can in a moment or two do that very thing. I am going to make this one very short, because the underlying exhibits are all in with one exception. Some of them require, as you will see, a little explanation, overpaid and things like that.

A. This amount represents a dividend on the Orange & Alexandria stock declared in 1854, but paid in 1864. The reference would be found on page 9 of the exhibits already filed.

Q. Do you mean that that was one dividend or is it an accumulation of dividends?

A. It was one dividend.

Q. Please explain the item just below that, overpaid $1.02.

A. If you will allow me, Judge, before answering that question, I would like to call attention to page 9 on this set of schedules wherein this amount of $31,604.09 is set out, that there was on the same page of Journal B., page 157, of the Department of Public Works of Virginia another dividend of $34,912 paid at the same time.

The Master: That is, paid in 1864?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

A. (Continuing) But no date was given as to when that dividend was declared, or what period it covered. It is therefore entered here as doubtful and no claim has been made.

The Master: You simply make a note of it and refer to it as doubtful, but do not include it in your computation, am I right about that?

The Witness: You are correct.

The Master: By reason of the fact that you are not able to fix from the books the time when the dividend accrued and was paid?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

Q. That though is no part of the $31,604.09?

The Master: No, entirely independent, as I understand it.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The question is, Mr. Hillman, explain that $1.02 overpaid?

A. That appears upon page 11 of the exhibits which we have filed.

Q. Of this set of exhibits? I like that term.

A. Of this set of exhibits, 1863 exhibits, in the foot note, wherein there was $1.02 overpaid in the final settlement of the stocks and loans, which have been added to the dividends on the Orange & Alexandria stock of $31,604.09, so as to make the total which we have claimed for consideration of $31,605.11.

Q. Then that explains the difference between the total in the second column and that in the first, or the $31,604.09 and the $31,605.11?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Hillman, you have prepared, I believe an exhibit in support of this item. Has it already been filed?

A. Yes, sir, it has.

Q. What underlying exhibit is it?

A. It is Exhibit No. 3, 1863, Asset C-1 and D-1, pages 9, 10 and 11.

Q. The second item upon that main exhibit is Richmond & Danville Railroad Company, stock nothing; loans nothing. What is the meaning of that?

The Master: Judge, right there, if there is no objection, wont you ask him what the significance of this item is. This follows some previous schedules which you have introduced; and what I want to get into my mind, as we start out is whether this is to be added to or subtracted from any schedule.

Mr. Holt: I can explain that in one moment, your Honor. You will find by turning to pages 54 and 55 of the supplemental answer that class C, which was covered yesterday, is made up of the proceeds of the sale of securities purchased with common funds of the two states by the State of Virginia, prior to the 1st of January, 1861, and sold by the State of Virginia afterwards, while Class D is the one that we are now upon, which covers interest on loans and dividends upon stock in Class D. The schedules to-day relate to interest on loans and dividends on stock, while Class C. of yesterday related to principal of the loans and the amount of the stock.

The Master: Yes. But you do not perhaps get my point. What I want to get into my head is the use that I am going to make of this schedule when I come to reach my conclusion. This relates to Class D. Now the first item under Class D. is Orange & Alexandria Railroad Company, $18,144.29. Now, this item is $31,605.11. Of course I have not carried these things in my head, but what I want to get at is, is that item substituted for this item, or is it to be added to or taken from it.

Mr. Holt: Answer, Mr. Hillman.

The Witness: It is a substitute for item 1 on Class D in the supplemental answer.

By The Master:

Q. Are these items that follow here on page 36 of the same character and introduced for the same purpose?

A. Yes, sir.

The Master: If they are all of that class that answer covers the whole ground.

Mr. Holt: That is the case.

The Master: But in the absence of some explanation it would be difficult for me to understand it.

Mr. Holt: Of course your Honor understands this, that all these items set down in this schedule are to be added to the items set down in Schedule C.

The Master: Yes, but as to Class D., let me see if I understand this correctly now—as to Class D which aggregates $1,834,409.28, I am to take, as the case of the defendant, Schedule 36, which aggregates $1,355,267.63—I am right about that, am I?

Mr. Holt: That is right.

The Master: And the schedule gives the details showing the changes that it has been found necessary to make, when you come to get at your actual facts and make your computations.

Mr. Holt: That is right.

The Master: So that practically you substitute page 36 for the schedule found under Class D. on pages 55 and 56.

Mr. Holt: That is right.

The Master: Subject to that, go ahead with the explanation. That saves me any confusion.

The Witness: Of course your Honor understands that Class D. as made up on page 55 of the supplemental answer is the January 1, 1861, schedule, while the one under discussion is the one of June 20, 1863.

Mr. Holt: You have already a schedule in under 1861.

The Master: This schedule shows the changes that were found necessary to make in order to predicate your conclusions on June 20, 1863.

Mr. Holt: Yes, that is correct.

The Master: I pay no attention to Class D. in the answer, but I do devote my time to this schedule. As to January 1, 1861, the schedule and the answer still stands so far as it is consistent.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. The second item upon this Exhibit 4 is Richmond & Danville Railroad Company, stock, nothing, nothing; and under it, loan, nothing, nothing. What does that mean?

A. It means that all interest had been paid up to this date, and that there was no accumulation of interest on the loan, and no dividend on that stock had been paid which would be prorated over this date, so that it would remain at zero as far as any interest or dividend were concerned.

Q. The third item is Richmond & Petersburg Railroad Company stock, $41,857.80. What is that?

A. That is the proportion of the semi-annual dividend from the Richmond & Petersburg stock which was declared on June 30, 1863 and paid July 1, 1863, to the sum of $23,136. The $21,857.80 is the proportion which accrued from January 1st, up to June 19, 1863.

Q. Have you filed a supporting exhibit already to this item 3?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How has it been marked?

A. It is Exhibit No. 3, 1863, Asset 3-C and 3-D. It is numbered page 16.

Q. Page 16 of this set of exhibits?

A. Yes, of this set of exhibits.

The Master: The thing that tended to mislead me was the heading on this exhibit. I have this suggestion to make. The way this reads is: "Recapitulation of Schedule 'D' Assets. Results of revision of Schedule 'D' assets by Hillman." Now I do not find anything that relates to June 20, 1863. Taking that statement the idea presented to my mind was that it would be necessary to revise Schedule D. Now this is the revision of Schedule D as of June 20, 1863, assets by Hillman, with that in there of course the whole thing is intelligible. With it out, unless I made this inquiry, I might have had to look the record over for several hours to get the information.

Mr. Holt: That is misleading.

The Master: Suppose we have the title read this way, "Results of revision of Schedule D, as of June 20, 1863, assets, by Hillman." That makes it intelligible.

Mr. Lilly: That is a good suggestion. I think.

Mr. Holt: There is not a thing in the world on that sheet to indicate 1863.

The Master: Not the slightest in the world, and I might have to spend a day to satisfy my own mind without this explanation. Now, all these things ought to have some finger mark sticking out somewhere so that I will know what it means the minute I look at it.

The Witness: Your Honor, just a moment. You must remember that in 1861 Schedule D has also been revised and adjusted. The 1861 Schedule D, as set up by me, is not the same as that set up in the supplemental answer.

The Master: That is all true, and that would simply add to my confusion unless I have something to go and come on.

Q. Is there any reason why that heading should not be entered?

A. No.

The Master: I get to work on this schedule and I do not find anything on it to indicate what it is. If I find two revisions one of them not indicated, and what it is and what it relates to, why it would leave me in almost endless confusion.

Mr. Holt: Your suggestion is to insert after the word revision, "As of June 20, 1863," of Schedule D.

The Master: Yes. I know then that he has taken Schedule D. and adapted it as to the date of June 20, 1863.

Mr. Holt: That is exactly right.

The Witness: The heading is, "Results of revision as of June 20, 1863 of Schedule D., assets by Hillman."

Q. The fourth item is Virginia Central Railroad Company, stocks nothing, loans $6,903.33; dividend bond $2,390.99 in the first column and $9,294.32 in the second column. Please explain that briefly.

A. There was no dividend on the stock which had been traced up to that date, which it was necessary to take into account in order to determine what was due prior to June 20, 1863; therefore opposite stock the zeros are entered.

By The Master:

Q. You mean how much was due or how much had been paid?

A. Both. There is nothing to show that there was anything even due.

Q. But isn't your schedule predicated upon actual payments?

A. Subsequent payments, yes, sir.

Q. Then why do you suggest the qualification of due? What I want to get clear in my mind is this, I do not understand your estimating here things that are due in this schedule; you are estimating the things that have been actually received, and if that was due do not confuse it by referring to things that are due or not due, because that simply introduces an element that will confuse me. It must have been due in order to have been paid, but if it is due and not paid I do not care anything about the question of it being due. This is simply a question as to whether it was paid or not; am I right about that?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Lilly: But the dividends and matters of that kind would have had to have accrued before June 20, 1863, and paid thereafter.

The Master: Yes, but if they had accrued but were still unpaid they ought not to have appeared in that schedule.

The Witness: Not unless they had been taken into consideration and paid afterwards.

Q. But it is necessary to make your explanation refer to dividends that are due and not paid. Just simply make an explanation so that I will not get confused.

A. I understand the criticism, your Honor.

Q. You get my point?

A. It is correct, yes, sir.

Q. What I am trying to do is so that when I look at it I won't have any trouble in studying it out, I will have it so that it will all be an open book to me and I won't have to waste any time in trying to find what a particular thing means.

Mr. Holt: I presume that all of that business on the stock of Virginia Central Railroad Company means that so far as West Virginia is concerned there is no claim whatever made on that stock.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Go on Mr. Hilllman, please.

A. On the loans there had accrued interest, January 1, 1863, up to June 19, 1863, both dates inclusive, of $6,903.33, the total amount for the six months ending July 1, 1863, amounting to $7,350, and which was paid on July 21, 1863 as shown upon the supporting exhibit which has been filed in this case, page 19. The next item $2,390.99, is the proportion of the interest on the dividend bonds of the Virginia Central Railroad Company which Virginia held at that time and is the proportion of that interest which accrued from October 15, 1862, up to June 19, 1863, inclusive. The payment of this dividend is shown upon the cash book No. 10, Board of Public Works, and on file in the Second Auditor's office, State of Virginia, and was for $3,519 cash.

Q. Have you heretofore filed an exhibit in support of these items?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How has it been marked?

A. Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, Asset No. 3, 1863, Asset C-4, D-4, page 19, of the exhibits in this set of schedules.

Q. The fifth item is Winchester & Potomac Railroad Company, nothing. I will ask this question, do the ciphers in item 5 after the Winchester & Potomac Railroad Company mean that there were no dividends upon stocks nor interest upon loans to be considered so far as this schedule is concerned?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The sixth item is Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac Railroad Company, dividend certificate, $3,631.69; decree of court, dividend bonds, $17,556.68; and in the last column $21,188.37. Please explain this item and its details.

A. The $3,631.69 was the proportion of interest on the dividend bonds of the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac which had accrued from January 1, 1863, to June 19, 1863, both dates inclusive. the interest was afterwards paid—

By The Master:

Q. Was it afterwards paid in a general item of yearly interest?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That will explain the whole thing.

A. June 30, 1863, the amount of $3,866.56, the $3,631.69 being the proportion which had accrued from January 1st, up to June 19, 1863, inclusive. The next item of $17,556.68 was the amount which was recovered by a suit and on a decision of the Circuit Court of Richmond on account of interest which had not been paid upon the dividend bonds of the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac Railroad. The judgment was rendered on December 30, 1872, as per Journal N, Folio 416, Board of Public Works, State of Virginia, the State receiving $17,806.68 less an attorney's fee of $250., or $17,556.68.

Q. What was the dividend accrued, up to what time?

A. In 1861 and 1862, interest on dividend bonds.

Q. And interest up to what date? This item was interest on dividend bonds which accrued on bonds in 1861 and 1862?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And up to what date was the interest included upon which the judgment was rendered?

A. For those two years, sir.

Q. You mean to say that the judgment was rendered for interest to June 20, 1863, or up to what date was interest paid in the decree of the Court?

A. December 30, 1872.

Q. How was the interest computed, up to that date?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was the total decree of the Court?

A. $17,806.68, less $250 attorney's fees.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Mr. Hillman, the Court asked you how many years of interest were embraced in the judgment and you answered that the interest had been computed up to in the 70's sometime, although the suit was only brought covering interest for the years 1861 and 1862. Which is it?

A. It was brought for the interest on the dividend bonds which had accrued in 1861 and 1862 and had not been paid.

By The Master:

Q. Did the amount of interest thus overdue for which this suit was brought in the aggregate amount to $17,556?

A. No, sir.

Q. What was the amount of it? In other words, of what is the judgment of $17,556 made up? Of course if that was the amount of the interest due to say June 20, 1863, that is one thing; if on the other hand a certain sum was due on June 20, 1863, or in 1861 or in 1862 and the Court figured interest up to 1872, that is quite a different thing.

A. This was the amount of the judgment including both interest which was due on the dividend bonds and the interest which had accrued on that interest up to the date that the judgment was rendered.

Q. Then you have brought the interest up to 1872 instead of stopping it at June 20, 1863?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Don't you want to revise that item, that is, if that is the fact?

A. It looks very much like an error of judgment, sir.

Q. An error of computation, it is not a question of judgment, it is simply a question of fact. You are predicating this schedule upon June 20, 1863, and all your computations run up to and stop at that date. Now you have an item here that seems to have been made up of interest that ran up to 1872, nine years longer.

A. If you will allow me, I will have that matter looked up and report within half an hour as to whether I am correct in stating that it is interest up to 1872.

Q. You can have that ready when we come in after the recess at noon or after the short recess which will be taken in a few minutes.

A. My assistant says I am mistaken in making that statement, and I will let him get his figures and bring them down.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Have you filed a supporting exhibit to this item heretofore?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How was it designated?

A. Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, 1863, Asset D-6 and C-19, numbered page 35 of the record.

Q. The seventh item is Virginia & Tennessee Railroad Company loan. Please explain that item.

A. It consists of the proportion of interest accruing upon Virginia & Tennessee loan from March 31, 1863, to June 19, 1863.

Q. Was it paid?

A. This amount was afterwards paid on August 15, 1863, anticipating the payment slightly, which was due on September 30, 1863, and was paid in cash to the full amount, $35,000.

Q. That is Virginia & Tennessee Railroad Company loan?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The item seems to be $15,469.61 on the main exhibit.

A. Yes, sir. I have stated that that was the proportion which had accrued of the $35,000.

Q. I understand it now. Have you filed an exhibit in support of this item?

A. I have, yes, sir.

Q. How has it been numbered?

A. It is Exhibit No. 3, 1863, Asset C-8 and D-7, page 23 in this set of schedules.

Q. Item No. 8 is South Side Railroad Company loan. Please explain this item.

By The Master:

Q. Now, is that the proportion of a previous schedule already filed, the proportion up to June 20, 1863?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why can't you in your answer simply say that it is the proper proportion between two dates of item so and so?

A. The schedules, your Honor, have been explained, in so far as they relate to the principal of these loans, of Class C. But they have not been explained at all in so far as they relate to Class D., which is the interest or dividend on those.

The Master: Then that may be stricken out, because there is no occasion for it. I did not know but the connection was such that we might have a concise answer and save any trouble in having a detailed explanation. From now on I am quite likely to leave out what I say in an off-hand manner of this kind, and if anyone has any objection, it may stay in. These suggestions do no go in. I can perhaps help the gentlemen to excise this record somewhat.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. The question is as to item No. 8, South Side Railroad Company loan. Please explain that item.

A. The item on the South Side loan represents the amount of unpaid interest on that loan which had accrued up to June 20, 1863, and is $208,375.69.

By The Master:

Q. Was it afterwards paid?

A. And it was afterwards paid in cash.

Q. When?

Mr. Holt: That is what I was about to ask, your Honor.

A. July 29, 1863, $55,000; August 1, 1863, $63,000; August 8, 1863, $28,000; August 17, 1863, $21,000; September 16, 1863, $28,000; and a payment made on July 6, 1863 of $28,000, again of which interest had accrued up to June 20, 1863, of $12,375.69.

Q. You mean you have apportioned it in reaching your result?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is the item of $28,000 is the item as to which you make the apportionment in figuring the interest up to June 20, 1863?

A. Yes, sir. This payment of $28,000 having at this time been anticipated from September back.

Q. It was paid in advance?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Have you heretofore filed an exhibit in support of this item?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How has it been marked?

A. Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, 1863, Assset D-8 and C-9, and being page 25 in this set of schedules.

Q. I notice in this item, Mr. Hillman, that a correction has been made, from five hundred and thirty-seven thousand and some dollars to the amount given by you, two hundred and eight thousand and some dollars.

255

The Master: Why do you encumber the record with that, Judge?

Mr. Holt: I want to find out.

Q. The question is, have you made the same correction in your underlying exhibit?

Mr. Holt: I do not want them to be in conflict.

The Master: This schedule when it is printed won't show any correction, it will be printed in accorance with your correction.

Mr. Holt: I want to be sure that the underlying one has been corrected.

The Master: If you will excuse me, why don't you ask him if the underlying exhibit is consistent with this.

Mr. Holt: He might not know what I meant by consistency if I did not call his attention to the particular item, is my fear.

The Witness: I might say that it was a clerical error in transcribing from the sub-exhibit to the general exhibit.

Q. Then they are consistent?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Ninth, Norfolk & Petersburg Railroad Company—

The Master: I would suggest that all be left out, because when you get your print there won't be any correction that will appear on it, and there won't be anything that this inquiry can be predicated upon, and it will result necessarily in confusion —that is, if you have no objection.

Mr. Holt: I think it is a very good suggestion. All I wanted to get was the fact.

The Master: You wanted to know whether your supporting schedule agreed with this.

Mr. Holt: Yes.

The Master: Then that may go out of the record, because there is no occasion for it. The schedules being consistent, we do not want anything in the record about the correction at all. The schedule won't show the correction. If it is out we won't have any confusion.

Mr. Holt: So that all goes out about correction.

The Master: Absolutely.

Q. Item No. 9 is the Norfolk & Petersburg Railroad Company, stock and loan. Please explain it.

A. It consists of two items, a dividend on the stock, which was for the six months January 1, 1863, to July 1, 1863, $2,475. The $2,324.52 being the proportion of that which accrued from January 1, 1863 to June 19, 1863.

By The Master:

Q. To and inclusive of June 19, 1863?

A. Yes, sir.

The Witness: The dividend was paid in cash, as shown on page 149, Journal B., Internal Improvement Fund, State of Virginia.

Q. On what date?

A. I do not know, sir. The date was left out; it was inadvertently omitted here.

Q. Make a note of that and supply it, because they probably will want it. Just say on the blank date and put it in.

A. Very well.

(The witness afterwards supplied the date as September 7, 1863.)

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Is there anything else you want to say? If not I will proceed to the next one.

The Master: You have not examined him as to the loan.

The Witness: The loan consists of four and a half years interest on the $300,000 loan from January 1, 1859, to July 1, 1863, at six per cent., and was paid January 11, 1864, as shown on folio 158, Journal B, Internal Improvement Fund, State of Virginia, $94,500. Apportioning that up to June 20, 1863, gives us $93,866.57.

By The Master:

Q. Well, now, that item was not a payment of loan but was a payment of interest on loan?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Holt: The underlying exhibit shows that.

The Master: Put in there "Interest on Loan" and then you will have it right under your eye. Put right ahead in the exhibit the words "Interest on."

The Witness: Would it not be well to put that in the heading of the schedule, as the same remark would apply to all schedules.

The Master: I would rather have it right there on the item, for my information. I know just what it means when it is right there.

Mr. Hogg: You would precede the word "Loan" with "Interest on."

The Master: Yes.

Mr. Lilly: Does your Honor want that before all of these?

The Master: No, I had not noticed the others.

Mr. Lilly: There are three or four other loans set down.

The Master: Then I would say "Interest on Loans" in each case. Precede the word "Loan" all the way through this schedule, if it is a fact—Iwould put in the word "Interest on" and then there cannot be any question.

Mr. Hogg: And as to stock, "Dividend on."

The Master: Yes. The significance of that is that you will get it all from this schedule; otherwise you might have to look through several schedules to find out.

Mr. Holt: He is making the changes on the schedules.

The Master: Do not put this colloquy in the record.

Mr. Holt: I think that makes it absolutely clear, your Honor.

The Master: Then we will have it all in.

Q. Have you heretofore filed a supporting exhibit on this item?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. How has it been marked?

A. Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, 1863, Asset C-10 and D-10 and D-9.

Q. I notice that the tenth item is James River & Kanawha Company with nothing but ciphers set opposite. That means, I suppose, that there was nothing upon the subject of dividends upon stock or interest upon loan to be considered so far as this schedule is concerned?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. No 11, loan to Washington College, $56.35. Explain.

A. It represents the amount of interest on a loan of $2,000 to Washington College from January 1, 1863, to June 20, 1863.

Q. Was it ever paid?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When?

A. It was paid on August 26, 1863, in full for the six months ending June 30, 1863, $60.

Q. Did you apportion it then so as to arrive at the amount of $56.35?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you filed an exhibit in support of this item?

A. I have.

Q. How has it been marked?

A. Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, 1863, Asset C-15 and D-11, and bears the number, page 31 of this set of schedules.

Q. No. 12, Richmond Academy bonds, $11.26. Explain.

A. This is the amount of interest from January 1, 1863 to June 19, 1863, on the Richmond Academy bonds of $400.

By The Master:

Q. Do you mean interest to June 19th, or to and inclusive?

A. To and inclusive.

Q. Sometimes you tell us interest to June 20, 1863, and then you tell us up to June 19, 1863. I presume you mean exactly the same thing. You will excuse me for the suggestion, but if you will use exactly the same language in each instance you would not give rise to any question as to what you might mean by it. If you will say to and inclusive, that means up to June 20, 1863, and if you say up to June 20, 1863, that is inclusive of the 19th. I notice sometimes you give it one way and sometimes the other, and I was wondering what the occasion for it was.

A. It was just an inadvertence in expressing myself, your Honor. I will say hereafter June 20th.

Q. Make the expression harmonious all the way through.

What you mean now is to and inclusive of June 19th?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Have you filed an exhibit in support of this item?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When was this interest paid?

A. It was afterwards paid, August 26, 1863.

Q. Have you filed an exhibit in support of this item?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How has it been marked?

A. Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, 1863, Asset C-16 and D-12, and it is numbered page No. 32 of this set of schedules.

Q. No 13, claim against the United States Government, $872,260.07; what is that?

A. It represents the interest which had accrued on the loan to the United States Government of July 1, 1814, from that date up to June 20, 1863.

Q. Have you filed an exhibit in support of this item?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. How has it been marked?

A. Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, 1863, Asset D-13, C-17, and is page 33 of this set of schedules.

Q. Has that interest ever been paid?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When?

A. It was paid in 1904 as of the date of, however, February 11, 1894.

By The Master:

Q. In full?

A. In full, yes, sir.

Q. Up to 1894?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is, interest did not run after 1894?

A. No, sir.

Q. But it was paid in full up to 1894?

A. I would say that this was paid in bonds of the State of Virginia.

Q. Bonds of the State of Virginia?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. By the United States?

A. Yes, sir, with the exception that the United States did send Virginia a check for $5.50 in order to balance it.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. I want to inquire again when this settlement was made—we have had some little discussion here—when this payment of interest was made. I do not know that it is material, but I just want the fact.

A. In 1903, but dated back to February 11, 1894, the actual settlement being in 1903, but the settlement made as of the date of February 11, 1894.

By The Master:

Q. All the computations were made up to February 11, 1894?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But the papers and adjustment of the claim were not actually delivered by either party until sometime in 1903?

A. They were not delivered until then and the adjustment was not made until that date?

Q. They made a computation as of that date?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In 1903?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Lilly: At the time the respective claims would come nearest balancing.

The Witness: They settling interest on each one, bringing the claim from 1814 up to a point where the claim of the United States Government against the State of Virginia would come nearest to being balanced, and in 1903 they found that that date of nearest balance was February 11, 1894, and which only required then the interchange of securities and $5.50 in cash.

The Master: It must be conceded that they came pretty near the result.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Item No. 14, Farmers' Bank of Virginia, $4,762.16; what does that represent?

A. It represents the proportion of the dividend on the Farmers' Bank of Virginia which had accrued from June 1, 1863, to June 19, 1863.

Q. You mean to June 19th or to June 20th?

A. To June 20, 1863, which dividend was declared December 1, 1863 and paid in two installments, December 19, 1863, $3,932.43, and December 19, 1863, of $829.73, one payment being made to the Commonwealth Fund and the other to the Literary Fund.

By The Master:

Q. You mean it was paid to the State in those items? Was it semi-annual dividends or annual?

A. Semi-annual dividends.

Q. What was the total semi-annual dividend?

A. $45,780 due to the State.

Q. That is six months?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is a little over $7,000 a month, and the proportion that was due on June 20, 1863, was then $4,726.16, that is it, is it?

A. Yes, sir. I quoted it in two payments because it happens to show in the cash book in two separate items on account of the stock being entered up at different times.

Q. Do you mean to say that there is an entry on the cash book showing the receipt by the State of Virginia of the sum of $829.73?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That precise sum?

A. And also $3,932.43.

Q. And those two specific sums are entered on the cash book?

A. No, sir.

Q. That is what your testimony would show, but I did not suppose that was what you meant. What you mean to say is that there were payments of cash and that the proportion that is to be allotted to this item is as follows, but your statement would show that the cash book would show these very items. It did not seem to me credible that it could, and you do not mean that?

A. No, sir, I do not.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Explain what you do mean.

A. I mean that the cash book shows that there was a payment of dividends on December 1, 1863, on this bank stock amounting to $45,780 and that the proportion which had accrued on that from June 1 toJu ne 20, 1863, was $4,762.16.

The Master: I understand what you mean, although that is not what you said.

Q. And that was apportioned between two funds, those payments, were they?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you filed an exhibit in support of this item heretofore?

A. No, sir.

Q. Have you prepared such an exhibit?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. What page is it?

A. Page No. 37.

Q. Will you now file as part of your deposition the supporting exhibit referred to and mark the same Defendant's Exhibit No. 4, 1863, Assets D-14 to 19.

The Master: That covers it although it does not show the computation which results in the aggregate of $4,216; but I know how he reaches it.

Mr. Holt: There are several other banks that are also in this exhibit.

A. I file it so marked.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhbit No. 4, 1863, Assets D-14 to 19, September 3, 1914, C. B.

Q. Does the supporting exhibit just now filed indicate upon its face the sources of information from which the exhibit was made up?

A. Yes, sir, it does.

Q. Does it truly represent the records from which it is taken?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The 15th item is Bank of Virginia, $36,189.14. What does that mean?

A. It means that the proportion of the dividend declared on that bank stock on July 1, 1863, amounted to this sum for the date January 1, 1863, to June 20, 1863.

Q. Should you not say for the period from January 1, 1863, to June 20, 1863?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Instead of the date?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that amount ever paid, and if so when?

A. Yes, sir, it was paid in three separate payments.

Q. Give them, please.

A. July 25, 1863, $29,382.50, of which the June 20th proportion was $27,596.76; on June 20, 1863, there was paid $7,423.50 which has—

Q. Well, was there an apportionment to be made of that?

A. I will have to look up that date. I have sent a man downstairs to look it up.

The Master: Well, while we are waiting I will ask a question.

By The Master:

Q. As I understand it you are now testifying about the dividend which was due and payable July 1, 1863.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And were there payments made on account of this dividend prior to July 1, 1863?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then they were in anticipation of its coming due?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did that happen? Did you see anything on the books which indicated why they should advance to the State, in advance of having declared a dividend?

A. That was sometimes done. But, your Honor, I find that opposite this entry which was paid in advance, they have got a date that this dividend was due in June instead of July, and that was the reason I have sent my man downstairs to verify that item and see how that came about.

Q. You say it not infrequently appears that some of these corporations anticipated the payment of the dividends by payments to the State?

A. Yes, sir.

The Master: That fact had not appeared before, and that is the reason why I was inquiring about that.

The Witness: I spoke of it a moment or two ago on one of these loans, they paid $28,000 that was not due at the time.

The Master: But in connection with dividends the statement had not been made before. I can understand how it might be done, but my attention had not been called to it before, and I wanted to be sure I was right about it.

Mr. Holt: The stockholders were all hard up, I suppose.

The Master: The State, among others.

Mr. Holt: Yes.

The Master: Well, I do not suppose that is really a novel condition as to stockholders.

Mr. Holt: No.

Q. Have you got the information now?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Proceed, Mr. Hillman, please.

A. Referring to the matter of the payment of those dividends, I would say that the payment of June 20, 1863, was made to the Literary Fund, $7,423.50, and it is described on the Literary Fund cash book as being on account of the dividend due June, 1863, on 2,121 shares of stock. Being June, 1863, according to the entry in the books, we have taken it that the entire amount accrued on this date.

By The Master:

Q. When were the other payments made aggregating the whole amount of the dividend due July 1, 1863?

A. On December 29, 1863, there was paid a dividend on the stock marked as due December 1, 1863, again to the Literary Fund, of $11,135.25, of which the proportion from June 1, 1863, to June 20, 1863, was $1,168.88. The sum of these three items I have mentioned—

Q. Does that sum appear as a dividend due in December, 1863?

A. Due in December, 1863.

Q. When was the balance on the dividend that was due on July 1, 1863, paid? This last relates to another dividend does it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The dividend you are trying to account for is the dividend due July 1, 1863.

A. Your Honor, I was misled by the fact that there are two dividend dates mentioned here, which is so unusual that I simply jumped to the conclusion that it was July 1st. There are two dividend dates here. The dividend due July 1, 1863, was paid July 25, 1863, and amounted to $29,382.50, of which the proportion accruing up to June 20, 1863, was $27,596.76. That ends the July dividend.

Q. Now what was the total dividend July 1, 1863, that you predicate your computation from January 1, 1863, to June 20, 1863, upon?

A. $29,382.50.

Q. You mean that that was the total dividend that was due on that stock on July 20, 1863, for the period beginning January 1, 1863, and ending July 1, 1863?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What significance has the entry that you have been testifying about, predicated upon an entry of July 20, 1863? If the dividend was all paid before that, that exhausts the subject, does it not?

A. No, sir, for the reason that there was a dividend due in June, 1863, which was not taken into account.

Q. Do you mean that there were two dividends on this stock, one due in June, 1863, and one due on July 1, 1863?

A. According to their books, yes, sir. That seems a little unreasonable.

Q. Is not that a little incongruous?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. The record so shows, does it not, Mr. Hillman?

A. Yes, sir.

The Master: There ought to be some way of finding out just what the dividend was on July 1, 1863.

Mr. Holt: I will make this suggestion, your Honor, if I may be allowed. He has now explained the payments of one dividend. Now let him explain the payments of the other dividends.

The Master: I want to know what I have got to take into account as the actual dividend at either July 1, 1863, or June 1, 1863, and the amount that this account is entitled to on a pro rata basis. I do not want to have to settle in my mind whether there is a confusion between July 1, 1863, and June 1, 1863, or whether there were two dividends. I want to know whether this accountant can tell me what the actual dividend was on July 1, 1863. And if he has got that amount that he is satisfied about, and if that eliminates June 1, 1863, I do not care, I want it eliminated. What I want to know is what the real dividend was on July 1, 1863, if Mr. Hillman can tell me from an examination of these books, and then I want the proportion that accrued up to June 20, 1863. Do I make that clear?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

The Master: What I want to know is whether you can take the books and tell me what that actual dividend was, no matter what these entries show; and whether the dividend has actually been paid. Then I want the proportion of that actual dividend up to June 20, 1863. While I am somewhat interested in this confusion of the books, I do not want to have to settle that confusion myself, I want Mr. Hillman's solution of it. Do I make that clear?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

The Master: Give me that information.

The Witness: Of course you do not mean this moment.

The Master: No, but make it as a part of your testimony. If you want to suspend here, you can make that answer when we come in after recess. If I have not made that clear I want to make it clear.

The Witness: I understand you perfectly.

The Master: I want the judgment of the witness as to what the fact actually is and what you are prepared to stand by. Then if they criticise it I will judge of the weight of the criticism. This colloquy you can leave in.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Have you filed heretofore an exhibit in support of this item?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How has it been marked?

A. Defendant's Exhibit No. 4, 1863, Assets D-14 to 19, and is numbered page 37.

Q. That then was the supporting exhibit filed this morning?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. No. 16, Bank of the Valley, $23,848.83.

A. This consists of the dividends declared by this bank on June 1, 1863, and July 1, 1863, June 1, 1863, being taken in total as due, and the July 1, 1863, being taken and apportioned upon the time pro rate from January 1, to June 20, 1863.

By The Master:

Q. What was the amount of those two dividends respectively?

A. The dividend due June 1, 1863, was $18,500; the dividend due July 1, 1863, was $5,695.

Q. Is that the total dividend or the amount that is to be apportioned to this item?

A. That is the total dividend paid on stock owned by Virginia. The amounts apportioned are $18,500, being the June item in full.

Q. 20-30ths of the $5,000, roughly speaking?

A. Yes, sir. Again, your Honor, I will look this matter up in connection with the other, as there seem to be two dividend dates stated on Virginia's books for this stock.

Q. See if you can give any explanation of it.

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Have you filed an exhibit heretofore in support of this item?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How has it been designated?

A. Defendant's Exhibit No. 4, 1863, Assets D-14 to 19, and numbered page 37.

Mr. Harrison: You did not state when those payments were made.

Mr. Holt: I will inquire about that.

Q. Were these dividends paid, Mr. Hillman?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When?

A. August 1, 1863.

Q. Both of them?

A. Yes, sir.

By The Master:

Q. Paid in one item, in one sum, that is, were the two added together and all paid in one sum on August 1, 1863?

A. No, sir. They were paid to the different Boards, one paid to the Commonwealth—

Mr. Holt: You do not mean Boards; you mean Funds.

A. Funds, one paid to the Commonwealth Fund and one paid to the Internal Improvement Fund, and the other paid to the Literary Fund.

Q. How does that appear on the books of the State, does an entry like that show in the first place that an aggregate amount of cash was received and that then subsequently it was distributed among these various State Funds?

A. No, sir.

Q. Or does it show, does the cash book show the receipt of the particular items that went to the particular funds?

A. The cash book shows the receipt of the particular items to the particular funds.

Mr. Lilly: Each fund had an interest in the stock.

The Master: Yes. sir. The stock had been distributed to these various funds.

Mr. Holt: Each fund received its proportion of the stock and received its dividends.

The Witness: All of this appears on the different cash books.

The Master: I understand it. For the time being it escaped my recollection that the various funds had moneys invested in this stock. Of course that furnishes an adequate reason for the payment of the dividends.

Mr. Anderson: I did not get the date on which this $23,840 had been paid.

The Witness: It is all shown on page 37.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. No. 17, Exchange Bank, $8,304.02. Give us briefly the history of this item.

A. Exchange Bank of Virginia shows a dividend accrued December 1, 1863, of $67,904 on the stock owned by the Commonwealth Fund, of which the proportion from June 1, 1863, to June 20, 1863, would be $7,050.14. It shows also a dividend due July 1, 1863, on stock held by the Internal Improvement Fund of $1,335, of which the proportion from January 1, 1863, to June 20, 1863, would be $1,253.88. Again there seems to be a discrepancy which will be looked up as to dates of dividends as requested by your Honor.

Q. Do these two amounts so apportioned aggregate the $8,304.02?

A. Yes, sir, they do.

Q. Were those dividends paid, and if so when?

A. The one from which was received $7,050.14, that is the dividend of December 1, 1863, was paid January 13, 1864.

By The Master:

Q. When did that dividend accrue?

A. December 1, 1863.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. When was the other one paid?

A. July 10, 1863.

Q. Have you filed an exhibit in support of this item?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How has it been marked?

A. Defendant's Exhibit No. 4, 1863, Assets D-14 to 19, and is numbered page No. 37 in this set of schedules.

Q. I notice that the eighteenth item on this main exhibit is Northwestern Bank 00. I suppose that means that there were no dividends upon the stock held by the Commonwealth of Virginia in that company with which this schedule has to do, is that so?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is the same true of the nineteenth item, Fairmount Bank, 00?

A. Yes, sir.

By The Master:

Q. Before you come to that, I would like to make an inquiry about the Exchange Bank. As I understand it, the stock upon which these dividends were predicated was held by two funds, one fund, that is the Commonwealth Fund, was it, held how many shares?

A. 8,488 shares.

Q. That is the Commonwealth Fund?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. There is another fund held how many shares?

A. 267 shares.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. What fund was that, Mr. Hillman?

A. Internal Improvement Fund.

Q. Was there any dividend declared on the Commonwealth stock on July 1, 1863, or was there a dividend only on the stock held by the Internal Improvement Fund declared July 1, 1863, so far as the books show? There seem to be two dividends.

A. On the Internal Improvement only, as far as the books show.

Q. Then there was a dividend declared upon the stock held by the Commonwealth Fund, December 1, 1863?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But none appears to have been declared upon the same stock held by the Internal Improvement Fund on December 1, 1863, is that it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I wish you would look that up and see if there is any explanation. It seems unexplainable.

A. I will look it up.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. See if you can discover anything on the books to explain that apparent incongruity.

A. I will find it.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. I now come to the twentieth and last item, No. 4, Blue Ridge Railroad Company, tolls for use, $5,833.81. Please explain that.

A. For the tolls for the use of the Blue Ridge Railroad Company, which were paid by the Virginia Central.

Q. Virginia Central what?

A. Virginia Central Railroad. There had accrued for the quarter ending July 1, 1863, $6,576.50. The proportion of that on the time pro rate from January 1, 1863, to June 20, 1863, was $5,853.81, which is the amount on Defendant's Exhibit No. 4, 1863.

Q. What do you mean by tolls paid by the Virginia Central Railway Company to the Commonwealth of Virginia on account of the Blue Ridge?

A. They used the Blue Ridge Railroad and tunnel and paid them tolls on passengers and freight.

Q. You mean that the Virginia Central used it and paid the Commonwealth of Virginia tolls therefor?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you filed heretofore a supporting exhibit on this item?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How has it been marked?

A. Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, 1863, Asset C-5 and D-20, page No. 20, of this set of schedules.

Mr. Harrison: He has not stated when they were paid.

The Witness: They were paid on March 2, 1864. I call attention to a note on this exhibit which has just been quoted, on the supporting exhibit, that subsequently there was received from the Virginia Central the following amount in tolls which may or may not be considered as part of the purchase price, March 21, 1864, cash book No. 10, Board of Public Works, $64,984.49. They were allowed to expend that amount of tolls on the road instead of paying it to Virginia.

By The Master:

Q. Was that taken into account in your computation?

A. No, sir, I have not taken it into account anywhere. I have simply made a note of it.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Returning now for a moment, Mr. Hillman, to the sixth item, there was an item of $17,556. 68, covered by a judgment, which I wish you would please explain.

The Master: That involves that question of interest.

Q. Are you ready now to explain it?

A. Yes, sir. This judgment was rendered for the amount of the interest which had fallen due upon the dividend bonds in 1861, and 1862, and which had not been paid.

By The Master:

Q. Aggregating how much?

A. Aggregating $17,806.68, from which was deducted, as we have stated, attorney's fees of $250, leaving the net sum $17,556.68.

The Master: That shows that interest was not computed on those sums up to the date of judgment.

Mr. Holt: He is reading from a copy of an order paying those attorney's fees.

The Master: The question in doubt before us was whether the judgment included interest up to the date the judgment was rendered, or whether it was predicated upon the principal sum due without interest from the dates when they were due. This shows that it is predicated upon the principal sums due without interest. That is the effect of it.

Mr. Holt: Yes, sir.

The Master: That makes that certain. That was an element of uncertainty before.

Mr. Holt: That, your Honor, brings us to something that we can go on with more rapidly after lunch.

The Master: Then you would like to suspend here?

Mr. Holt: Yes.

The Master: Then we will suspend here until half past two.

At this point a recess was taken until 2:30 P. M.

AFTER RECESS.

Continuation of the direct-examination of

CONWAY W. HILLMAN.

The Witness: I have found that the dates of those dividends are December and June.

By Mr. Lilly:

Q. The bank dividends?

A. The bank dividends, for all of the banks in controversy, regardless of the entries which have been made upon the books of the State of Virginia in regard to the date upon which these dividends accrued.

By The Master:

Q. So that the date of July 1st, is an error?

A. It is an error and will be corrected. Do you wish me to state now, why I came to that conclusion.

The Master: No I do not care for that unless Mr. Harrison would like to have it.

Mr. Harrison: He had better state it.

The Master: Very well then, give your reasons.

The Witness: The State of Virginia put a tax upon bank dividends declared by all banks within the State, and headed it "bonus on bank dividends" although it was a tax upon those dividends. And referring to the entries on their books wherein those bonuses were collected from the banks, it shows that in each case of these banks in which the State owned stock, that the dates were December and June, and not July and January. We will have the exhibit re-made on that basis, if your Honor so wishes, or an extra one put in.

The Master: So far as I am concerned that is adequate.

The Witness: Shall we have an extra sheet put in showing how the books follow?

The Master: Just as you like about that.

Mr. Lilly: It will not affect the amount?

The Witness: Yes, sir, it will affect the amount.

Q. Does it lead to a re-adjustment of the computation?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then why don't you make a re-adjustment of your computation and put upon it the proper schedules, and notify the other side, so that the schedules as printed will be upon the re-adjustment on the information you have obtained? I would not put an additional schedule in for the purpose of carrying out those details, but make the changes in the schedules to carry out the explanation you have now made, and your explanation of the situation covers the matter, as far as I am concerned. Unless counsel on either side desires a detailed statement that will be sufficient.

A. Very well.

Mr. Holt: That will be satisfactory to us.

The Master: How about the other side?

Mr. Harrison: I think that is sufficient.

The Master: When you make the change put it on the official schedule—put it on the schedules that the Virginia people have so that they will be kept in touch with the matter.

Mr. Holt: The witness says he will simply correct those schedules. There are only one or two items.

The Master: Very good; and make the same correction upon the schedules which have been handed to counsel for Virginia so that they will be in touch with the change.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. We come now, Mr. Hillman, to the exhibits or schedules for 1863 covering Class E, being the various bank stocks. Have you made a search of the books and records of the State of Virginia as well as in the Congressional Library at Washington for the purpose of ascertaining the statements of the Farmers' Bank of Virginia for the years 1862 and 1863?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. With what result?

A. That we were unable to find any statement of the banks for those dates.

Q. Then page No. 38 as I understand it, being the schedule for 1863, concerning the Farmers' Bank of Virginia, is nothing more than a copy of the corresponding exhibit with relation to that bank for the year 1861 with the note found thereon at the bottom; is that so?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Please read that note at this point.

A. Diligent search was made for statements of this bank, covering the years 1862 and 1863 in the War Department and Congressional Library in Washington, D. C., and in the records of the State of Virginia, without result. The fact that this bank declared dividends in 1863 even greater than in 1861 would tend to indicate that the bank stock was at least of equal value in 1863 as in 1861.

The Master: Right at this point, did the law at that time require the publication of the returns of banks in any newspaper? In a great many of our states the law requires a return of that sort to be published, which is practically the sort of return that you have included in more or less all of these schedules.

Mr. Holt: We have an act of the Legislature of Virginia here directly, your Honor, that may answer your question. I have not looked at it recently, but I think it provides how these banks should keep their books and what returns they should make. I do not know whether it covers the question of publication or not.

The Master: Of course in these days nearly every state, at least every state that I am familiar with, requires statements to be published.

Mr. Holt: Yes.

The Master: And at the proper period of the year you will find your newspapers full of those statements.

Mr. Holt: That is true.

The Master: My inquiry is whether that was the fact during this period, and if so whether any investigation of the files of the newspapers has been made for the purpose of getting the information. I do not know what the fact is. My impression is that in connection with the other hearing I found something of that sort, that is in connection with my own investigation. I am not quite certain, however. I do not know whether it was on this line, but I got some information.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Have you examined any newspapers, Mr. Hillman, for the purpose of ascertaining whether or not the banks published their statements under the laws of Virginia during the year 1863?

A. I have not, no, sir.

Mr. Holt: We will look into that, your Honor, and see. I do not know what the law of Virginia was myself.

The Master: I do not know either, except that I do know that that is a very general custom now.

Mr. Hogg: The two banks that were before us on the former hearing were the Northwestern Bank at Wheeling and the Fairmount Bank.

The Master: I do not think there was anything of that sort in connection with the former hearing.

Mr. Holt: I would like to ask the gentlemen on the opposite side of the table whether or not the laws of Virginia in 1863 required banks to publish their annual statements in the newspapers.

Mr. Anderson: I do not remember whether it did or not, but I have seen them published frequently.

Mr. Holt: We require those publications in our state now, but whether or not Virginia did in 1863 I do not know.

Mr. Anderson: I do not know whether it was done in 1863.

The Master: That is a matter that can be investigated, and if there is any information of value to be obtained from that source, of course we can have it without any trouble.

Q. You say that you examined the records of the War Department and Congressional Library at Washington upon this subject for those years. Why did you examine the records of the War Department and of the United States Government?

A. Because, as has been stated here, the records of the State of Virginia were attempted to be moved from Richmond over to Petersburg, I believe.

Q. Lynchburg.

A. Lynchburg—during the war—or at the close of the war, and they had only proceeded part of the way when their journey was interrupted, and the records were seized by the Federal troops, and were taken by them, at least in part, to Washington, and that some of those records are still on file in the War Department. And therefore we examined the records as far as we could get at them in the War Department, as well as going to the Congressional Library to see if any of the books had been preserved there.

Q. And examined the records of Virginia here at Richmond in addition thereto?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. With the result that you have stated?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. We will now ask you to file the exhibit referred to and mark it Defendant's Exhibit No. 5, 1863.

A. I file it herewith, so marked, being page No. 38.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 5, 1863, September 3, 1914, C. B.

Q. The exhibit you have just filed consists of how many sheets?

A. Do you mean for the whole class.

Q. Just covering the banks in Class E.

A. Six sheets.

Q. And these six sheets cover what banks? Give me the names of each of them.

A. Farmers' Bank of Virginia, Bank of Virginia, Bank of the Valley, Exchange Bank of Virginia, Northwestern Bank, and Fairmount Bank.

Q. These sheets of Exhibit No. 5, as I understand it, correspond exactly with the sheets in the schedules for 1861, except that there is a note on the bottom of each which you read a moment ago?

A. Yes, sir.

By The Master:

Q. That note explains how it is, although there was some lapse of time, that this is a duplicate of the other? That is to say, you have not been able to get any original information that enables you to make any change?

A. Yes.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Then the only difference in the sheets for 1861 and for 1863, if any there be, is in the caption? Is there a difference in the caption?

A. There is, yes, sir; the caption being in this instance, statement showing ownership of stocks in various banks by the Commonwealth of Virginia, June 20, 1863, and the value of the same as shown by the banks' statements of January 1, 1861.

The Master: And as to these items you rest your case upon the same evidence as was submitted as to January 1, 1861, as to the reasons you have given.

Mr. Holt: Yes, sir.

The Master: In other words you have exhausted all the sources of information that were open to you.

Mr. Holt: And the only point being that in 1863 they were declaring bigger dividends than in 1861. Of course that is embraced in the note and shown by the dividends that are set down in the sheet.

The Master: Yes. All those facts appear on the original exhibit.

Mr. Holt: Yes, sir.

The Master: Or original exhibits. Now, whether any information is obtainable from the newspapers during that period, that is a matter that remains to be investigated.

Mr. Lilly: We will pursue that.

Mr. Holt: We have been ransacking the newspapers on other matters, and we will try and see what they furnish on this matter.

Q. You may state whether or not as appears by these bank exhibits for 1863, the Commonwealth of Virginia owned the same number of shares of stock in these banks on June 20, 1863, that she owned therein on January 1, 1861.

A. Yes, sir, she owned the same amount.

Q. Class F, in the exhibits to the supplemental answer, showing the sale of various stocks and loans by the State of Virginia to the Atlantic, Mississippi & Ohio Railroad; you may state whether or not you have examined the books, records and public documents of the Commonwealth of Virginia with a view of ascertaining what stocks embraced in this class if any were sold by the Commonwealth of Virginia to the Atlantic, Mississippi & Ohio Railroad Company and the amount received thereon or to be received thereon and the security taken therefor if any.

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. Have you prepared an exhibit showing the result of your examination and the figures taken from these records of Virginia?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you file the same as a part of your evidence, marking it Defendant's Exhibit No. 6, 1863.

A. I file it so marked, being also numbered page 44.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 6, 1863, September 2, 1914, C. B.

Q. Does the exhibit just filed by you show the documentary or record sources upon which it was made up?

A. Yes, sir, it does.

Q. Is this exhibit accurate and does it truly represent the documents examined by you and noted on its face?

A. Yes, sir. I would like to add to that statement the foot note which will be found on this page 44 that the records of the Atlantic, Mississippi & Ohio Railroad, their first trial balance sheets, have also been examined in order to determine whether or not this $4,000,000 was outstanding at that time, and I have so found.

By The Master:

Q. At what time?

A. At the time that the books of the Atlantic, Mississippi & Ohio were opened, the first trial balance.

Q. What date was that?

A. On September 30, 1871.

Q. What was the outcome of this $4,000,000 mortgage, was it ever paid or whatever happened to it?

A. The railroad went into the hands of a receiver and was foreclosed and the State finally accepted $500,000 in lieu of its mortgage.

Q. Was that $500,000 in cash or bonds?

A. Cash.

Q. What date was that?

A. The date was————————.

Q. Do you know what the amount of the first or underlying mortgage was? You need not bother now if it is any trouble.

Mr. Holt: I thought perhaps we could develop that history through the exhibit your Honor.

The Master. Very likely.

Mr. Holt. The history of it is simply this, if I may be permitted to state it. In the first place they sold all these odds and ends to the A. M. & O. Railroad for the sum of four millions of dollars, and took a second mortgage on the property of the vendee of the stocks. And a little later the A. M. & O. got into trouble and a foreclosure suit took place under its first mortgage, and the proceeds of the sale never reached the second mortgage. But afterwards, when the road was reorganized, in order to get rid of any equitable claim that Virginia might have, they came in and offered her a half a million, and she accepted it. That is now the Norfolk & Western Railroad Company.

The Witness: Your Honor, you asked a question a moment ago—

The Master: I am inclined to think that those facts had better appear.

Mr. Holt: We have a contract that we will exhibit directly that will show that.

The Witness: You asked what were the first mortgage bonds which preceded or had precedence of this second mortgage. They amounted, on September 30, 1891, to $5,493,008.11. That is shown by the trial balance September 30, 1871 of the A. M. & O.

Mr. Holt: It was a reorganization, it changed its name, and I do not know how far it was identified with the old one.

The Master: Does the date of the foreclosure appear in the record? Or will that appear in your Exhibit?

Mr.Holt: I think, your Honor, that we will be able to show directly a contract between the Norfolk & Western, or its then President, Mr. Kimball, and the State of Virginia, with the recitals that give all the facts that you inquired of, at the time the half million was paid. We have that paper somewhere. I haven't seen it.

The Master: That will give the history of the whole transaction?

Mr. Holt: Yes, but that will be introduced independently of this exhibit of course.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. I wish you would explain briefly, Mr. Hillman, and in your own way, this Defendant's Exhibit No 6, 1863.

Mr. Holt: I think that will be the briefest way to do it, your Honor.

The Master: Is this the one relating to the $4,000,000 loan?

Mr. Holt: Yes, sir, page No. 44.

The Master: Yes, I have it.

A. On pages 178 and 179, Journal 9, Internal Improvement Fund of the State of Virginia, it is shown that the following stocks of the face value or cost value, as shown, were transferred to the Atlantic, Mississippi & Ohio Railroad Company for $4,000,000 second mortgage bonds; first, 8,175 shares of the Norfolk & Petersburg Railroad Company stock of the cost value and a par value of $817,500; second, 825 shares of the Norfolk & Petersburg guaranteed stock, face value and par value of $82,500; third, 3,000 shares of the Norfolk & Petersburg preferred stock of the face value and the par value of $300,000; fourth, 8,035 shares of the South Side Railroad Company, par value and face value of $803,500; fifth, 17,168 shares of the Virginia & Tennessee Railroad, par value and face value of $1,716,800.

Q. Is there any difference between par value and face value?

A. Yes, sir, by face value I attempted to convey the amount at which it was carried upon the books of the State of Virginia.

Q. Very well, go ahead.

A. Perhaps that is not a very felicitous term.

Q. Well, the two are the same in this instance anyhow?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Very well.

A. Sixth, 832 shares of the guaranteed stock of the Virginia & Tennessee Railroad, face value and par value $83,200. Seventh, 5,000 shares of the Virginia & Tennessee preferred stock, face value and par value $500,000. Eighth, 1,034 shares of the Virginia & Kentucky Railroad, face value and par value $103,400. Also bonds and notes as follows: First, note of the Norfolk & Petersburg Railroad Company for interest due and unpaid on loan of $300,000, $13,271.41. Second, note of the Norfolk & Petersburg Railroad for interest accrued and unpaid on July 1, 1870, on 825 shares of guaranteed stock, $27,225. Third, unpaid balance of the principal of the $300,000 loan, $163,000. Fourth, all the claims the State may have against the South Side Railroad on account of the principal and interest due upon the loan of $800,000; no monetary value attached.

By The Master:

Q. Was that the value of loan when due?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that if that had been carried out in the column it would be $800,000, giving the nominal value?

A. Yes, sir; but on the Journal entry there was no value carried out.

Q. And for that reason you don't put any value on it?

A. Yes, or do not carry it out.

Q. If you were to treat it as you treated the other items you would carry $800,000 out?

A. Yes, sir. Fifth, registered certificates of the Virginia & Tennessee Company, being for interest unpaid on 832 shares of the Virginia & Tennessee guaranteed stock up to July 1, 1870, $79,040. Sixth, all claims, rights and privileges which belong to the State of Virginia on account of a loan of $1,000,000.

Q. Was that full amount due at that time on the $1,000,000?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And if they were treated like the other items you would simply carry that out in the column to increase the aggregate by a million?

A. Yes, sir. For all of the above there is charged against the Atlantic, Mississippi & Ohio Railroad $4,000,000. That the above was a second mortgage for this amount and not a charge against the road is evidenced by the above pages in the preamble to the entry and by the first general balance sheet of the Atlantic, Mississippi & Ohio Railroad Company, September 30, 1871, on file in the Comptroller's office of the Norfolk &

Western Railroad Company at Roanoke, Virginia, and examined by Mr. Parsons of my force, wherein the item, second mortgage to the State of Virginia, $4,000,000, is shown in the road's liabilities.

Q. Is this item of $163,000, item No. 3, under the heading of bonds and notes, is that the item that we were discussing this forenoon as included in this aggregate of $4,000,000.? We had an item this forenoon which was said to make up part of this $4,000,000 transaction. Is that the item? My memory is that it is, but I wanted to be sure about that.

A. Yes, sir, except the discussion was yesterday instead of this morning.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. The books of these roads, namely, the Norfolk & Petersburg, South Side, Virginia & Tennessee, and Virginia & Kentucky, are now in the possession as I understand of the Norfolk & Western Railway Company at Roanoke, Virginia?

A. Yes, sir, they are.

Q. Did you examine, or cause them to be examined in making up this exhibit?

A. I did, yes, sir.

Q. The Norfolk & Western then I suppose was the successor to the Atlantic, Mississippi & Ohio Railroad, was it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And in that way got possession of the Atlantic, Mississippi & Ohio books?

A. Yes, sir. They have not a perfect file, but they have files which fortunately cover the matters which we have in hand.

Mr. Holt: I have found the matter of the $500 payment, and the contract mentioned a moment ago, actually embodied in an Act of the Legislature of Virginia. And I presume that as a supplement to this exhibit, Defendant's Exhibit No. 6, 1863, it should be offered in evidence at this point.

The Master: Yes, I think so, because it is cognate matter, and we should get the material all together.

Mr. Holt: We offer a copy—

The Master: Does it include other material?

Mr. Holt: No, sir, it just recites and embodies this contract and ratifies it.

The Master: Is it several pages?

Mr. Holt: I can read it.

The Master: No, I do not think there is any occasion for that. Do you need the whole of it?

Mr. Holt: Yes, sir, we need the whole of it. It is two pages and a half. We offer as a supplement to Defendant's Exhibit No. 6, 1863, a copy of an Act of the General Assembly of the State of Virginia, entitled an Act ratifying the sale by the board of Public Works of the claim of the State against the Atlantic, Mississippi & Ohio Railroad, approved February 9, 1882.

Mr. Harrison: What is the reference to that Act, Judge?

Mr. Holt: Acts of the General Assembly of Virginia, 1881-82.

The Master: What is the volume and page?

Mr. Holt: There is only one volume, on pages 76-8. They are bound in separate session acts.

The Master: You do not need to read it. The record shows that you have put it in.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked supplement to Defendant's Exhibit No. 6, 1863, September 3, 1914, C. B.

Mr. Holt: This morning you asked, as I recall, Mr. Master, for the original entry showing this four million dollar transaction.

The Master: Yes, there were two entries.

Mr. Holt: The A. M. & O. road.

The Master: Yes, that is right.

Mr. Holt: Mr. Hillman has produced them here in full from the records, and I do not know that anybody wants to hear them read. One of them is quite lengthy.

The Master: Just insert them in the transcript at the place in his testimony where he would have introduced them.

Mr. Lilly: It comes in very well now. We are just finishing the A. M. & O.

The Master: Well put them in right here.

Mr. Holt: After this Act, I will introduce them in some way.

The Master: That is right.

Mr. Holt: This morning the Master asked the witness to embody in the record the original journal entries covering the disposition of the securities for four millions of dollars to the A. M. & O. Railway Company, and in response to that request we now file two papers, being copies of the entries on said journals and mark the first Defendant's Exhibit No. 6, 1863, B., and the second Defendant's Exhibit No. 6, 1863, C.

The papers were admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 6, 1863, B, and Defendant's Exhibit No. 6, 1863, C, respectively, September 3, 1914, C. B.

Defendant's Exhibit No. 6, 1863, B, is as follows:

Journal "D," page 176, Internal Improvement Fund:

"241 Loan to Norfolk & Petersburg Railroad
182 To Norfolk & Petersburg Railroad Company Stock
For this amount improperly charged to latter. .$300,000."

Defendant's Exhibit No. 6, 1863, C, is as follows:

Journal "D," page 178, Internal Improvement Fund:

December 22, 1870.

"284 Atlantic Mississippi & Ohio Rail Road Co.:

See Proceedings B. P. Works, Journal M, Dec. 22, 1870.

Q. Mr. Hillman, have you prepared an exhibit showing the book value of the securities listed under Class F as of the date of June 20, 1863, or the nearest possible date thereto?

A. Yes, sir, I have, as far as the railroad stocks therein were considered.

Q. Will you file that exhibit and mark it Defendant's Exhibit No. 6-A, 1863?

A. I file it so marked.

Q. What page in this series of exhibits is it?

A. Page 45.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 6-A, 1863, September 3, 1914, C. B.

Q. Does that exhibit indicate upon its face the records from which it was made up?

A. Yes, sir it does.

Q. Does it truly represent those records?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Take that exhibit and explain it as far as you may deem it necessary.

The Master: I would suggest that if the explanation consist in a statement of what appears on the exhibit, why, he can simply do that by saying that so far as that part of it is concerned it appears on the exhibit, which will save duplicating of the record and save your time.

Mr. Holt: I want to avoid what occurred a moment ago if I can.

The Master: In this other one all he did was to read the schedule. That gets it in the record, and it will also appear on the schedule, and it took quite a long time. My idea is to both shorten the time here and shorten the record also, that is, if it is agreeable to you.

Mr. Holt: I prefer it that way if I can get it.

The Master: If you do not succeed in doing it, I will try hard.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Does this schedule, 6-A, relate to stocks or does it cover loans also?

A. It relates to stocks, the loans having been put forth under Class C.

Q. What do you mean by the nearest date to June 20, 1863?

A. The nearest date to which we could obtain the profits of these roads in order to determine what their book value was.

By The Master:

Q. Is this subject to the same embarrassment as the other schedule was, that is, the inability to get at additional data?

A. Yes, sir, there were no records of these roads on file.

Q. I know, but does the same condition exist, with respect to your inability to get additional original data, with reference to this schedule, as to the one you testified about before?

Mr. Holt: What the Master means is, did you have to go to Washington.

The Master: Does the same condition exist?

Mr. Holt: I do not think it does.

The Witness: We obtained these from the files of the Norfolk & Western Railroad at Roanoke, Virginia.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. I will then ask you the general question, Mr. Hillman; how did you arrive at the book value for June 20, 1863, of those stocks? Give us the process. You need not go into the details of repeating and reading the schedules.

A. By taking the trial balance of the road for the nearest date we could find and seeing whether there was a profit or a loss on that trial balance, and then determining the value of the stock according to the amount of such profit and of such loss.

Q. Such profit or loss occurring when?

A. At the date, the last date which we could obtain. Shall I quote them?

Q. What was that date?

A. For the Virginia & Tennessee Railroad, January 30, 1860; for the South Side Road, September 30, 1861; for the Virginia & Kentucky there is no trial balance; for the Norfolk & Petersburg, March 31, 1861.

The Witness: Your Honor, I am going to ask on this page 45 that has just been filed that a line be drawn through the notation in the second paragraph of "no claim, too indeterminate."

Q. Where does that occur on the schedule?

A. In the second paragraph, page 45.

Q. What do you mean by paragraphs on this schedule?

A. It is divided into three paragraphs by horizontal lines.

By The Master:

Q. What is it you want to do to that entry?

A. I want a line drawn through it, as the claim is made elsewhere on our schedules. The notation, "no claim, too indeterminate," was a private memorandum that I had on my own working sheets, and intended for private guidance and not intended to be written here, since the claim had been made elsewhere for the value of these loans.

The Master: Now, if there is no objection I will have that struck right out of the schedule and the explanation go out with it.

Mr. Harrison: No, I would rather have that in.

The Master: Very well.

Mr. Holt: Not let the "too indeterminate" stand, but let the explanation stand.

Mr. Harrison: I want his explanation to stand.

The Master: Then the original schedule stands as it appears with the explanation made by Mr. Hillman. That of course is subject to cross-examination.

Mr. Holt: Very well. As I understand it the words "too indeterminate" are to be stricken out at the request of the witness, but his explanation of the fact that he has stricken it out is to remain in the record; is that the situation?

The Master: The schedule is already in with his endorsement on it, and it will be so printed, and the record will show that the witness desires to amend that schedule, by striking that out, and that will appear in the record. They object to having the original schedule, otherwise I would strike it out altogether. They object to having that done, therefore the record will have to show first, the record as put in, and second his request to amend.

Mr. Lilly: Would not we have the right, your Honor, to correct our own schedule to confirm to our views?

The Master: I should have to say this about that, that after you have introduced a schedule it must stand for whatever it shows. You have a perfect right to change or amend your schedule, but the other side are entitled to any benefit they may get from the effort you make to amend.

Mr. Holt: I do not think it makes a particle of difference. It is just as broad as it is long. The witness has given his position here.

The Master: Either side may have the benefit of any inaccurate statement that the witness may make. If they insist upon it the record must show that.

The Witness: I simply made the mistake of allowing the Judge to file that before I drew my pencil through it.

Mr. Hogg: I do not know whether his explanation applies to both statements there. I understand from the witness that it does, but I do not know whether he has made himself plain on that.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. How is that, Mr. Hillman?

A. It applies to both, claim having been made for those loans elsewhere, and this being simply a private memorandum on working papers, and not intended to be copied.

The Master: Of course after a schedule has once been put in so that it becomes a matter of evidence, if any change is to be made there is no objection to making the change, but of course if the other side insist the record will have to show the circumstances under which the change was made.

Mr. Holt: We are satisfied.

Q. Have you prepared a schedule showing the value of the property of the James River & Kanawha Canal Company as absorbed and capitalized by the Richmond & Allegheny Railroad Company, 1881?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. What books and records if any did you examine in making up this schedule?

A. The first general balance sheet of the Richmond & Allegheny Railroad on file in the office of the Vice-President of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad Company in the City of Richmond.

Q. What year was that?

A. 1881.

Q. What else did you examine in the shape of records, if anything?

A. The trial balance sheet of the same road for 1882, the second trial balance sheet on file in the same office of the same railroad company.

Q. Of how many sheets does the exhibit so prepared by you consist?

A. Two.

Q. Will you file this exhibit as a part of your evidence, marking it Defendant's Exhibit No. 7, 1863?

A. I file it, so marked. It consists of pages 46 and 47.

The papers were admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 7, 1863, sheets 1 and 2, September 3, 1914, C. B.

Mr. Holt: My idea is this at this time but it may be that a suggestion can be made by the Master or someone else that would throw it into more convenient shape, to supplement at this point Defendant's Exhibit No. 7, 1863, relative to the value of the James River & Kanawha Canal Company by the introduction of such acts of the General Assembly of Virginia as according to our contention constitute a legislative declaration or admission concerning the value of that property and the stock therein. I thought those acts might come right in after this exhibit and be read along together.

The Master: Yes, I should think that would be the proper place for them.

Mr. Anderson: Would it not be more convenient to have all of the acts that you rely upon on this hearing published together in one volume instead of scattering them all through the record?

The Master: The Judge's idea is this, General, that here is a particular subject matter and it may be convenient for all concerned to have all of the material that relates to that particular subject matter marshalled at this point so that when we come to examine the record hereafter, either by way of argument or by way of reaching a conclusion, everything will be right under our hands, and readily attainable. That phase of it seems to me to be all right. In any event, I should be inclined to accede to the suggestion of Judge Holt as to the order in which he would like to have his case go in.

Mr. Holt: And then if it should be deemed by the Master or the counsel on both sides hereafter that it would be more convenient to bind the Acts in one volume, why, we could do that.

The Master: It may be that the Acts may be published in one volume anyway. The matter of duplicating a few pages where the printing can be of use in conserving your convenience and my convenience in facilitating a speedy and easy result, to me is not a matter to be considered very much.

Mr. Holt: I do not think so.

The Master: There is no harm, and if I can I want to get this case in the end so that everything that relates to these various propositions will be in the handiest and most concise form possible, and if that should result in a duplication of printing, that will not be a very large matter in my judgment, and no harm will be done. On the other hand, it may be that a great deal of good may be accomplished. Anything that we can do here that will save us work hereafter is something that in my judgment we ought to do. As to these Acts, Judge, I do not know the contents of them sufficiently to know whether or not certain sections, or certain parts could be printed without printing the whole. Of course you know what you want, and if you need the whole, all right; on the other hand, if a section of one of these Acts would be everything that you require, that is all that you need offer, and if the other side want to put the balance in, we would have it all in at this stage. You get my point.

Mr. Holt: I do.

The Master: Whether you can shorten it any or not, I do not know.

Mr. Holt: It has been some time, your Honor, since I have read them, I thought I would not take the time now to stop to read them, but they will be published section by section, and if there should be an inappropriate section in there we can leave it out.

The Master: That is simply in the interest of conciseness and weeding out of immaterial matter. You get my suggestion, General Anderson, in relation to that?

Mr. Anderson: Yes.

Mr. Holt: These have never been printed, gentlemen. I have the printed Acts in the old record before me, and I defy these gentlemen to find a single one of them in there. We have been confronted with that statement a great many times. I have had them examined by three different gentlemen this morning.

Mr. Harrison: But the Act you referred to before was already in the record.

Mr. Holt: The one Act that we put in yesterday was printed before, but none of these have been.

Mr. Harrison: We have not said that those were in the record. We cannot tell until you mention what they are.

The Master: I ought to make this suggestion, whether this bears on what we have before us right now, whether everything that is to be relied upon by you and passed upon by me is to be made strictly a part of this particular print and of this record; and the more I think it over the more I think it is absolutely necessary, for this reason. I do not remember how many copies were printed before, but the usual number were placed on file with the Supreme Court of the United States, and I suppose they were distributed, a copy to each Judge, and I assume that each Judge did as they usually do when they get through with a record, throw it out. The result of that probably is that there is not on file in Washington in the Supreme Court enough copies of the original report to go around among the Judges in case we undertook to make that a part of my report, and it would be perfectly absurd for me to undertake, therefore, to make as part of this record the former record, when there are not enough copies available for the court to use. I think that is probably the situation. The result of all that will be that this report of mine must show the whole record. Otherwise we could not be sure that the Court would have the benefit of everything.

Mr. Harrison: Certainly; it is a matter of convenience and we will incorporate them.

The Master: Anything that is to be relied upon, by way of argument or otherwise, is going to go into this report. Now, Judge, you may make your offer, please.

Mr. Holt: As a supplement to Defendant's Exhibit No. 7, 1863, and the corresponding exhibit for 1861, we offer a copy of an Act of the General Assembly of Virginia, entitled "An Act to incorporate the Virginia Canal Company, and to transfer the rights and franchises of the James River and Kanawha Company thereto," passed March 29, 1861, and found on page 70 of the Acts of Assembly of 1861; which copy we will mark Defendant's Exhibit No. 7, 1863, A.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 7, 1863, A, September 3, 1914, C. B.

The Master: And the purpose of this evidence is to show an admission on the part of the State of Virginia, that is, that is the ultimate purpose of it, and as tending to show the value of this property at that time.

Mr. Holt: As of both dates.

The Master: Yes, I understand, as of both dates. That simply gives notice to the other side and to me that that is the only purpose for which I am to spend any time in examining this Act at all.

Mr. Holt: We likewise offer, for the same purpose, a copy of an Act of the General Assembly entitled, "An Act to amend and re-enact the act entitled an act to incorporate the Virginia Canal Company, and to transfer the rights and franchises of the James River & Kanawha Company thereto, passed March 29,1861," passed February 3, 1866; and mark the same Defendant's Exhibit No. 7, 1863, B.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 7, 1863, B, September 3, 1914, C. B.

Mr. Harrison: What is the Act?

Mr. Holt: This Act is found on page 93 of Acts of Assembly 1865-6.

Mr. Harrison: What page?

Mr. Holt: Page 93. We likewise offer, and for the same purpose, a copy of a joint resolution of the two legislative houses of the State of Virginia, entitled, "Joint resolution in relation to an act entitled an act to amend and re-enact the act entitled an act to incorporate the Virginia Canal Company, etc., passed February 3, 1866," adopted February 9, 1866; and found upon page 458 of the Acts of General Assembly of Virginia, 1865-6. We ask that that be marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 7, 1863, C.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 7, 1863, C, September 3, 1914, C. B.

The Master: Suppose you say "We put them in," instead of saying that you offer them. The suggestion of offering might be open to the question that it was offered but not admitted.

Mr. Holt: In accordance with the suggestion of the Master we put these copies into the record and mark them as above indicated.

The Master: You get my point?

Mr. Holt: Yes, sir. It might be well in this connection also, your Honor, while on this subject of the James River & Kanawha Canal Company, to introduce the acts of the legislature by which as we claim, it was given away, as charged in our supplemental answer. We might just as well complete it I think while we are at it. It does not go to value so much as it does to the gift.

The Master: Your contention being that quo ad this controversy that was a misappropriation of it?

Mr. Holt: Yes, sir. In this connection we likewise offer and put into the record a copy of an Act of the General Assembly of Virginia entitled, "An Act to authorize the James River & Kanawha Company, to make sale and transfer of all its works, property, and franchises to the Richmond and Allegheny Railroad Company, and to define the powers and duties of the Board of Public Works in respect thereto," approved February 27, 1879. This Act is found on page 118 of Acts of Assembly of Virginia, 1878-79; and mark the same Defendant's Exhibit No. 7, 1863, D.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 7, 1863, D, September 3, 1914, C. B.

Mr. Holt: We also make a part of the record a copy of an Act of the General Assembly of Virginia entitled, "An Act to authorize the James River & Kanawha Company to make sale and transfer of all its works, property and franchises and to invest the purchaser or purchasers with certain corporate rights, powers and franchises," approved April 2, 1879. This Act is found on page 386, Acts of Assembly, Virginia, 1878-79, and mark the same Defendant's Exhibit No. 7, 1863, E.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 7, 1863, E, September 3, 1914, C. B.

Mr. Holt: We incorporate in the record a copy of an Act of the General Assembly of Virginia entitled "An Act authorizing the Board of Public Works to adjust the claims of the James River & Kanawha Company and appropriating the proceeds and providing for the safe keeping of certain deposits and authorizing the said James River & Kanawha Company to sell and convey its works and franchises to the Richmond & Allegheny Railroad Company," approved March 4, 1880. This Act is found on page 172, Acts of Assembly, Virginia, 1879-80, and mark the same Defendant's Exhibit No. 7, 1863, F.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 7, 1863, F, September 3, 1914, C. B.

Mr. Holt: I want also to offer, your Honor, the deed transferring this property, but I have not a copy of it before me, but I have the reference to it.

The Master: Have it appear in the record that you put it in, and then when you get the copy, hand it to the stenographer so that it will be printed at this place. Let the record show that you introduced it now. Do you need the deed in full or is all you need the descriptive parts for consideration?

Mr. Holt: I would have to read it again to determine that, your Honor, that is the trouble. We incorporate into the record a copy of the deed conveyance from the James River & Kanawha Company to the Richmond & Allegheny Railroad Company dated the blank day of blank, 18—, and mark the same Defendant's Exhibit No. 7, 1863, G.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 7, 1863, G, September 3, 1914, C. B.

Mr. Holt: I believe those are all of the Acts on the subject of value, legislative declarations of value and transfer, etc.

Q. Take up the second item, Manassas Gap Railroad Company, Class G, of exhibits to supplemental answer. Have you prepared an exhibit for the year 1863 upon that subject, Mr. Hillman?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. What is the page number in this series of exhibits?

A. Page No. 48.

Q. Does that exhibit show upon its face the sources from which it was made up?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is it a true exhibit?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you file the same, marking it Defendant's Exhibit No. 8, 1863?

A. I file it so marked.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 8, 1863, September 3, 1914, C. B.

Q. I see it corresponds to Exhibit 8 of January 1, 1861, or at least it is so marked. What is the difference between that exhibit if any and the one filed for 1861?

A. The insertion of the date of June 20, 1863, after the words "at that time" so as to identify the exhibit.

Q. That is the only difference then between the two schedules?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Could you tell from the records of Virginia examined by you, Mr. Hillman, whether or not any moneys have been expended upon the Manassas Gap Railroad Company between January 1, 1861, and June 20, 1863?

A. Yes, sir. There had not, according to the records of Virginia.

Q. Have you prepared a schedule, being a statement of stocks in and claims against Internal Improvement companies held by the Commonwealth on August 22, 1914?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. Does that exhibit show upon its face the sources from which it was made up?

A. Yes, sir, it does.

Q. What were those sources, in a general way? I do not mean for you to give me volume and page, but briefly. Were they records of Virginia?

A. Yes, sir. Generally from the Department of Public Works records.

Q. Of that State?

A. Of the State of Virginia.

Q. Does the exhibit correctly represent the public records examined?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you file the same as a part of your evidence, and mark it Defendant's Exhibit No. 9, 1863?

A. I file it, so marked.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 9, 1863, September 3, 1914, C. B.

Q. What is its page number following this list of schedules?

A. 49.

Q. I see marked in the upper right hand corner thereof that it corresponds with Exhibit No. 9, January 1, 1861. What is the difference between the two exhibits, if any?

A. None.

Q. What is the reason therefor?

A. The securities were all—

By The Master:

Q. Is not the reason this, that there is no change in the status, so far as the records of Virginia show, between January 1, 1861, and June 20, 1863,—is not that the reason.

A. Yes, sir.

The Master: Well, then, that covers it all.

Mr. Holt: That is disposing of it just right.

The Master: I suppose that is what you wanted.

Mr. Holt: Absolutely.

The Master: It puts it in a nutshell, and then we know right where we are.

Q. Have you prepared another exhibit showing the amount of taxes, fines, etc., paid by West Virginia counties to the State of Virginia after June 20, 1863?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. Will you file the same as a part of your evidence and mark it Defendant's Exhibit No. 10, 1863?

A. I file it, so marked.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 10, 1863, September 3, 1914, C. B.

Q. I notice in the upper right hand corner thereof a statement that it corresponds with Exhibit 10, January 1, 1861. What is the difference between it and the exhibit for 1861, if any?

A. There is no difference.

Q. What is the reason therefor?

A. There having been no change on the books of Virginia in the interval between January 1, 1861, and June 20, 1863, as regards the matters dealt with in this exhibit.

Mr. Holt: Now, gentlemen, we come to the final exhibit. Have you gentlemen been furnished with a white paper in place of the resume on the last blue-print?

The Master: That is subject to some pencil qualifications which have been made.

Mr. Holt: That is what I am trying to find out, whether their copies have been changed.

The Witness: That is the corrected bank statement.

Mr. Holt: Of course the white sheet now is the summary, in lieu of the blueprint, page No. 51, which goes out because of those corrections during the examination.

Q. Mr. Hillman, have you prepared a statement, being a summary of the claims of West Virginia for consideration in settlement of debt as set up by your exhibits for 1863?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. This, as I understand it, is a statement of the result as claimed by the defendant, based upon the exhibits of 1863?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What do you find to be the sum total of all the assets embraced in the various classes set forth in the exhibits for 1863?

A. $33,348,660.78.

Q. Have you indicated thereon what 23-½ per cent. thereof would be, or West Virginia's proportion of the value of those assets as claimed by her?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is the amount thereof?

A. $7,836,935.28.

Q. Does that summary likewise embrace the amount of taxes paid by West Virginia counties to Virginia after 1863?

A. No, sir, it does not.

Q. What is the item $224,799.63?

A. That is the item of the taxes paid by West Virginia counties to Virginia after June 20, 1863.

Q. That is on this summary statement, is it not?

A. Yes, sir, it is.

The Master: All it means by that is that it is not a part of the summary as to which he has testified.

Mr. Holt: But it is a part of this paper.

Q. When you add the $224,799.63 to the $7,836,935.28, what result do you have?

A. $8,061,734.91.

Q. Will you file this summary as a part of your evidence and mark it Defendant's Exhibit No. 11?

A. I file it, so marked.

The paper was admitted in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 11, 1863, September 3, 1914, C. B.

Q. That is page 51 of this series of schedules, is it?

A. Yes.

Mr. Holt: Now then, your Honor, this deed from the Kanawha Company to the Richmond & Allegheny Railway Company is in process of copying and will be ready to hand in in the morning.

The Master: Hand it in to the stenographer when it is copied.

Q. Mr. Hillman, during the course of your examination upon the schedules of the defendant or the defendant's exhibits for 1863 you frequently stated that certain securities of the State of Virginia were sold and that sometimes they were paid for in cash and sometimes in bonds, and other times partly in cash and partly in bonds. What bonds did you mean in that connection?

A. I meant the bonds of the State of Virginia.

Q. When bonds were taken in payment of stock sold by the Commonwealth of Virginia in those schedules as set forth by you at what value were those bonds received by the Commonwealth?

A. At par and interest.

Mr. Holt: Your Honor, of course with the understanding that if we have omitted any question that we should have asked Mr. Hillman in chief, we will have the opportunity to inquire of him later, we now tender Mr. Hillman to the State of Virginia for cross-examination.

The Master: Then we will stand adjourned until tomorrow morning at ten o'clock, accompanied by the suggestion that I would like to have all concerned here promptly on the hour. We lost about twenty minutes this morning, and that means quite a good deal for all concerned. And while we are keeping these hours, I would like to have the parties, so far as reasonable and feasible, be on hand promptly on the hour.

Adjourned to September 4, 1914, at 10 A. M.

BEFORE THE MASTER

Richmond, Virginia, September 4, 1914.

Present, the same counsel who appeared on yesterday.

The Master: Now, Mr. Harrison, I suppose in your examination you will follow the order that we have been proceeding under; that is, you will start with the first class and go right along, of course subject to such necessary modification as may be necessary, and then we will have the record so we can pick it right up in the regular order.

Mr. Harrison: I expect to follow out the order that they did.

The Master: Before we proceed, it was suggested yesterday morning that neither side had had the necessary opportunity to make a careful examination of the record as printed up to date for the purpose of ascertaining whether there were any additional corrections to be made. I would like to inquire this morning whether each side is ready to state that the record is satisfactory or that they have some changes they wish to make.

Mr. Anderson: I find the record is admirably printed, and as far as I am able to discover the errors are almost entirely typographical.

Mr. Hogg: I have not had an opportunity to examine into that, if your Honor please, but I will do so at the noon hour.

The Master: And report at the beginning of the afternoon session?

Mr. Hogg: Yes.

Mr. Anderson: I have not compared the figures in these different schedules; there are thousands of them and it would take several days to do it, possibly.

The Master: I assume that the figures are all right.

Mr. Anderson: I have no doubt they are correct. That is up to the proof-reader.

Mr. Holt: There is only one thing, so far as I am concerned. The other day I called attention to the fact that the headings of some of the columns were a little misleading in the exhibits for 1861, and I wanted Mr. Hillman upon the witness stand to change their nomenclature.

The Master: Would you like to have that done this morning before we proceed, or would you like to look that over and do it the first thing this afternoon? Of course you both understand that even if the record continues to get printed and develops some error, that will be corrected; but what I want to do is to keep pretty careful watch, and when we do close, then the record will read all right.

Mr. Holt: I see that those columns in this printed matter and also on the books, General Anderson have been changed. It corrects itself.

The Master: Then we will have a report from Professor Hogg at the opening of the afternoon session, dependent upon which I will give instructions with relation to the final printing of so much as is already in type, so that they can distribute the type.

Now you can proceed, Mr. Harrison. Mr. Hillman will take the stand.

Continuation of the examination of

CONWAY W. HILLMAN.

Cross-examination by Mr. Harrison:

Mr. Harrison: In cross-examining this witness we do not intend thereby to waive our objections to his testimony.

The Master: That is understood.

Mr. Harrison: Our position being that if it should become pertinent to ascertain the values of the investments that are listed in the defendant's supplemental answer, the date as of which those values must be determined is June 20, 1863, and that any testimony attempting to fix their values as of January 1, 1861, or to show how and on what terms Virginia disposed of them after June 20, 1863, is wholly irrelevant and immaterial. With this understanding I will now proceed with the cross-examination of the witness.

The Master: The understanding is that you reserve all your rights.

Mr. Holt: Will you allow us to make a statement in that connection too?

The Master: Certainly.

Mr. Holt: That it must be understood, and now our position is repeated upon that proposition, that by the offering of schedules on 1863 we do not mean to waive by implication or otherwise our contention that 1861 is the proper date.

The Master: That is perfectly understood.

Mr. Holt: Nor do we intend to waive our position with reference to 1861 by the introduction of schedules showing what was actually received upon them at a later date, but that is simply a part of the history of the situation.

The Master: Precisely. Neither side will assume at this stage of the investigation what date will be ultimately determined upon, and it is incumbent upon both sides in my judgment to try their case upon each hypothesis, so that whatever may turn out as to the final conclusion their case will be fully presented as to either hypothesis, and the fact that they are establishing one and at the same time another that may be inconsistent therewith will not have the slightest effect upon the ultimate result. I think I understand the thing perfectly.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. Are you the accountant who made up the statement upon which the supplemental answer of the defendant is based?

A. No, sir.

Q. Have you examined the exhibit filed by the defendant in the record in this case beginning at page 1053 and extending to page 1065?

The Master: What record is that, Mr. Harrison?

Mr. Harrison: The printed record.

The Master: You mean the original record?

Mr. Harrison: Yes, sir.

The Master: You do not refer to the record in this case, you refer to the original record?

Mr. Harrison: I said the record in this case, not this hearing.

The Master: I did not get just exactly what you meant.

Mr. Harrison: If the witness misunderstands me I will ask him again.

The Master: Won't somebody furnish me with a duplicate of that record. I do not happen to have one on my desk.

Mr. Gregory: We have sent for a copy, your Honor.

Mr. Harrison: Please repeat the question to the witness.

(Question repeated by the stenographer).

The Witness: Do not take this down.

Q. You had better answer the question.

A. I have not the book before me to say whether I looked at it or not.

The Master: While he is looking that up, I will simply make this inquiry. Of course there are a very large number of details involved in these schedules which have been submitted by the defendant. I assume that they have all been checked up by an accountant representing the plaintiff. Now will it be proper for me to assume, later on, when I have occasion to examine these for any purpose, that so far as they are not questioned by the cross-examination their accuracy as to amounts is admitted? I should like to have some arrangement or understanding about that so that I will know right where I am. Would it be proper for me to do that?

Mr. Harrison: I am inclined to think that that would be true.

The Master: Of course at some stage I would like to know just exactly what the issues turn on, and if it is left in that way, if it is not questioned, I will know that they are conceded and we won't have to spend any time on such items.

Mr. Holt: We have assumed that their accountant has gone all over them and checked them, and if he does not criticise them he has found them correct.

The Master: I would like to have the record show, so that there will be no confusion.

Mr. Harrison: I would not like to be concluded on that at the beginning of the cross-examination.

The Master: Oh, no. All I want is not to be in confusion as to what may or may not be in conflict.

The Witness: No, sir, I did not examine the pages mentioned.

Q. Had you seen it before this morning when it has just been exhibited to you?

A. Yes, sir, I have read over the testimony in this book.

By The Master:

Q. Well, now, you say this book. Make some reference to it. Do you refer to the original record?

A. The original record.

The Master: It would be more satisfactory to me if both counsel and the witness, when they refer to the original record, designate it as the original record, because otherwise it might result in confusion.

Mr. Harrison: It is really Volume 1 of the record.

The Master: No, it won't do to say that it is Volume 1 of the record, because as I have already explained the case cannot go before the Supreme Court in that way. It will go on the record that I put before it in this case. Then if we refer to whatever we have here as the record and to that as the original record, we will understand it. If you are referring to the original record simply say the original record.

Mr. Lilly: That is known as Volume 3 of the West Virginia compilation.

The Master: The original record is a very fair designation. If it is convenient I would like to have the counsel and the witness accomodate themselves to this idea.

Mr. Harrison: I am referring to it as the record.

Mr. Holt: But that is what the Master is not doing.

The Master: The point is this—

Mr. Holt: He is calling the present record the record, and that the original record.

Mr. Harrison: I intended to say the original record.

The Master: Now whenever a reference is made, and I make this suggestion now for the guidance of all concerned throughout the continuation of the examination—for instance the slip Mr. Hillman made in saying this book—now this book does not convey any information on the record. Of course I happened to sit here and see what he had in his hand, but the Court did not see it. Whenever reference is made to any document it should be identified.

The Witness: I understood that the question identified the document, and the reference was not to the book I had in my hand but to the book he mentioned.

The Master: That is simply a matter of detail, but what I want is, as we go along in the record, I want the questions just to indicate what they are directed to and the answers of course to follow the same line. It may be understood from now on that so far as any reference need to be made to the record taken prior to this time it may be referred to as the original record. When we refer to the record, we will refer to the record on this hearing. When we say the record I will understand it to be the record of this particular hearing on the amendment to this answer. The original record will mean everything that precedes that. I think that is clear now.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. Do I understand from your last answer that you have read the exhibit?

A. I have read the original record, but casually, and have not examined the pages of the original record which you mentioned critically or in detail.

Q. I did not ask you whether you had read the original record. I did ask you, however, if you meant to say by your preceding answer that you had read the exhibit referred to.

A. I say then that I have not read the exhibit referred to.

Q. Have you given it any examination at all?

A. Only the most casual.

Q. Will you please tell me whether you find on that exhibit the figures which you have given as constituting what you call cash on hand January 1, 1861?

The Master: This relates to Class A?

Mr. Harrison: Yes.

A. On page 1054 of the original record, I find the figures which are on my exhibit No. 1, with one exception, which is the commonwealth fund.

Q. I find the commonwealth fund is stated on the exhibit referred to in the original record under the caption balance on January 1, 1861, as $255,180.99. What do you show on your exhibit?

A. $252,842.67.

Q. There is then a difference in the figures shown by you and the figures shown by the exhibt of how much?

A. $2,338.32.

Q. The exhibit which we are now referring to shows the Internal Improvement Fund to be $5,958.28. Any difference between those figures and the ones shown by you on your exhibit?

A. No, sir, none.

Q. Any difference between the figures shown by the exhibit and your figures under the Literary Fund?

A. No, sir.

The Master : He says there is no difference between the figures shown by his exhibit and the Literary Fund?

Mr. Harrison: They are the same.

Q. Any difference between your figures and the figures shown by the exhibit for the Sinking Fund?

A. No difference between the figures shown on page 1054 of the original record and the figures shown upon my exhibit No. 1, in regard to the Sinking Fund.

Q. Now, the total of balances on January 1, 1861, as shown on the exhibit in the original record at page 1054—

The Master : You refer now to exhibit 1, but in addition to that just say page 1. Page 1 will mean the present record.

Mr. Holt: I do not believe that the exhibits for 1861 were paged along as they are for 1863.

The Master: Yes, they are in the printed record. If he says page 1, I will know he means the printed record, and if I have occasion to trace it down I will be able to put my finger right on it.

The Master: I am having the tops of these pages changed, partly for the reason that I had occasion yesterday to try and find a certain exhibit, and I ran this record through at least four times before I could put my finger on it. I am going to have at the top of these columns something which will show me where I can find out in a minute without spending any time. Where we refer to an exhibit that is printed in this record you can refer to it by the page, and then I can simply trace it back right away. That is one great advantage that we are going to have with this concurrent print.

Q. Now the total of balances on January 1, 1861, shown on the exhibit in the original record at page 1054 is $1,104,374.46. This total shown on your exhibit is what?

A. Shown on my exhibit No. 1, page No. 1, of the Defendant's Exhibits in the present record, is $1,102,036.16.

Q. So that you and the exhibit are in agreement as to the amount of cash shown on hand January 1, 1861, with the exception of the difference you stated a while ago in the Commonwealth Fund, amounting to $2,338.32; is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you please state the amount of cash on hand, as it is called, according to your statement, your exhibit, June 20, 1863?

Mr. Holt: You are going now to the exhibit which is the corresponding exhibit for 1863, Mr. Harrison?

Mr. Harrison: I will withdraw that question.

Q. I find the supplemental answer states the value of the stock of the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac Railway Company, January 1, 1861, at $275,200. That is the par value of the stock, is it not?

A. Yes, sir, it is.

Q. You have testified, as shown on your exhibit No. 2—

The Master: That is page 54 that you just referred to, of the supplemental answer.

Mr. Holt: Mr. Harrison, if I do not interrupt you, may I request the stenographer to read me your question and answer.

Mr. Harrison: Yes.

(Question and answer repeated by stenographer).

The Master: If you can, without too much inconvenience, just locate the page.

Q. In other words, the state owned on that date 2,752 shares of stock of the par value of $100 per share, aggregating $275,200; that is correct, is it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I find that you have testified as shown by your exhibit that the book value of that stock on January 1, 1861, was $150 a share, making the total value of the stock $412,800. Please tell me what you mean by book value.

The Master: That exhibit that you refer to now is page 2?

Mr. Harrison: Yes, sir.

A. The book value means the par of the stock plus the amount of profit which had accrued on the stock and which could be or would be divided up amongst the stockholders if the corporation were closed up.

Q. Does it mean the same thing as actual value?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then if you were employed to advise a client whether or not he should buy stock, you would advise him to buy it according to the book value, that truly representing its actual value, and would make no further inquiries on the subject as to its value; is that correct?

A. No. If I were acting in an advisory capacity concerning the purchase of a stock I would take into consideration more than the book value of the stock. I would take into consideration its earning capacity and also the method which had been followed in determining the book value.

Q. Do you mean to say that those additional considerations would be taken account of in order to determine its actual value?

A. In order for me to give the advice to the client whether or not to purchase the stock.

Q. My question is would those additional considerations be taken account of in order to determine the actual value of the stock.

A. No, sir; the actual value of the stock would be determined by its books.

Q. Without reference to whether the securities in which the surplus was invested were good or bad?

A. Oh, no, sir; we would have to enter into an investigation to determine whether or not the surplus or the price of securities had been marked up unduly beyond their value or their cost; we would have to enter into a computation as to whether their supplies and the material on hand had really been paid for and were worth the amount at which they were carried on the books; we would have to go through their assets and also their liabilities and determine all of those facts.

Q. Do I understand you now to testify as an expert that you would accept the value of stock shown on the books as constituting the true actual value of that stock without any further investigation?

A. No, sir, I would not.

Q. Then there must be a difference between book value and actual value, is there not?

A. Yes, sir, there is.

Q. Then you were wrong when you said that there was no difference, were you not?

A. Yes, sir, taking that view of it, that was not the proper statement.

Q. Nevertheless you have charged to the State of Virginia this book value as its true value, have you not?

A. Yes, sir, I have given the book value of the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac stock as $150.

Q. My question was if you had not charged this so-called book value to the state of Virginia as the true actual value of the stock January 1, 1861.

A. My answer to that is that I have made no charges to the State of Virginia; that I have entered the actual value upon my Exhibit No. 2, page 2.

Q. Do you mean to say that you have not testified, as shown by your exhibit, that Virginia should be held accountable for that stock on the 1st of January, 1861, at a value of $150 a share?

A. No, sir, I have made no such testimony.

Q. You have not?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you now mean to say that she should not be charged with it on that date as of that value?

A. I mean to say that I have no determination, nor is it my province to state whether or not she should be charged. It is my province to state the facts, which I have done.

Q. Then have you testified as a fact that $150 per share, as of January 1, 1861, was the true actual value of the stock?

A. I have testified that it is the book value of the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac stock. I have testified to nothing else.

Q. But not its true actual value?

A. I have said nothing on that point.

The Master: I do not understand that the schedules of West Virginia are predicated upon anything except book value. I understand they contend—that they do not insist that they are legally synonmous.

Mr. Harrison: This witness has, however, extended in his summary the book value of these stocks as constituting their actual value.

The Master: I do not so understand it. It does not have that effect with me. Of course the whole purpose of this examination is to put upon the record information that will be information to me. I can simply say how I understand it. Of course it is all open on cross-examination. The way I understand these schedules is this; I do not understand, in the first place, that the witness has undertaken to testify to actual value at all, but I do understand that these schedules are all predicated upon book value. I do not understand that West Virginia contends that they are synonomous with actual value, but I do understand that they contend that that is evidence tending to show what the actual value is on that date, subject of ccurse to criticism. Now, I do not understand that any of the schedules, at least they do not produce that effect on my mind, that any of the schedules introduced on the part of West Virginia are intended to be per se probative of actual value. They do show book value, and that is all they do show. Do I understand it correctly?

Mr. Holt: You do.

The Master: That is the way it lays in my mind.

Mr. Holt: That is unquestionably so, and of course when the proper time comes we will be armed with the authority to show what that means under the circumstances of this case.

The Master: Of course I will hear you on that later on.

Mr. Holt: Certainly.

The Master: But I do not understand that either the witness or the schedules undertake to establish that this is the actual value. You may later on have authority, as you say, that that results in the conclusion that that is book value.

Mr. Holt: Under the circumstances of this particular case.

The Master: Entirely so, but it is proper for Virginia to criticise the book value as they are now doing. I simply want Mr. Harrison to get what my mind is as to the probative value of the schedules as they now stand. I shall not treat book value necessarily as actual value.

Q. Will you be good enough to state what you show as the surplus of the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac Railroad on January 1, 1861.

A. I show no surplus January 1, 1861. I mean by that I do not show a surplus; I do not mean that there is not any, but I mean that I do not show any figures on that date.

Q. As of what date do you show a surplus in 1861?

A. March 31, 1861.

Q. Will you state now what the surplus is as shown by you as of that date?

A. $562,819.05.

Q. Did you or not base your $150 a share on that surplus as of March 31, 1861?

A. On that surplus in connection with the surplus of March 31, 1860.

Q. Was that done for the purpose of finding the surplus January 1, 1861?

A. It was done for the purpose of determining the book value of the stock on January 1, 1861.

The Master: That is not a direct answer to the question. I do not think it is intentional on your part, but I am going to make some of these suggestions as we go along. In the first place, this case is not being tried before a jury. I am hearing it, and the witness must, so far as he can, in answering questions answer directly. I am simply giving a general suggestion that will be of use to the witness. If the witness simply answers the question directly and stops we can get along a great deal better than if he carries his mind forward to a conclusion that he thinks may be in the mind of the examiner. The examiner knows what he is asking the witness for, and all the witness has to do is simply give a direct and short concise answer and stop right there. That is not a direct answer to that question. His question was, was that for the purpose of ascertaining the surplus on January 1, 1861. You went further than that. I am simply commenting on this so that you will appreciate the situation. The record will be cleaner. And you do not get anywhere by an indirect answer, because I am hearing the whole thing and I know what an indirect answer is. I know that you do not intend to do it, but the answer to that question was undoubtedly that it was for the purpose of ascertaining the surplus on January 1, 1861. That is so obvious that it is hardly worth discussing. You anticipated and went further than that, because you thought that he was aiming for another point, which undoubtedly he was, but that was not the kind of answer which you ought to have made. You answer directly every question that is put to you upon either side and when you get through stop, and then if they want anything more they will ask it. Do you get my point?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

The Master: This is not intended as a lecture to you, but simply a suggestion to get the record as short as possible and it will shorten the examination tremendously when those rules are followed by both counsel and witness. Excuse me, Mr. Harrison, for interrupting. It was a good place to interrupt here because no possible harm was done by either the question or the answer, and it may save difficulty and friction perhaps, later on.

The Witness: I knew what the next question was going to be.

The Master: You won't do it every time but five times out of ten when you anticipate that way you will get into trouble.

The Witness: All right, sir.

The Master: That is the trouble that most witnesses have; they are too anxious to facilitate progress. That is why fools and children make the best witnesses. Then cannot anticipate and all they can do is just tell what they are asked.

(Question and answer repeated by the stenographer).

Q. I ask you again to answer my last question.

A. Yes, sir, it was.

The Master: I want to make this suggestion. I do not know what the fact may be, but I imagine that Mr. Harrison may desire to go into a great many of the details which result in some of these conclusions, and I would suggest that you have your assistant get your working material where you can put your hand on it readily so that we do not have to wait in the course of the examination.

The Witness: I think we have everything that will be called for.

The Master: That is all right then. If you have everything handy by you it will save time.

The Witness: As far as we can determine we have all the papers.

Q. Now, will you please state on what the 1861 surplus of $562,819 is predicated.

A. Upon the trial balance of the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac Road dated March 31, 1861. This is shown on pages 8 and 9 of the present record, which is Exhibit No. 2.

Q. Does the trial balance to which you have just referred show how that book surplus is invested, how it is represented, if so please give us that information?

A. No, sir; it does not show the direct investment which represents the surplus.

The Master: Unless that is pursued further, for my information I want to know just exactly what the witness means by that.

By The Master:

Q. Do you mean that the trial balance does not show—

Mr. Harrison: I am going to pursue it, if your Honor please.

The Master: Then I will strike that out.

Mr. Harrison: If I do not pursue it so as to develop the matter that you have in mind I would be only too glad to have you bring it out.

The Master: Strike that out then.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. Were you not instructed, or rather asked by the Master, on your examination in chief, to furnish that information? For your information I will turn to page 43 of this record wherein on that subject the Master had this to say: "If Mr. Hillman has it right handy, how would it do to insert right here in the record the list of the assets upon which this book value is predicated? If he has not it, he need not bother to do it."

The Master: You are reading from the stenographer's transcript?

Mr. Harrison: Yes, sir.

The Master: Hereafter, after today, I wish you would get your printed record. I will follow you on this transcript.

Mr. Harrison: It is the printed record at page 28.

Q. (Continuing) "If it is too long, why then he need not bother, but this would be the natural place to look for it in the record." To which you replied: "No, your Honor, I have not taken them off in detail for those years. It can be done, and I will agree if your Honor desires to furnish a copy as sheet No. 2 on this exhibit," You are not prepared with that information this morning, then, are you?

A. No, sir, I cannot give the exact way in which this surplus was invested.

Q. The trial balance to which you have referred, and upon which you rely to show the book value of this stock in January, 1861, where did you find it?

A. In the Treasurer's office of the Richmond, Fdericksburg & Potomac Railroad Company, in the First National Bank Building in the City of Richmond, in the form of a printed report, which printed reports were bound in volumes.

Q. Then you did not find that information in any of the records of the State of Virginia?

A. No, sir.

Q. Well now, did you examine those books in the office of the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac Railway at Richmond yourself?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you make this copy yourself?

A. No, sir, I did not make that copy myself.

Q. How then can you say that it is a copy, of your own knowledge?

A. For the reason that I sent one of my men over to do it; it was done under my direction.

Q. Then when you say that it is a copy, it is not based upon your personal knowledge but upon information derived from others?

A. From information derived from one of my own men, another individual.

By The Master:

Q. What is his name? Give his name.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. What is the name of the man?

A. My recollection is that I sent Mr. Parsons of my force over there to copy that.

Q. Now, looking at that balance sheet which you have been testifying about—

Mr. Holt: I thought it was understood, Mr. Harrison, that

Mr. Potter would check that up, as it was copied here. We can bring a certified copy of it, if they are going to make that character of point.

The Master: Of course I cannot anticipate.

Mr. Holt: We discussed all that in the beginning.

The Master: If that question is raised, Judge, you will have opportunity to do it.

Mr. Holt: And we furnished a copy of it to them two weeks in advance.

The Master: If any question is raised as to the foundation of any of the testimony which makes it necessary to supplement the record, it is going to be open to West Virginia, as it will be to the other side under similar circumstances, to put in additional testimony.

Mr. Holt: I understood that they were not going to require anything of that kind.

The Master: I cannot anticipate just exactly what purpose Brother Harrison has in his mind, but there may be another purpose than the one that you and I have in our minds, for the examination, which purpose I won't discuss, because if I did it might render it nugatory.

Mr. Harrison: I want to test, as I go along, the accuracy of the witness in testifying.

The Master: I had a suspicion that that might be in your mind.

Mr. Harrison: I want to show whether he is testifying as to his own knowledge or from information that he has been furnished with by somebdy else.

The Master: That is a proper inquiry.

The Witness: Will you allow me to supplement my answer?

The Master: Yes, unless there is objection.

The Witness: That I did take off personally from the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac books the surplus of $562,819.05, and that my assistant was sent over to make the copy of the trial balance which resulted in that profit and loss account, which I understand was the document that the court wished laid before him.

Q. You have several times referred to having examined the books of this railroad in its office at Richmond. What you actually examined was a printed copy of an original report, was it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You never saw the original papers, did you, the books of original entry?

A. No, sir, I did not.

Q. Now, will you please refer to that trial balance sheet of March 31, 1861, filed by you as Exhibit No. 2, and tell me if you can how much, if any, of that apparent or book surplus is invested in the road itself as rolling stock, station buildings, etc? Is any of it so invested?

A. I cannot tell.

Q. Now, let me see if I cannot assist you. What are the current assets shown on that sheet, liquid assets, accounts and bills receivable?

The Master: You are referring now to Defendant's Exhibit No. 2, found on pages 8 and 9 of the printed record?

Mr. Harrison: Yes.

A. $230,453.97.

Q. Now, what are the current liabilities, as shown by that trial balance?

A. $77,642.57.

Q. Now, if you deduct the current liabilities from the current assets it will give you what figure as representing the net current assets?

A. $152,811.40.

Q. Very well. Now, if there is net $152,810 of current assets, deduct that from the book surplus.

The Master: That is the item of $562,819.65?

Mr. Harrison: Yes, sir.

Q. And what does it leave?

A. $410,007.65.

Q. Then we find that of that $562,819 of so-called surplus $152,811 is represented by current assets and four hundred and ten thousand and odd dollars is represented by construction account, is it not?

A. Yes, sir.

By The Master:

Q. Do you remember right now when this road was constructed, when its construction was begun? That may appear somewhere.

Mr. Anderson: It was chartered in 1834, built about 1837.

A. Your Honor, the first printed record of a report, which happened to be an incomplete one, but would show that the road was in some kind of operation, was dated June 20, 1835.

Q. So that the item of $2,211,189.90 represents total construction cost from sometime in 1834 up to 1861, is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How much during that time had been charged off to maintenance or for repairs or anything of that kind you are not able to state?

Mr. Harrison: I was just coming to that in my next question.

Q. Are you able to state during that time how much had been charged off to maintenance or repairs or depreciation, either one of the items?

A. No, sir; that is all included in a total of the operating expenses which I have not in detail. I can give you the total operating expenses for that period.

Q. Well, do the items of operating expenses contain any charge offs for depreciation?

A. At that date, no, sir, they did not. It was all in renewals or repairs; they charged no depreciation at that time.

Q. Were the charges for renewals included in operating expenses, or were the charges for renewals in this aggregate of $2,211,189.90?

A. I should say that they were included in the operating expenses.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. Why should you say so, have you any evidence on which to base that?

By The Master:

Q. Are there any entries that you have been able to examine that enable you to reach that conclusion?

A. I have made no examination on that point, but I know that that was the custom of railroads up until the 70's.

Q. Then your statement that this road charged renewals to operating expenses and did not charge it into construction costs is not predicated upon your knowledge of the action of this road, but your general information of other roads during that period, is that it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What we want is what the books show, and if these outside facts are material and relevant they will be given also; but so far as you are concerned as a witness we are entitled to ascertain just exactly what the accounts show. Isn't that so, Mr. Harrison?

Mr. Harrison: Yes, sir.

The Master: Then let us have this understanding, as far as the accounts themselves show, as the result of the examination of Mr. Hillman, they disclose nothing with reference to the question of either depreciation or renewals—or I will put it this way.

Q. The books show nothing with reference to any item of depreciation so far as you have been able to ascertain?

A. I have made no effort to ascertain that.

Q. That does not answer the question. So far as you have seen the books you have seen nothing on the books that indicates what was done with reference to a charge or otherwise for depreciation, is that right?

A. I cannot say that, your Honor, for the reason that I made no examination.

Q. You are not able to give us any information as to whether or not the books of this company make any account or made any account of the item of depreciation?

A. No, sir, I am not.

Q. Now then, so far as your examination shows are you able to give us any information as to what was done with reference to renewals, whether renewals were as a matter of fact, not based now upon your general impression as to what roads usually did during that period, but the question is were you able to ascertain from the books of this company whether or not they charged renewals to operating expenses or to construction cost?

A. No, sir; I made no such determination.

Q. And you are not able to give us any information on that point?

A. Not from the examination I have made so far.

Q. Well, precisely.

A. I mean by that that if that is requested I can do so.

Q. But up to date you are testifying as to knowledge you now have?

A. Yes, sir; I cannot do so.

Q. We won't speculate on what you may hereafter obtain, because if that is essential we can look that up later and get the exact facts rather than speculate as to what the fact may be.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I notice in what Mr. Harrison terms as liquid assets an item there bills receivable, $135,849.31. Did you make any examination of the details entering into that aggregate to ascertain the character of the bills receivable, whether of long or short standing and as bearing upon the probability of value to the road or otherwise?

A. No, sir, I did not.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. Did you make any investigation to ascertain the value of the stock, the stock of the Potomac Steamboat Company in which $38,900 is invested?

A. No, sir, I made no investigation as to the value of this security.

Q. Then you know nothing at all about the value of the assets as shown on that trial balance sheet of 1861?

The Master: Perhaps you had better say actual value so as to keep up the distinction between book value and actual value.

Q. I will say market value.

The Master: You had better keep the distinction right up.

Q. Answer the question.

A. No, sir.

Q. Does your trial balance sheet show the cost of the road on the 31st of March, 1859?

A. Yes, sir, on page No. 4, of the Defendant's Exhibits in this present record.

The Master: Pages 4 and 5.

Q. What is the amount?

A. $2,002,331.41.

Q. Do you include engineering expenses, etc., of $2,321.87? If not, why not?

A. The reason is that that is mentioned separately and is for a survey, pending the extension of the road, which may or may not be made later on; and until it becomes part of the construction, the engineering expense may turn out to be simply a charge to income on account of the proposed extension being afterwards abandoned.

By The Master:

Q. That is to say, it might never be actual construction?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. Don't you include it on your trial balance sheet of March 31, 1860?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then if it is proper in one why is it not proper in the other?

A. Because at that time it had been transferred by this trial balance to the account, cost of road and property, and therefore, having been transferred by the company in its report as part of the cost of the road and property, I assumed that the survey had become a fact of construction, or a construction fact, and that it was therefore a proper charge.

Q. Now what do you show to be the construction of the road, the total construction cost, of the 31st of March 1863?

By The Master:

Q. Before you pass to that, is it not a fact that these trial balances are transcripts of the trial balances that you found, and that if there is any re-arrangement of items that appear in these transcripts that you submit here, it is because that re-arrangement existed in the original from which you made the transcript?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is not that the fact about it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And this item of $2,321.87, the fact that that appears in a different column is not because of any re-arrangement of yours, but is a fact because you made the copy from the original balance sheet, is that it?

A. Yes, sir, that is correct.

Q. And the suggestion which you made as to why the change occurred is your judgment as to why the party who made up the original trial balance changed the item, is not that it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The truth is that you simply copied these trial balances as you found them, is that it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is what I thought.

A. I beg your pardon for going into these, but sometimes—

Q. The explanation is that you simply copied the trial balances as they were presented to you?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Holt: These are simply the trial balances of the road itself copied by him, that is all.

The Master: He was leaving it somewhat confused, and I wanted to know what the fact was.

Mr. Holt: They are not his trial balances.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. Now what do you show to be the construction of the road, the total construction cost, on the 31st of March, 1863?

A. $2,247,976.91, shown on Defendant's Exhibit No. 2, 1863.

By The Master:

Q. What page?

A. Page No. 4.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. Of the blue print?

A. Of the blue print..

The Master: Of the record, is it not?

Mr. Holt: That has not been printed yet.

Mr. Lilly: I might call your attention to the printed record 10, 11, and 12, and it seems to be headed, Trial Balance, March, 1862, and continued Trial Balance, March, 1863.

The Master: That is an error that will have to be corrected. I am glad you have called attention to that.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. Please state whether there was any increasse in the cost of construction between the dates that you have mentioned, March 31, 1859, and March 31, 1863, and if so how much.

A. $245,645,50.

Q. Then within a period of four years between March, 1859, and March, 1863, the construction account of the road had increased $245,000 and no depreciation charged off as shown by the testimony of the witness?

A. That is the correct amount of the increase, $245,645.50.

Q. And nothing charged off for depreciation, is that true?

By The Master:

Q. Well, not as far as you know, of course?

A. Not as far as I know.

The Master: Let us make more progress. You have stated half a dozen times that you had not found any information on that, and you could answer that readily.

The Witness: Nothing has been charged off for depreciation.

The Master: The answer is that as far as you know nothing has been charged off, that is true, is it not?

Mr. Holt: The difficulty is, with the witness, that it might have been charged off in construction account.

Mr. Lilly: Or in operating expense.

Mr. Holt: In other words, his information is confined to the trial balance, not his trial balance, but the trial balance of the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac Railroad, and if there is nothing charged off for depreciation he does not know anything about it.

The Witness: Then I will be allowed to answer that I do not know?

The Master: Why certainly.

The Witness: I was asked the direct question that it did not contain.

The Master: You are not obliged to make a categorical answer. You answer the question according to your understanding of the facts, that is all you are to do. Of course I knew what your answer to that question must be before you made it; that is, if it was consistent with what you had already said, which I had no doubt that it would be.

Mr. Holt: The point of the Master on that proposition, and I concurring of course, is this; Mr. Hillman is simply testifying on what he found there. He has not been keeping books for the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac Railroad.

The Master: Exactly, nor has he seen their books.

Mr. Holt: It was their own trial balance that they made up.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. Now did you look and investigate at all to see if there was any quotation, market quotation on this stock, in January, 1861?

A. No, sir, I did not.

Q. You did not?

A. No, sir.

The Master: You mean now in the stock market?

Mr. Harrison: Yes, sir, as shown by the newspapers of Richmond on that date.

Mr. Holt: Mr Harrison, I would like to get that question and answer. I did not hear it.

(Testimony read by stenographer.)

Q. I am informed, and you can at your convenience verify my information, if you desire, that on January 4, 1861, the stock of the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac Railroad Company as shown by the Richmond Dispatch, the financial reports published in the Richmond Dispatch of that day, it was 76½.

The Master: Per share.

Mr. Harrison: Per share, yes, sir.

Q. Now I should like to ask you, if, in view of the facts that we have developed, namely, that $410,000 of this alleged surplus was represented in construction account of the road, and that so far as you know nothing had ever been charged off for depreciation, and that $152,000 of the surplus, the remaining part of it, was invested in stocks, notes, of which you have no knowledge whatever as to their value; and in view of the further fact, assuming that to be a fact, that this stock was quoted on the market through the newspapers of the City of Richmond on the 4th of January 1861, at seventy-six and a half dollars a share—

Mr. Holt: That is in 1863, is it?

Mr. Harrison: 1861.

Q. Are you still of the opinion that the correct value of the stock is $150 a share, as testified to by you in chief?

The Master: I do not think, brother Harrison, that that is just exactly the thing. Inadvertently it contains the assumption that he has testified that that was the value. That he has not done. He has given the book value. Your question is perfectly proper, except that it perhaps ought not to contain that qualification. Because a little thing like that sometimes embarrasses a witness a good deal. He has given that as the book value, but I do not understand him to have given that as the actual value.

Mr. Holt: We have asked him to show the book value.

The Master: There is no confusion about it.

Mr. Holt: He has gone no farther.

The Master: I understand it exactly.

Mr. Lilly: He has shown the earning value by giving the dividend.

Mr. Harrison: If it is not a fact he can say so, that he has not testified as to value at all, but has merely undertaken to say what this trial balance shows.

The Master: But a witness ordinarily does not like to dissect a question that way. With that modification, I think the question is proper. The question is, Mr. Hillman, upon these various hypotheses suggested by Mr Harrison, what do you say is the fair actual cash value of that stock on January 1, 1861. That is what you want, is it not, Mr. Harrison? Or do you say that it was $150 a share, which is the same thing?

The Witness: I would like the question read.

(Question repeated by stenographer.)

The Master: I do not understand that Mr. Harrison intends to assume that you have testified other than you have although the concluding part of his question might lead to that inference. I do not understand you have so testified.

Mr. Holt: We do not want to be interposing formal objections.

The Master: If you object I shall insist upon the question being reframed.

Mr. Holt: We do not want to insist upon that.

The Master: My conclusion is that the concluding part of the question contains an assumption that is not borne out by the record.

(Last part of question repeated by the stenographer.)

The Master: That is the part of the question that they object to, on the ground that it contains an assumption that is not in accordance with the facts. That objection is sustained.

Mr. Harrison: I would rather not ask a question that is subject to objection. I will strike out that part of it.

Q. Please state what in your opinion as a railroad expert—

The Master: Do you withdraw the whole question?

Mr. Harrison: No.

The Master: You strike out the concluding part and add this?

Mr. Harrison: Yes.

Q. Please state what in your opinion as a railroad expert accountant the true or actual value of this stock was on January 1, 1861.

The Master: You may answer.

The Master: If you want to take the time to get together to answer that, we will suspend here for five minutes, unless you prefer to have the question answered before you suspend.

Mr. Harrison: Suppose you let him answer it.

The Master: Of course upon a question like this, which is a question of some importance, you must understand that you are at liberty to take such time as may be necessary in order to reach what in your judgment is a proper conclusion. You need not feel embarrassed about the delay. You take your own time.

The Witness: Your Honor, the question also—

Mr. Harrison: We withdraw that question.

The Master: That question is withdrawn and that colloquy is also withdrawn.

Q. If I understand your testimony, you do not undertake to testify as to the actual value or market value or true value of this railway stock as of the 1st of January, 1861; am I correct in that understanding?

A. You are, yes, sir.

Q. If I understand you correctly also, all you have done in so far as your examination is concerned was to confine your examination to the liability side of the balance sheet from which you took the amount of the outstanding capital stock and the paper surplus without paying any consideration to or taking any account of the actual value of the assets or whether the road and its intangible assets had an equal or any value whatsoever at that period. Am I correct about that?

A. Yes, sir. I have simply determined the book value of the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac Road in this case.

Q. That is not an answer to my question.

The Witness: I claim, your honor, that it is a direct answer to his question.

Q. The first part of it was. I do not know whether you intended to qualify it by the last part or not. You began by saying yes, sir. That was directly responsive.

The Master: I think he would have a right in answering a rather comprehensive question like that not only to answer categorically but to conclude his answer by such explanation that seems to him to be necessary in order to state the facts. You can follow him up with such features as you desire.

Mr. Holt: Otherwise, your honor, the witness feels as if he was in a straight jacket. He cannot testify at all if he is a man of conscience.

The Witness. There are half a dozen questions included in that.

The Master: I hold that the witness is within his rights.

Mr. Harrison: Read the question and answer and let us see if there is any difficulty about the question.

The Master: If you have not everything you want, why follow it up.

(The question and answer were repeated by the stenographer.)

The Master: I do not think the concluding part of his answer qualifies it any to amount to anything. That is practically what your question involved, book value, and he simply emphasizes by repeating it.

Mr. Harrison: I would like him to show how he arrived at that book value.

The Master: I cannot hold the witness too close on a thing of that kind.

Q. All that was necessary for you to reach the result that you have reached, which you described as a book value of this stock in January, 1861, was to know the capital stock and the paper surplus, was it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Had you seen that published in the newspapers or had gotten it from any other source, it would have done just as well, would it not?

A. No, sir.

Q. Why not?

A. For the reason that it would not have been authentic.

Q. Then with that exception the result would have been the same?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, will you please state what book value you give this stock on June 20, 1863?

A. 184.50 as shown upon Defendant's Exhibit No. 2, 1863, page No. 3 of that series of Exhibits.

Q. You arrived at that by following the same method that you did in 1861, for the 1861 period, did you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, what is the amount of the surplus which you show on June 20, 1863?

A. I do not show any surplus for June 20, 1863.

Q. Well, for whatever period you show it? You show it for some period. Suppose you state that at the same time that you correct me as to the date that I directed your attention to.

A. Well, what date do you want?

Q. Whatever date you show the surplus during the year 1863.

A. March 31, 1863.

Q. What do you show it to be on that date?

A. $952,160.86.

Q. Have you undertaken to show that this 184.40 is the book value of this stock as of June 20, 1863?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, on what surplus is it predicated?

A. Upon the surpluses March 31, 1863, and March 31, 1864, spacing the increase in the surplus on a time pro rated between those dates, so as to bring it up to June 20, 1863.

Q. Let us look at the assets if you please as shown on your trial balance sheet for March, 1863, and then for March, 1864. You have stated that the surplus amounted to $952,160.86, on the 31st of March, 1863. How was that invested, in other words, what did it represent?

A. It represented the excess of the assets over the liabilities.

Q. Now, I did not ask you how you arrived at it. I asked you how it was invested.

Mr. Lilly: You asked what it represented.

The Witness: Will the stenographer please repeat the question?

Mr. Holt: Read the question and answer.

Q. I asked you how it was invested.

Mr. Holt: Let us have it from the stenographer.

Mr. Harrison: I know what I said.

Mr. Holt: I do not, and I want to hear what you said.

Mr. Harrison: I am going to state now what I said.

Mr. Holt: I would like to have the question read as it stands in the record.

The Master: Yes, the stenographer will read it.

Mr. Harrison: Yes, but I propose to exercise my privilege of saying what I wish to say.

Mr. Holt: I am asking a privilege the Master has accorded me.

The Master: You are both right.

Mr. Harrison: In my question I intended by saying what does it represent to be explanatory of my inquiry how is it invested.

Mr. Holt: I had proposed to put my own construction of your question after I had ascertained what it was.

Q. Will you tell me how it was invested?

Mr. Holt: I would like to have the question and answer read.

The Master: The stenographer will repeat the question and if Mr. Harrison wants to modify it he has a perfect right to.

(The question and answer were repeated by the stenographer.)

Question repeated as follows: Now, I did not ask you how you arrived at it. I asked you how it was invested.

A. $503,455.20 can be considered as being invested in the liquid assets, which you have called them, and $448,705.66 in cost of road.

Q. Now, the liquid assets, I see by looking at the sheet—

The Master: Page No. 4, is that right?

Mr. Harrison: Yes, sir.

The Witness: Page No. 4 of Defendant's Exhibit No. 2, 1863.

Q. —that $19,068.13 is shown to be invested in bills receivable. The character of that you know nothing about, that is correct, is it not?

A. That is correct.

Q. And that $97,181 was invested in what is described as open accounts—about that your answer would be the same, would it not, you know nothing?

A. I do not know what they were.

Q. I also observe that $193,312 was due from the Confederate Government for the transportation of freight and passengers. Do you know anything about that, and whether it was paid?

By The Master:

Q. Do you know anything about it except what appears on the trial balance?

A. Nothing except what is shown upon the trial balance sheets. Part of it was paid, from the trial balance sheets, which are on file in this case. How much I do not know.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. Then I also notice that $22,422 of it was said to be due from the Confederate States Government for expense of reconstruction of bridges destroyed. I suppose your answer would be the same as to that, that you know nothing about it?

A. I do not know what its value was.

Q. I also observe that $24,612 of it was invested in Seaboard & Roanoke Railroad Company stock, and $38,900 in the Potomac Steamboat stock, which we have noticed before, as to neither of those stocks you know anything of their par value?

A. I happen to know that the Seaboard & Roanoke stock is good stock.

Q. How did you happen to know that?

A. From investigations of the Seaboard Air Line Company of which this became a part, made by me a little over a year ago for the State of Florida.

By The Master:

Q. What do you mean by good stock, do you mean that it was worth par?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. Do you undertake to testify in this case from your outside knowledge that in June, 1863, Seaboard & Roanoke Railroad stock was worth par?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In gold?

A. I do not know whether in gold or not.

Q. I see $240,000 was invested in Confederate States bonds. Perhaps your outside investigation has enlightened you about that. How about it?

A. I have never investigated Confederate States bonds, and do not know what their value was.

Q. Now, I think we can get same light on that subject probably, Confederate values, on the sheet that relates to March, 1864, that enters into this computation. Looking at the securities that constitute the assets on that sheet, in which the surplus was invested, I find this item, specie bought to purchase supplies with, $500, in gold, at $30 for one, $15,000; and that to purchase $5.02 in silver it took $22 for $1, or $110.14 to buy $5.02 worth.

The Master: That beats 16 to 1.

Mr. Harrison: Yes, I believe it is even worse than that.

(Question not answered.)

Q. Why did you carry in a column in order to base value upon in March, 1864, $15,110.14 which only represented as shown by your statement, $505.02 of actual value, of real money?

A. Because this is a copy of the trial balance of the company, it was so stated by them.

Q. Then you could see, could you not, whether the books contained those figures or not, that that so-called book value was based in part on $15,110 that possessed at that time only $505.02 of real value?

A. I had noted that fact, that the gold and silver were both at a heavy premium.

Q. Your surplus of 1864 also seems to contain about $333,000 of Confederate State bonds, does it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So the surplus then for the year 1863 and 1864, the liquid part of it, as we are calling it, was represented by Confederate values, was it not?

A. Yes, sir; there were a large proportion of them in Confederate bonds.

Q. It has been proved in this record, in the original record, and has never been questioned therein, that the only medium of exchange, the only currency in Virginia in 1863 was Confederate currency and that all values were measured by that currency. If that is true then Confederate values would be the test of the value of all of the assets in June, 1863, which constitute the paper surplus as shown on your exhibit, would it not?

A. If that is true, yes sir.

Mr. Holt: Now, Mr. Harrison, the exhibit, as you have suspended for a moment, last referred to is what, please?

Mr. Harrison: I have been using two exhibits.

The Master: Page No. 5. The last exhibit that has been examined from is page No. 5 of Defendant's Exhibit No. 2 1863.

Mr. Holt: 1863?

The Master: Yes.

Mr. Harrison: I am dealing with 1863 and 1864.

Mr. Holt: I wanted to ask at a time that my question would not break into your question.

The Master: I am not certain but that you will find something in the Master's report on the question of basing values on Confederate currency.

Mr. Harrison: So it is. I said the original record; I did not specify your report.

Mr. Holt: All of which, if I may be permitted to say so, shows the utter futility of going to the date of June 20, 1863, the chief value of our exhibits on that subject.

The Master: A little preliminary argumentative suggestion.

Mr. Holt: Yes, sir.

Mr. Harrison: We certainly agree with you in that view.

Mr. Holt: Yes, but that is the year you are claiming on.

The Master: It may be if you both agree that no values are to be determined upon the hypothesis of June 20, 1863, we can eliminate all these matters upon either side appearing on that date.

Mr. Holt: Even on that we can overleap the allegations of our answer.

The Master: I do not think you are bound by the alternative allegations of your answer.

Mr. Holt: Oh, no.

The Master: It is a quite familiar practice that we throw out all the anchors to windward that we can think about. While they are conferring, I think Attorney General Lilly called attention to the fact that there is an apparent error here in the exhibit printing on page 12. Page 10 and page 11 start with what purports to be the trial balance March 31, 1862, and the last line on page 11 says carried forward, etc., and the next page is apparently a continuation, but it is headed trial balance March 31, 1863. I suppose that must be 1862.

Mr. Hogg: Evidently.

The Master: See that that is corrected. I think we called attention to this before, and that is what I wanted Mr. Harris to have in mind, to see that that 3 is stricken out and 2 inserted in its place. It has given me about twenty-five minutes work sitting here to figure that out.

The Master: Mr Harris, page 12 should read Trial Balance

1862 instead of 1863. An error like that in the print is extremely annoying.

Mr. Hogg: It looks as though it might be a misplaced page.

Mr. Harrison: If your Honor please, I am ready to go on with another subject.

The Master: Class C?

Mr. Harrison: No.

The Master: Another item under Class B?

Mr. Harrison: They skipped Class C and Class D and went to Class E.

The Master: But in the print, the print will show that the whole thing went along in its regular order. As a matter of convenience we did skip. But I do not care to have that skipping done now, because it is important to have it in chronological order.

Mr. Holt: We did it because we did not have the blue prints.

The Master: We did it as the result of an understanding, but the understanding was that when the case was printed it should be printed in its chronological order, and it is so printed. And for that reason, unless it would subject you to embarrassment, I would follow the chronological order. You are right in your suggestion that that is what was done. But the printed record will show that the record went along in chronological order. Before you go to another subject, I want to make this inquiry. Is there any question raised as to the accuracy of any of the items found in Defendant's Exhibit No. 1, page 1, of the printed record? That is, is the accuracy of the figures conceded, or is there any contest about them?

Mr. Harrison: I think we are in agreement on that subject.

The Master: I understand they do not agree with some of the other statements in the original case. But what I want to know now is whether any question is now raised as to the accuracy of these computations made by Mr. Hillman, and if so what is the question, and what is the item.

Mr. Harrison: No question.

The Master: Then that takes care of these. Now I would like to make the same inquiry as to Class B. These concessions of course do not concede that they prove anything, they simply state that the items as stated, are correctly stated. Now the question is, is there any objection made as to the items that appear in Mr. Hillman's computation as to Class B.

Mr. Lilly: As to accuracy?

The Master: Yes, as to the accuracy of the computations and the amounts.

Mr. Holt: As to the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac road?

The Master: Yes.

Mr. Harrison: I understand that is so.

Mr. Holt: We are to understand from that then that Mr. Potter, their accountant, has checked not only the figures covering Class A, but Class B also, and has found them to be correct, for whatever they may be worth.

The Master: That is correct as I understand it. So that that cleans that up as we go along.

Mr. Holt: This admission I suppose applies not only to schedules covering Classes A and B for 1861, but for 1863, as well, because they have been carrying in their cross-examination the two sets of schedules together.

The Master: Do you hear that suggestion, brother Harrison?

Mr. Harrison: Sir?

The Master: Judge Holt's inquiry is whether that concession applies to parallel schedules relating to Classes A and B predicated upon June 20, 1863; and I suppose it does.

Mr. Harrison: I think so.

The Master: So that takes care of the accuracy of the details for the amounts stated for 1861 and 1863.

Mr. Lilly: That is making progress.

Mr. Holt: That is real progress.

The Master: Well, we know where we are. I prefer, brother Harrison, to have you take a little extra time to have you go along in the chronological order.

Mr. Harrison: I find I can go right on now. I find I have omitted one or two quesstions.

Q. Please state, in order that I may have it conveniently before me in the record, what you show the value of the capital stock of the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac to be at $184.50 a share in June, June 20, 1863—what does it amount to, the capital stock held by the State of Virginia?

A. $507,744, as shown on Defendant's Exhibit No. 2, 1863, page 3 of those exhibits.

Q. That you carried into your second item on page 51 of your exhibits of summary of claims of West Virginia, did you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In other words, that you have treated as furnishing the basis of a claim of actual value on behalf of West Virginia, have you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Harrison: I find some of the original documents which we have sent for have not been sent over, and I am not prepared to go on at once.

The Master: I think in the interest of having the record harmonious that it is better to suspend here. When do you want to come in, at two or half past two?

Mr. Harrison: Two I should say.

The Master: Then we will suspend here until two o'clock, because I think it is infinitely preferable to take this up in chronological order.

Recess until 2 P. M.

AFTER RECESS

Continuation of the cross-examination of

CONWAY W. HILLMAN.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. I will take up now, next in order, the Orange & Alexandria Railroad, being the first item on the statement designated as Class C, Asset 1, Hillman Exhibit 3-A, being Defendant's Exhibit No. 3. You state under the caption par of stock of the Orange & Alexandria Railroad Company for September 30, 1856, $1,457,000. Please state whether that is the stock, the amount of the stock subscribed or the amount paid in?

The Master: Paid in and issued you mean?

Mr. Harrison: Yes.

A. That is the total amount of the subscribed stock.

Q. Where did you take that item from?

A. From general balance sheet, Orange & Alexandria Railroad Company, of September 30, 1856, as expressed on pages 946 and 947 of Document 17, report of the State of Virginia.

Q. By a reference to that document, No. 17, at page 947, I find the total amount of the stock paid in stated to be—I mean subscribed—to be $1,457,500.

The Master: What do you refer to now, brother Harrison?

Mr. Harrison: Do not take this down.

Q. There is then a discrepancy in the figures shown by you purporting to be taken from this document and the figures as shown in the document, is there not?

A. Yes, sir. My original notes show $1,457,500 and it has been transcribed as $1,457,000 even, and the error has not been discovered in checking over the par of the stock.

The Master: Do you concede that that item should be corrected by adding $500 to it?

The Witness: Yes, sir. The computation where the book value is shown immediately below is however made on the basis of the $1,457,500.

Mr. Holt: The correct amount?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

Mr. Holt: I would like to inquire right there, your Honor, if it is not inappropriate, whether or not Mr. Potter when he would check over with Mr. Hillman, if he would discover a discrepancy, if he would call it to Mr. Hillman's attention.

Mr. Potter: I did not check these over with Mr. Hillman.

Mr. Holt: Did you check them over with yourself.

Mr. Harrison: I have had him helping me on this.

Mr. Holt: I supposed it was a sort of mutual exchange of checks back and forth.

Mr. Harrison: No; no mutual exchange of checks back and forth when it comes to material errors.

The Master: The answer to the present inquiry is that Mr. Potter did not check this one up with Mr. Hillman, as I understand it; but Judge Holt's suggestion was that if he did check up and found there were errors, at the time he found them did he call Mr. Hillman's attention to them.

Mr. Holt: Did they try to get together, which was the understanding.

The Master: Yes, that was the understanding; if there were any errors observed they were to try to get together if they could.

Q. Will you please tell me whether you took as the basis for the par of the stock for the years 1857, 1858 and 1859 the amount subscribed as you did in the case of 1856?

A. Yes, sir, I took the amount subscribed.

Q. Now, in case of the years 1860 and 1861 did you take as a basis for the par of the stock the amount subscribed—for the year 1860, I mean, did you take as the basis for the par of the stock subscribed, as you did in the four years previous, or the amount paid in?

The Master: The cross-examination is directed to the exhibit found on pages 14 and 15 of the printed record.

A. The amount paid in.

Q. Why did you take a different basis for the years 1856, 1857, 1858 and 1859 from the basis you took for the years 1860 and 1861 for the par of stock?

A. I do not know, sir.

Q. Which is right?

A. The amount paid in.

Q. Then if you were right for the years 1860 and 1861 you were wrong in your basis for the years 1856, 1857, 1858 and 1859?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does this not change the basis on which you figured your so-called book value?

A. It would change the basis for 1857, 1858 and 1859; the unpaid subscriptions being $48,048.58.

By The Master:

Q. The unpaid subscriptions?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. For what year?

A. For 1857, being $48,048.58, for 1858, $45,169.10, for 1859, $44,059.63.

Q. That does not appear on the exhibit?

A. No, sir. It was to show the amount of the statements if it should be questioned.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. I find you have on your exhibit a caption headed profit—I mean a caption, profit, and underneath the figures $7,571.28. What is your authority for writing the word profit above that, above those figures?

A. For the reason that it is so shown on the trial balance of the Orange & Alexandria Railroad September 30, 1856.

Q. Now, will you look at the volume and see if you are correct about that. What is the caption there, or designation of those figures?

A. Profit and loss account.

Q. Then you have no authority for writing the word profit above and designating that as a profit for that year?

A. Certainly, sir.

Q. What is it?

A. Because it on the side of the account where it would be necessary to have a profit in order to balance the accounts.

Q. I ask you, is that the profit for that year or the accumulated profit up to that time.

A. That is the accumulated profit up to that time.

Q. Does the report of the president of the road for that year show any net earnings of the company for the past year?

The Master: That is, does the trial balance show any net earnings, is that what you mean?

Mr. Harrison: No; does the president's report show.

The Master: It is the report you are examining from?

Mr. Harrison: Yes.

The Master: The question is whether that shows any net earnings for the year preceding September 30, 1856.

A. I could not say; I did not examine it.

Q. I find that he states in his report in this document that you qoute from as follows: "The net earnings of the road over its working expenses proper for the half year amount to sum of $138,822.22." You did not discover that, you say?

A. I did not look for it and therefore did not discover it.

Q. What were you looking for?

A. The profit and loss account as shown upon the trial balance of the company, 1856, September 30.

Q. You show under the caption of book value the value of this stock January 1, 1861, to be $106.64.

The Master: That stock as a matter of fact was $50 par value?

Mr. Harrison: $50 par value I think, yes, sir.

Q. Now, will you tell me on what that book value is based.

A. It was based upon the profits of the profit and loss account as shown upon the trial balance sheet of September 30, 1856, plus the profits of operation above interest, taxes and dividends declared as far as we could determine them from the annual reports of this company made to the State of Virginia, adding in for each year the profit so shown to the last available profit as shown by the trial balance of the company, September 30, 1856.

Q. Then it is based on income and expenses, is it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I thought you testified heretofore that a book value should be based on assets and liabilities. How then could you base a book value on income and expenses and arrive at a just or correct result?

A. For the reason that there does not to my knowledge exist any trial balance of the Orange & Alexandria Railroad subsequent to the one that I have mentioned, September 30, 1856, from which the profit and loss account or the assets and liabilities could be correctly made up, and that therefore the only method left was to add to the last determined profit the successive operating profits above interest, taxes and dividends for each year, and thus arrive at what might be considered the surplus or the amount to be divided among the stockholders.

Q. Then, if I understand you, you did not possess the data upon which to arrive correctly at the book value of the stock, is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you give us any information as to what constituted the investments of this road upon which this alleged book value was based?

A. At what date, may I ask?

Q. I will say the date to which your testimony has related January, 1861.

A. I could do so approximately, yes, sir.

Q. From what source would you draw that information?

A. From the Document 17—

Q. Just say the same document.

A. From the same document, 1860.

Q. No. 17?

A. Yes.

Q. Does that show anything further than the construction account and the cost of maintenance and operating expenses and so on?

A. Yes, sir, it shows other items.

Q. Well, suppose you mention some of them that constitute investments of the alleged surplus of the company.

A. May I preface that by the statement that the trial balance is not quite complete, but that it can be made to correspond quite closely with the figures that I have used. The cost of the road, as shown, is $5,097,577.21. Miscellaneous items, not specified—

Q. What table is that you are reading from?

A. This is on page 19 of this record of the State. Miscellaneous items, $26,827.61; wharf and other property, $60,730.40; stock of the company, subject to redemption, $69,515; on page 38 I find a further item, cash and other material, amounting to $72,793; giving us a total on the asset side of our account of $5,327,443.22. On the other side of the account, that is the liabilities, we have the paid in capital stock of $2,039,603.73; a bonded indebtedness of $2,517,500; a floating debt of $631,756.98; making a total on the liability side out of the balance sheet, if it could be completed, of $5,188,850.71. The difference between these two sides of the account would be $138,592.51, which would represent the profit and loss account at this date, had we been able to obtain every other item in the assets and liabilities; but to put it a little differently, if the items which we have mentioned include all the other assets and liabilities of this company. The amount which I have used as a dividend in order to determine the book value of this road is $135,495.49.

By The Master:

Q. You say you used as a dividend, don't you mean used as a profit?

A. Yes, sir, used as a profit.

Q. Do not get it confused in that way, because it was not a dividend at all, you used it as a profit and you assumed that that would have gone into the surplus account?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. If the trial balance had been completed, am I right about that?

A. Yes, sir.

The Master: Now be careful about that, because dividends are sifted all through the record as dividends, but this is not a dividend at all.

The Witness: A difference between the amount which would be shown by the asset and liability side of the account if they had all been correctly stated and of the amount which I have arrived at by my computations of $3,097.02, the figures which I have used being that much less than those shown above.

The Master: That much less than the discrepancy?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

Q. You have no evidence of the value of this stock except this printed report found in Board of Public Works bound printed volume, Document No. 17 to which you have been referring?

A. No, sir, I have no other information on this subject.

Q. And any testimony you have given or exhibits you have filed relating to value as of the period in question, January 1, 1861, is based upon what you have found there?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Holt: May I ask a question there. Does that bound volume show the dividends paid on the stock of that road?

The Witness: Yes, sir, it does.

Q. Please state if the result you obtained in respect to the value of this stock in June 1863, page No. 8—

The Master: Page No. 8 what?

Mr. Harrison: Page No. 8, Class C.

The Master: You mean of the exhibits of 1863?

Mr. Harrison: Yes, sir.

The Master: Be careful and indicate.

A. The result shows a surplus on September 30, 1863, of $705,298.40 profit, a book value of 134.25. This is shown on Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, Asset No. 1, 1863, page No. 8.

Q. It seems to have increased, this value, from 1861 to 1863 from $106.64 per share to $134.25 per share or a difference of $27.61 per share; is that correct?

A. Yes, sir, excepting the date was 1860 instead of 1861.

Q. Did you examine the President's report and the Engineer's report found in this Document No. 17 relating to this road in 1861, the report of 1861, showing the condition of the road?

A. Yes, sir, I read it over.

Q. Did you observe that the President reported that sections of the track had been destroyed and bridges burnt from Cameron to Bull Run, a distance of 22 miles?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is the total mileage of the road, or was?

The Master: Upon which these reports are predicated.

A. I did not look at that, but my recollection is it is about 72 miles.

Q. What?

A. My recollection is about 72 miles, I couldn't tell you though because I don't know.

The Master: About thirty per cent. had been destroyed.

Mr. Holt: That is the bridges on thirty per cent.

The Witness: Your Honor, the mileage will be mentioned on these reports.

The Master: I presume the result of that would be that on about thirty per cent. of the road the bridges had been destroyed and the track had been torn up.

Mr. Lilly: Did it say all the track had been torn up?

Mr. Holt: Bridges destroyed between those two points.

Mr. Harrsion: I am going to file these two reports.

The Master: While they are looking that up, inasmuch as General Anderson is here, and Professor Hogg, what I want to find out is what changes if any are necessary in this print, so far as it has been made.

Mr. Hogg: None that we have observed, and we have gone over it carefully.

Mr. Harrison: None:

Mr. Hogg: I want to ask one question of Mr. Hillman in relation to the record.

The Master: You may ask it now.

By Mr. Hogg:

Q. On page 2 of the exhibits of 1861. I understand that is page 184, ledger B, Internal Improvement Fund, instead of ledger B, Second Auditor's office. Is that right or is it correct as it is?

A. Your Honor, what is called to my attention is merely the change of a page from 17 to 184, which my assistant informs me is correct.

By The Master:

Q. That is, instead of reading page 17, ledger B, it should be page 184?

A. Yes, sir.

The Master: Well, that is all right, that change will be made.

Mr. Holt: I wanted to get whether that was the report of the destruction of bridges between two points or of the entire road between two points.

The Master: I understood the extract to read in substance that the track had been destroyed and the bridges had been burned over a distance of about twenty-two miles of the road.

Mr. Holt: Its earnings kept increasing all the time, so that there must have been some track left there.

The Master: That is a matter of argument, of course.

Mr. Holt: That is why I am asking the question. You get one idea and I get another.

The Master: Just read the extract, please.

Mr. Harrison: I am going to put it all in; I do not want to stop to read it.

The Master: Read the extract.

Mr. Harrison: They are talking about the evacuation of Alexandria by the State Troops. "Sections of the track were destroyed and the bridges were burned from Cameron to Bull Run, and twenty-two miles of the railroad in the direction nearest Alexandria surrendered to the control of the enemy or rendered useless to the company. After the battle of the 21st of July the streams between Manassas and Fairfax Station were temporarily bridged again by order of our military authorities for the use of the army only. And recently this part of the line has been again abandoned. This together with the loss of the workshops and their furniture and other property, unavoidably left behind in Alexandria, will constitute a large amount, which in justice at the proper time ought to be paid by the State or the Confederate Government to the stockholders of the company."

Mr. Holt: Now, the date of that, Mr. Harrison, please?

Mr. Harrison: The president's report does not bear date, but he refers in his report to the superintendent's report, which is transmitted along with his own report, and the superintendent's report bears date November 5, 1861.

Mr. Holt: November 5, 1861?

Mr. Harrison: Yes.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. I further observe in this report of the president that he states that about 122 miles of the main line and the branch to Warrenton are in operation, so you must have been mistaken when you gave the total length of the road at 70 miles.

A. If you recall, I gave it simply as my recollection, that I had not looked it up, and stated that you having books there I would accept any length that you gave.

Mr. Harrison: The road extended from Alexandria as far as Lynchburg.

Mr. Holt: We have gotten the only fact we inquired of and wanted to know, which was what you stated a moment ago about the destruction between two points twenty miles. I thought it related to the bridges alone, and you have read the point that covers my question. Now, we do not want further to interrupt your examination, and if that is to be read in the record, read it in proper order.

Q. I observe also in this report that the president states that among the assets of the company, in fact he states them thus, I will give the three items, he gives as the indebtedness, total funded debt $2,609,000; total temporary debt $572,673. Against these indebtednesses the actual resources of the company may be stated as follows: Cash in bank, $40,637.42; due by the government, $161,903.72; freight bills and accounts due by the Post Office Department and Express Company, $22,183.38, making a total of resources against the indebtedness just stated of $224,724. The president adds to this that individual subscriptions of stock included $23,437.09, and mortgage bonds of the several issues either by hypothecation as collarteral security or on hand and unsold, $691,000. Of this last, all are of the last issue except $73,000. The new issue of mortgage bonds to the amount of $700,000 authorized by the last meeting of the stockholders to pay off the heavy existing floating debt of the company has been duly prepared and only a small amount so far disposed of. The company has paid up all the interest due upon these bonds of the several issues where the coupons have been presented except that part held at the north, the payment of which was arrested by Act of Congress and public policy.

Now, I wish to read for your benefit as a foundation for the question an extract from the report of the—

Mr. Holt: Is that intended as the basis of a question or are you reading at this point this report into the record?

Mr. Harrison: I am reading such extracts as I am into the record, and expect to use them in the examination of the witness. I expect to follow up both of these reports.

Mr. Holt: When you have cross-examined and you have your case in chief. You started out by calling the attention of the witness to three items as I thought.

Mr. Harrison: My dear sir, I am going to conduct the examination with as due regard to time and the proprieties as I know how to. I am laying the foundation for the examination of this witness.

Mr. Holt: Then you are introducing that in chief for the purpose of cross-examining him upon your own evidence I presume. Is that your idea of propriety?

Mr. Harrison: I do not think you and I would differ upon that score at all, Judge.

Mr. Holt: I did not suppose we would.

Q. Have you read the report of the engineer?

A. I have read those reports, yes, sir.

Q. Then you are familiar with the contents of these reports?

A. I cannot say that I can recall them without reference to them.

Q. My purpose now is to refresh your memory. The engineer says in his report "that it is not possible for me to make a detailed report of operations of this road in my department or to give you the aggregate working expenses owing to the fact that my books showing this information from the 1st of October, 1860, to the 1st of May, 1861, are not in my possession. I can only estimate them from my recollection and by the operation since May for information in a general way."

Mr. Holt: What is the date of the engineer's report?

Mr. Harrison: November 5, 1861.

Q. (Continuing) In speaking of the condition of his road he says, "We have 16 locomotives belonging to us. One of them was undergoing repairs in the machine shop at Alexandria at the time of the invasion and was in such condition that it could not be removed. Another, the Fairfax, was regarded only valuable as old iron, and a third, the F————, though brought out of Alexandria, has been of no service owing to her light weight and general uselessness, so that we have 13 locomotives in actual use, and at this time they are all in running order. Since the 17th of April these engines mostly have been without shelter and dependent upon a lathe and blacksmith's forge for repairs. It seems almost that they felt it to be their duty to keep themselves in order for the occasion, though much credit is due to those connected with the machinery and the running department for their skill and watchfulness. The road department has not been placed in as complete a condition as it would have been had we been able to supply ourselves with iron rails and ties. But I consider it in good order, and with materials on hand and procurable can keep it so." Great credit and praise is due the men under him for the hardships that they have endured, and so on. Now, you have shown a remarkable increase in the value of this stock, paper increase, between 1861 and 1863, an increase of some $27 a share by June 20, 1863. In view of the condition of this road as shown by the president's report, in November, 1861 and the conditions that existed from that time in Virginia continuously to and including June 20, 1863, and the large indebtedness shown by the president's report, bonded indebtedness, gold obligations, resting upon the road, would you say that there is any basis whatsoever upon which to found this paper increase in the value of the stock?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is it?

A. That the road, in spite of the fact of its supposed partial destruction, was in such a condition that it was earning heavily and with most remarkable facility each year, showing that as an operating tool its utility had not been materially lessened even by the destruction, and that its earning capacity was large and increasing.

The Master : Just one moment. Mr. Harris, with the exception of changing upon page 2 of the Defendant's Exhibit the figures 17 to 184, this record is conceded to be correct.

Mr. Hogg: With the corrections already made.

The Master: Yes, with the corrections that you have already made. Now call the attention of the printer to that page. When that is done you tell the printer to strike off his hundred copies, and he can distribute his type, and ask him to hurry along with his exhibits relating to 1863, because we would like to have those as soon as we can get them.

Mr. Lilly: What is you Honor's idea about how you will number these schedules of 1863? You see we may have some more schedules on 1861.

The Master: I would call them 1863 schedules. We are already going to have on this print at the head class so and so, 1861.

Mr. Hogg : At the head of the page?

The Master: Yes.

Mr. Holt: We can take care of that.

The Master: That will appear right at the head of the page, class so and so, 1861, and when we come to 1863, it will be class so and so, 1863.

Q. Were not the chief resources of this road, so far as document No. 17 shows, upon which you rely, amounts due by the Confederate Government for the transportation of troops? I am referring to the period now between 1861 and 1863.

A. I do not know, sir.

Q. I just called your attention to document No. 17, the president's report, wherein he gives a total of $224,724 of resources in November, 1861, of which $161,903 was due by the Confederate Government. Does not that represent considerably the larger part of the resources, as shown by this volume?

A. No, sir, I think not.

Q. Well, will you state what else?

A. I have not had an opportunity to examine document No. 17.

Q. (Handing book.) I will hand it to you and ask you to do so now. I am referring now to the actual resources as shown by the report of the president of the road. If you have not had a chance to examine the report why did you say that there were other resources than those that I have stated?

A. For the simple reason that you had stated in your report that there were some $2,242,845.65 worth of stock of road equipment stated by your president and also that they had cash in bank of $40,637,42; so, necessarily, from your own statement there must have been a large amount of other assets.

Q. I confine my question to the resources that that road derived during that period, my question was if the report of the president did not show that the larger part of the resources consisted in the amount due by the government to the road, the total amount as shown by his report being $224,000, including the cash in banks which you have just referred to. I mean free resources, I am not talking about the cost of the road.

The Master: You mean available resources?

Mr. Harrison: Available resources. I am not asking now what the road cost.

The Master: You are distinguishing resources from assets.

Mr. Holt: Does it mean income by that, or accumulated income or what?

Mr. Harrison: I will examine the witness.

Mr. Holt: I did not know what it meant, and that is why I asked the question.

The witness: In addition to the $224,724.52 which you have mentioned, the president also mentions upon the same page, 36, document 17, that to this add individual subscriptions of stock uncollected, $23,437.09, mortgage bonds, of several issues, either hypothecated as collateral security or on hand and unsold, $691,000; which would indicate considerably more liquid resources than you have mentioned.

Q. Let me have the book, if you have finished.

A. Yes.

Q. You have given it as your opinion that the condition of this road as shown by the president's report, and the conditions prevailing in Virginia during the period about which we are inquiring when war was raging, did not affect the value of this stock or the earning capacity of the road because it appears that its dividends steadily increased. I have not asked you anything about that—

Mr. Holt: I do not think the witness made that statement.

Mr. Harrison: Just let me ask my question, if your Honor please.

The Master: Let Brother Harrison complete his question, and then if Judge Holt has any criticism to make I will hear it.

Mr. Harrison: I would greatly prefer that. If there is any ground of objection to any question I ask, let the objection be stated; but I think I should be allowed to state the question without interruption.

The Master: We rather got the impression that you had concluded your question, and I must say that I got the same impression, but we were both wrong. You are entitled to finish your question, and if there is any criticism to be made of it I will hear Judge Holt.

Q. I have not asked you anything about the cost of the construction of the road or its bond issue, all of which I have myself read in full, but I did ask you—

The Master: You are going to complete your question now?

Mr. Harrison: Yes, sir.

Q. And I now repeat, if it does not appear from the president's report, which is the only source of information, it seems, you have had on this subject, or that any of us have for the present for that year, shows that the larger amounts of the resources of the road, the earnings of the road, the cash that it received, whether it received it or not, that the larger amount of the resources, as the president himself describes it, consisted of an amount due by the government.

The Master: The Confederate Government?

Mr. Harrison: Yes, sir.

Q. That amount being $161.903 out of a total of $224,000 as shown by him, to which may be added $23,000 of individual subscriptions that were uncollected, but that is not earnings of the road.

The Master: That follows from your characterization of the president's report.

Q. Now I ask again if it is not true that the road was dependent for its earnings largely, as shown by this report, upon what it earned from the government.

A. That is impossible to say. Their earnings that year were $604,025.44, very much in excess of the previous year. Whether or not all of that, or more than the one hundred and sixty odd thousand which you have mentioned, was due from the Confederate Government I cannot say.

Q. I see you have now turned to the engineer's report in answer to my last question, and I will ask you to look at it again. He there is making an estimate, he said, of what the earnings of the road were, in the absence of the books, being unable to do more than that. And I observe he states the receipts from passengers to be $206,668, does he not?

A. I don't know, sir, without reference to the book, as to what passengers would be.

Q. What did you refer to just now when you stated the total resources of the road?

A. From a memorandum which I had taken off of the total earnings of the road.

Q. Then you did not refer to the report itself. Where did you get that memorandum from?

A From that book.

Q. From what part of the book?

A. Document No. 17.

Q. From what part of Document No. 17.

A. I cannot give you the page without seeing the document; I cannot carry those in my head.

Q. Suppose you look at that and tell me. You know you took it from the superintendent's report, don't you.

Mr. Holt: You said the engineer a moment ago.

Mr. Harrison: Well, engineer and superintendent, that is what he is called; it is the same thing.

The Master: It is interchangeable.

Mr. Harrison: Yes, sir.

The Master: I am very glad to learn that, because I got the impression there were three reports, and on the contrary, there were only two.

Q. Have you a reference to the book in your memorandum, the page?

A. Yes, sir, page 54, Document 17. It reads table H, earnings, receipts and payments from passengers $401,494.20; from freight, $159,241.77; from mail, $28,709.12; from other sources, $14,580.35; total $604,025.44.

Q. How does that total compare with the total given by the engineer and superintendent in his report?

A. The same.

Q. Now, the engineer has itemized those items, hasn't he?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Suppose you read them.

A. From passengers, $206,668.85; from government troops, $194,520.35; from government freight, $67,104.34; individual freight, $92,137.43; United States mail, $22,600.79; Confederate States mail, $6,108.33; Southern Express, $7,071.33; Adams Express, $6,846.95; News agency, $305.00; Telegraph, $662,07; total $604,025.44.

Q. The largest items then in this list of receipts shown by the engineer and superintendent on November, 1861, are the two items of $194,520 and $67,104, are they not?

A. No, sir.

Q. What are the others?

A. Passenger receipts, immediately above that, $206,668.85, and receipts from other freight, below that—

The Master: Does that aggregate all show receipts or is it an aggregate of earnings a part of which have not been received? I see there is an item there of one hundred and sixty odd thousand dollars apparently still due from the Confederate Government and I was wondering whether that was in the earnings.

The Witness: Your Honor, supposing I finish my answer without the interpolation.

The Master: Yes.

A. (Continuing.) Which amount I am not able to state without looking at it on the record, but which will amount to more than the receipts from the transportation of government troops and supplies.

Q. What amount was received as shown by this list from the government? Give me the aggregate of those two items.

A. $261,624.66.

Q. From passengers there was received $206,668, and from freight, $67,104. Those are separate items, but even if they are added together, what do they aggregate, the two?

A. $273,772.85.

Q. What is the difference then between the total passenger and freight receipts and the following items received as shown from the Confederate Government? I will leave out the United States Government—$194,520; $67,104, government freight; $6,108.33 Confederate mail, what is the aggregate of those three items?

A. Will you kindly give me United States mail to go on the other side of the account?

The Master: He has not asked you about that.

Q. Will you kindly answer my question.

The Master: You are anticipating, Mr. Hillman. That does not answer his question. He is asking you the aggregate of these three items; that is all you are called upon to give now. What is the aggregate?

The Witness: $267,732.99.

The Master: That cleans that up.

The Witness: May I be allowed to make a statement?

The Master: If it is responsive to any question that Mr. Harrison has put and explanatory of any answer you have made.

The Witness: It is explanatory.

The Master: If the character of it is right and proper for you to make.

The Witness: It seems so to me; that in the item which I have given of passengers and freight outside of the Confederate Government I have not included the Union, the United States mail, while it is included in the sum which I have given in response to Mr. Harrison's question as the amount.

The Master: That is perfectly obvious from the examination; there is no question about that. You want me to tell you about this particular thing. That is not legitimately explanatory of your answer. I know what you have in mind and you know what the counsel has in his mind, and I appreciate the whole situation, but as a matter of fact that is not an explanation of any answer you have given. It is an argumentative suggestion, perfectly proper from one point of view, but you need not bother yourself about that. The gentlemen sitting at the end of the table will take care of anything of that kind that you want taken care of.

The Witness: Then, will your Honor have the entire matter stricken out.

The Master: You need not have the slightest embarrassment about it, but everything of that kind these people over here will keep watch of, and if there is anything to take care of they will take care of it. There is not the slightest harm in this instance, not the slightest.

The Witness: Will it be stricken out of the record then?

The Master: I do not care whether it goes out or not. If the West Virginia people want it out, let it go out.

Mr. Lilly: Let it stay in. It helps balance.

The Master: Judge Holt and the Attorney General are sitting over here keeping watch of this, and if there is anything dropped in or dropped out that they think wants to be taken care of, it is up to them to attend to it. I would not bother with it if I were you, let them take care of it.

Q. You show on your schedule then as what you call value, book value I presume it is, of this stock, January, 1861, the stock owned by the State on January 1, 1861, at $106.64 a share, aggregating $932,566.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the aggregate amount is $932,566?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You carried that amount into your summary of West Virginia's claim against Virginia, did you not, for 1861?

A. Yes, sir, of items which should be considered in that claim.

Q. As constituting the value of that item as the basis for her claims, is that true or not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you intend that in that connection to be accepted as its true or actual value or are you to be understood now as you testified before recess that you are not undertaking to express any opinion or to give any testimony as to actual value?

A. I put that in there as being what I considered the book value of the stock and not as expressing an opinion as to whether it should be considered as the actual value.

The Master: We will suspend here for five minutes, but before we actually suspend, my attention has been called to the fact that Monday is Labor Day, and then I have in mind the further fact that I suppose most of us in practice are in the habit of having one-half day off Saturday. Everybody at my office takes a holiday Saturday afternoon whether I do or not. I simply wanted to have a little understanding now if I could as to just what we will do in relation to that. So far as I am concerned, I will sit all day Saturday just as we are doing today, and I will also sit Labor Day provided it is agreeable to all concerned.

Mr. Harrison: Entirely agreeable to us.

The Master: Of course you understand that I am consulting the convenience of everybody, but we all want to get through just as fast as we can, so unless there is some objection we will sit all day tomorrow and also sit on Monday precisely the same notwithstanding the fact it is Labor Day, and if there is any public holiday here under which these rooms will be closed on Labor Day I would expect the Attorney General of Virginia or someone representing Virginia to see that this room is kept open for us. Is that agreeable to all concerned?

Mr. Lilly: That is all right for us.

Mr. Hogg: It is very agreeable to this side.

Mr. Harrison: It is entirely agreeable to us.

Mr. Holt: May I at this time, your Honor, ask Mr. Hillman a question, so as not to break in on Mr. Harrison when he starts? It is relevant to this same matter.

The Master: Certainly.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. I will ask you, Mr. Hillman, whether or not in your schedules you considered the earnings of the Orange & Alexandria Railroad Company at all for the year 1861.

A. No, sir, I did not, as is shown on Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, 1863, Asset 1, page No. 8.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. Did I understand you to say that you based your increased values in 1863 on the earnings, in part, the accumulated earnings?

A. Yes, sir, on the accumulated net earnings, meaning by that above all of the operating expenses, interest charges and taxes.

Mr. Holt: What I referred to, Mr. Harrison, was a note on that schedule itself, where that statement is made really. It speaks for itself as a matter of fact.

Q. Where did you get the data from upon which this exhibit is based?

The Master: Do you mean page 8, Brother Harrison?

Mr. Harrison: Yes, page 8.

Q. Is it shown on the exhibit itself? This statement is compiled from a report of the Board of Public Works which you found in the City of Washington, is that correct?

A. Yes, sir, in the Congressional Library at Washington.

Q. Who examined that book and took off the report?

A. Mr. Bray.

The Master: Now, you have developed that fact, and I make this suggestion. Of course I do not know how far the counsel for Virginia may want to follow it, but if they have occasion to pursue the examination of Mr. Bray I would expect the other side to keep Mr. Bray in attendance so that there would not be any delay.

Mr. Holt: He is right here.

The Master: That will apply to all. Wherever the existence of any witness is disclosed, that the other side gives notice that they may want to examine him, you will see that he is here so that no delay will take place.

The Witness: Could I have notice of that a little before hand, as I am compelled to use Mr. Pettijohn, who did some of this work, in Chicago; and Mr. Parsons will be down in Florida a little while; and may I have some notice to get them back?

The Master: I do not know that they will want to call Mr. Bray, but of course it is conceivable that they may want to examine him. But so far as it is feasible, when they develop the fact that the link in the testimony develops the fact that they want some witness other than yourself, I would like to have the counsel for Virginia indicate that they would like to have the party in attendance.

Mr. Harrison: We will do that.

Mr. Lilly: Mr. Bray is the only accountant that examined the records in Washington.

The Master: He is right here, and we can have him at any time. But if any of the others are needed we will give you as much notice as possible. I would expect counsel for Virginia to give at least twenty-four or forty-eight hours' notice.

Mr. Harrison: We will do that.

Mr. Holt: I suppose that Mr. Bray is the only man who would be involved in the examination of any records at a distance. The others would be right here in this town.

The Witness: I want to be sure that you would not consider that I was derelict in my duty, because I have to use my men in other quarters in order to carry on my work.

The Master: Of course you will have to be given proper notice, so that you will have your men here when they are needed. All I am interested in is that we shall have them here when they are needed; I do not want to stop this hearing on account of the absence of one or two witnesses who, with proper and seasonable notice, might have been in attendance.

Q. Now, I would like for you to tell me, please, so that I may get it there in this connection, the value as shown by you of this Orange & Alexandria Railroad Company stock owned by the State in June, 1863, where you show a book value, I think you call it, of $134.25. What does that amount to, that is to say, the total value of the State's holdings at that period, June, 1863?

A. $1,140,566.62.

Q. That is an increase in value over January, 1861, of how much?

A. $207,999.82.

Q. Did you examine to ascertain what the market quotations of that Orange & Alexandria stock were in the City of Richmond, either in January, 1861, or June, 1863?

A. No, sir, I did not.

Q. And you have no information on that subject, have you?

A. No, sir.

Mr. Holt: If you will permit me, Mr. Harrison, I will state that we have another accountant who has probably made those examinations.

Q. Now, in the matter of the Richmond & Danville Railroad Company, what do you find as a total par value of the stock for the year 1856?

A. $1,975,040.

Q. Is that amount correct?

A. Yes, sir.

By The Master :

Q. What sheet are you referring to?

A. Exhibit No. 3, Asset No. 2.

Q. Page what?

A. Page 13 of the printed book.

Mr. Holt: That is an exhibit for the year 1861 and has been printed.

Mr. Anderson: That is Exhibit No. 3, page 13, volume 1 of this record.

The Master: I have that all right. I was tracing up on the blue prints for 1863.

The Witness: Page 19, your Honor, of the present record.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. On what do you rely for that statement?

A. On Document No. 17.

Q. What page?

A. 622-23.

Q. I observe that on that page the amount of the stock is stated to be, the total subscription is stated to be $2,000,000, and unpaid $24,980, leaving $1,975.020, as the amount instead of $1,975,040, as you have it.

A. That may be, but my record on that happens to read unpaid, $24,960. It may have been an error in checking it off which would make an error of $20, in outstanding stock.

The Master: Do you concede it to have been such an error?

The Witness: No, sir, not without examination of the document.

The Master: Take the document right there. Let us clean that right up when we are on it. We might just as well settle these matters as we go along. Look at it and see just exactly what you concede is right. It is a simple matter to be sure but we may as well clean it up.

The Witness: It will be $1,975.020.

The Master: Instead of $1,975.040.

The Witness: Yes, sir.

Mr. Holt: That was the point of my inquiry this morning, your Honor. The understanding was, as I understand it at least, that in the checking between Mr. Potter and Mr. Holt, that whenever Mr. Potter discovered anything of that kind it would be arranged between them, and not come in here and inflict it upon us here. Mr. Potter appears here with his checks for the first time it seems. We supposed it was mutual.

The Master: I cannot control that very well.

Mr. Holt: I know you cannot, but I am simply calling attention to it. We have done our best to obey your request.

Mr. Harrison: And as far as we are concerned we can say the same thing, we have done our best to obey your request.

Mr. Holt: My point is, if Mr. Potter discovered a mistake of $20 in checking up with Mr. Hillman, he did not call Mr. Hillman's attention to it, but comes in here to correct it with a long rigamarole of evidence.

Q. In the case of Orange & Alexandria you use in some instances the amount subscribed and in other instances the amount paid in as a basis for what you call your book value. Which method did you apply in regard to the Richmond & Danville?

A. In 1856 I applied the amount paid in.

Q. And in 1860?

A. The amount paid in.

Q. You show, do you not, the book value of this Danville stock in 1860 to be $137.37?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that intended to represent the book value as of January 1, 1861?

A. No, sir, on September 30, 1860, the nearest date we have.

Q. Then it is the only book value which you have introduced with reference to 1861, is it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it is used for that purpose to represent its value as of that date?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, how did you arrive at that, by the same method that you arrived at the book value of the Orange & Alexandria Railroad?

A. Yes, sir, adding the profits each year above operating expenses, taxes, interest and dividends to the last trial balance profit which could be determined.

The Master: You mean trial balance surplus?

The Witness: Surplus, yes, sir, which could be determined.

Q. Have you any knowledge of the Richmond & Danville stock, its value, whether book or otherwise, except what you have derived from the volume called Document No. 17, which we have been using here?

A. No, sir.

Q. And your figures are based upon what you found in that document?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You took the profits, the alleged profits, the alleged profits as shown in that volume as a basis for determining book value, did you not?

A. Yes, sir, I took the profits as shown in that volume as the basis.

Q. I notice on your exhibit you took $79,247.90 as a dividend paid in 1860.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was it paid?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did you find that?

A. From Document No. 17, dividend 4 per cent.

Q. Will you refer me to the page in that report wherein it states that that dividend was paid?

A. I cannot do so without reference to the report.

Q. I hand you the report.

A. I fail to find it there.

The Master: If you cannot find it right away, why, come in in the morning and show where it is. We do not want to stop to have him look these books over. I will give you all the opportunity to test his recollection, but we cannot wait ten or fifteen minutes.

Mr. Lilly: I would like to suggest, your Honor, without any intended criticism of the gentlemen on the other side, that these schedules were furnished two weeks ago, and we have helped their accountant to check up these matters, and if there was a mistake in the dividend, if it was improperly there, it seems to me in fairness to us it ought to have been pointed out before now, and not wait to come in here now at this time and delay the record. Of course if they want to pursue that, all right, but I think it would have been better to have acted differently.

Mr. Harrison: Mr. Pollard informs me that he pointed this out to Mr. Hillman's assistant in his absence.

The Witness: I can settle the matter right now and state where it was derived from.

The Master: If it is necessary, I am going to give either side the full opportunity, but if it is necessary to make an examination during a hearing they can make it during the intermission and come in and state it later. Now you say you are ready on that point?

The Witness: Yes, sir. Journal D. folio 5, Board of Public Works, State of Virginia, shows December 15, 1859, Richmond & Danville Railroad dividend of four per cent., due December 1, 1859. Finding that this was paid upon the stock belonging to the State, we have deducted from our profits four per cent. on the entire capitalization of the Richmond & Danville Road for the year September 30, 1860, in order to be on the safe side, finding that a dividend had been paid to the State we have assumed that it had been paid to all stockholders, and have deducted it.

By The Master :

Q. That is, in order to reach your result as to profits on which you predicate your book value, is that what you mean?

A. Yes, sir.

The Master: My only suggestion is this when we reach something which requires time in investigation, the witness will simply have to state that he cannot on the spot answer that question but will answer it later. I cannot stop here for ten or fifteen minutes to have a search made. This is not a criticism upon Mr. Hillman, of course, because it is an absolute impossibility for a man to keep all these things at the ends of his fingers, to answer right off the bat. My idea is that when you come to something that you cannot answer right off you will simply have to say that you will do it later. Is that all right, Mr. Harrison?

Mr. Harrison: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. Do I understand you now, in your explanation, to assume that the same dividend was paid in 1860 that was paid in 1859?

A. No, sir.

Q. Well, your answer seemed to relate to the year 1859, while my question related to the year 1860.

A. The date which I mentioned, December 1, 1859, is included in the fiscal year which we have under discussion which ends September 30, 1860.

Q. Is there any evidence to show that this dividend was paid?

A. Yes, sir, I have just quoted it.

Q. What do you say?

A. I have just quoted it, Journal B, page 5, Department of Public Works—

Q. Do not repeat those things any more, they are just really unnecessarily consuming time. If that is what you really rely upon I will ask you to bring it in at your convenience.

The Master: Bring it in in the morning. We won't spend any more time on that. The understanding is that Mr. Hillman is to produce in the morning the original entry that you are now testifying about, that is if the book is here where you can reach it. I suppose it is here, is it not?

Mr. Harrison: Yes, sir.

The Master: In the morning bring it in, the first thing, the original entry, so that we can check it.

Q. Did you find, in this document, upon which you rely for the statements which you have prepared and introduced here, any evidence of any allowance for depreciation in the case of the Richmond & Danville Railroad Company?

A. No, sir.

Q. Or in the case of the Orange & Alexandria?

A. I found no specific instance of an allowance for depreciation.

By The Master:

Q. Do you find anything on the books tending to show whether or not renewals were charged into operating expenses or charged to construction costs or was your examination negative in that respect?

A. Entirely negative, your Honor, simply taking the operating expenses which they had expressed upon the record. I made no examination further.

Mr. Harrison: We have here the documents from which these exhibits were prepared and we want to submit them to your Honor so that you can see for yourself just what they show.

The Master: That would come along when you are putting in your case in chief, or, so far as I am concerned it is perfectly agreeable to me to have everything of that sort come along in the order of cross-examination.

Mr. Holt: In so far as it is evidence in chief, I would rather they would carry the books than we would have to bring them out.

Mr. Harrison: The books have already been referred to by the defendant and its case founded upon them, and our friends said in the beginning that they would produce them if they were desired. Now, I do not see why they want to repudiate the books.

The Master: I do not understand that they do.

Mr. Holt: The only point is this, your Honor and Mr. Harrison, that in so far as it is legitimate for cross-examination it is perhaps up to us to bring them in if you request them, but in so far as it may constitute an examination in chief we do not feel called upon to bring them, that is, if you are going to introduce such books. We thought, coming back to what I said before, that these two accountants had been directed by the Master to compare notes and if either found a mistake in the other's calculations or reference, to call the other's attention to it and only present to the court an admittedly correct statement. If they would get together on that it would save a great deal of time. That was your suggestion in the first place.

The Master: Or if there was a disagreement as to an item, to call my attention to the item.

Mr. Holt: Yes, bring it to you.

The Master: That was in a general way the understanding. Of course they can develop their case on cross-examination in their own way, even under that arrangement; but before we conclude tonight I was going to see how far we could tie up some of these schedules on that basis, before we adjourn. Of course the object of that suggestion and that arrangement was not to embarrass either side to the controversy, but it was to facilitate results.

Mr. Harrison: I am passing for the time being the inquiry that I was upon just now about the payment of that dividend until the book can be brought in upon which reliance is placed. I do not mean for it to be sent for now unless it is convenient. If you can get it, then all right.

The Witness: It is in the building and we can lay hands on it in one moment.

Mr. Harrison: I am going to wait for that.

The Master: I am not going to wait for those things, I do not mean a minute or two minutes, but I am not going to have long delays waiting for details of that sort, because I won't have the hearing prolonged that way.

Q. What do you show the book value as described in the Richmond & Danville stock in June, 1863?

A. $162.27.

Q. That then is an increase over 1861 of $24.90 a share, is it not?

The Master: $21.99 is the way I have it. Page 12, Brother Harrison, that I have shows, 1861, book value, $141.28, and 1863, $162.27.

Mr. Harrison: $137.37 is shown.

The Witness: Your Honor, he is referring to the value that we used in January 1, 1861, which was of September 30, 1860. Your Honor is looking at September 30, 1861.

The Master: Oh, I see, yes.

A. Yes, sir, $24.90 increase per share.

Q. What do you show the total value of the State's holdings of the Richmond & Danville to be on January 1, 1861, at $137.37 a share?

A. $1,632,777.76 as shown by page 13 of the Defendant's Exhibits in this case.

Q. And the total value of the State's holdings, June 20, 1863, to be how much?

A. $1,928,738.79 as shown on Defendant's Exhibit No. 2, 1863, page 7.

Q. Being an increase over 1861 of how much?

A. $295,961.03.

Q. And that amount you carried in as representing whatever value the document shows that you relied upon in your summary of West Virginia's claims for 1863, did you not?

A. Yes, sir.

The Master: Now, I notice the witness has produced this entry, and I suggest that you put it right in now so as to have it as near as possible at the place you inquire about. Have you submitted it to the inspection of Mr. Harrison?

Mr. Harrison: Yes, it has been submitted to us.

The Witness: Shall I read the entry, your Honor?

The Master: Yes, read it into the record.

The Witness: (Reading.) John S. Calvert, Treasurer of the Commonwealth, to sundries, dr. "Amongst these sundries are, under date of December 16, 1859, Richmond & Danville Railroad Company dividend of four per cent., as of December, 1859, $17,543.94; and on December 21st, the same in part, ditto, ditto, $10,000, showing that it was made in two payments.

Q. What is the total of the two entries you have given?

A. $27,543.94.

Q. My question related to the deduction of the dividend of $79,247.90 for the year 1860. As I understand it you have referred to entries where two items appear aggregating some $27,000, being a four per cent. dividend paid in 1859, paid in December, 1859. I do not see the connection between the two.

A. If the State received a dividend of four per cent. upon stock, and the books of the State of Virginia show the receipt of four per cent. during the fiscal year in question, of four per cent. upon its stock, it is but reasonable to presume that the road paid to all of its stockholders four per cent. on its stock and therefore the amount has been calculated at four per cent. on the total outstanding stock and deducted from the net earnings.

By The Master:

Q. That calculation results in this $79,000 that you speak of, is that what you mean?

A. I mean that the total—

Q. Mr. Harrison's inquiry is as to a specific sum that seems to have been paid in dividends. What he wants to know is how you got at that, and if I understand it right you ascertained that result by finding that there was upon these books as a matter of original entry a dividend of four per cent. made on the stock of the State of Virginia. You assumed that the same dividend was made on the whole capital stock, and you computed the dividend on the whole capital stock at the rate of four per cent, which produced this result of $79,000?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that what you mean?

A. Yes, sir.

The Master: That is the situation, is it?
Mr. Harrison: Yes.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. Then you did not find any entry showing the payment of $79,000 for the year 1859 or the year 1860 either?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, it seems that this payment we are talking about relates to the year 1859, that you are talking about, so far as the receipts you have produced, in the dates, the year 1859. The dividend about which I am inquiring, as shown by your exhibit, is for the year 1860. Your exhibit shows that in 1859 a four per cent. dividend of $79,239.90 was paid. Your exhibit also shows that in 1860 a dividend of $79,247.90 was paid. Now what I have asked you for was to show the evidence of the payment of the dividend of 1860 and not the dividend of 1859.

The Master : That is, what do you find on the books that justifies you in stating upon your exhibit that there was a four per cent. dividend in 1860, is that not it, Mr. Harrison?

Mr. Harrison : Yes, sir, that it was paid, that there was any payment of that dividend as this purports to read.

The Witness: The journal entry which I have just quoted distinctly states that the dividend was due December 1, 1859, which date is included in the fiscal year which we have under discussion, which reaches from September 30, 1859, to September 30, 1860, and therefore that four per cent. must have been paid during the year which we have under discussion, and therefore was deducted from the total receipts of this year.

By The Master:

Q. Well, you do not find any specific entry of any $79,000 having been paid in dividends by anybody or to anybody, is not that true?

A. That is true.

Q. The dividend is the result of a computation?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Holt: As I understand it, if your Honor will permit me, it is this—

Mr. Harrison: Judge, I would much rather the witness would testify.

Mr. Holt: I am not going to testify.

Mr. Harrison: I would like to continue my examination.

Mr. Holt: I was undertaking to make a statement before you continued.

The Master: I understand strictly speaking that is the rule.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. Did you examine the president's report for that year, September 30, 1859 and 1860, of the Richmond & Danville Railroad Company, in document No. 17, page 421?

A. Yes, sir, the particulars I did.

Q. He quotes in his report as follows, "Both the financial condition of the country and of the company in the opinion of the board make it unwise to declare a dividend at this time, but they trust at no distant date to declare semi-annual dividends of two per cent."

The Master: What is the date of the report?

Mr. Harrison: Ending September 30, 1859 and 1860, that is the way it is headed. I take it for granted it is for that year. It says for the year 1859 and the year 1860. The report itself is not dated, except with that caption, but it starts with that year.

The Master: The necessary inference is that it relates to the year after 1860.

Q. Is not that inconsistent with your statement, your assumption that a dividend was paid in 1860?

A. Not in the slightest.

Q. It it not?

A. No, sir.

Q. What is your authority now for saying that a dividend was paid in 1860 of $79,247?

A. An entry on the books of the State of Virginia where, on December 16th, and December 21, 1859, both dates being within the current fiscal year which we are examining, that they received a four per cent. dividend upon the stock which they owned in the Richmond, and Danville Railroad Company, and further the assumption is that the State did not receive any dividends on its stock unless the dividend was declared upon the stock generally, and therefore that four per cent. was declared during this fiscal year upon the entire capital stock of the company.

Q. Well, now, will you be good enough to give me your authority for saying that a dividend was paid in 1859, also, of $79,239.90?

Mr. Lilly: Is not that just what you have asked, Mr. Harrison?

Mr. Harrison: I was asking about 1860.

The Master: There are two years on the exhibit, one for 1859 and one for 1860. And Mr. Harrison wants to find out what he predicates his 1859 statement on. Am I right about that?

Mr. Harrison: Yes, sir.

The Witness: Your Honor, may I look at document 17 again, of 1859?

The Master: Yes, certainly, but if it is going to take much time we will not wait. If you can find it in just a few minutes all right, but we cannot have any more ten minutes' wait.

Q. Where does it show it?

A. It shows the declaration of the 1859 dividend.

Q. Does that show payment?

A. No, sir.

Q. And how is it declared, how is the declaration shown? Are you relying upon what the president said in his report for your statement?

A. Yes, sir, I thought that was sufficient: I did not look further through the report to see if it is on the cash.

The Master: Suppose you suspend further answer to that question and between now and to-morrow morning you examine such original data as is open to you and then tell us whether there is anything in addition to that report of the president upon which you rely as the basis of that statement. That will take care of that. You need not stop to look that over any more now. Come in in the morning with it.

Q. You evidently have not examined this question before yourself, but are depending on the examination made by others, is that true?

A. No, sir.

Q. Have you examined before to see whether these dividends were paid?

The Witness: Page 456, Document No. 17, 1859, Board of Public Works report, State of Virginia, state—I am quoting now—"And the generally prosperous condition of its affairs in the opinion of the Board justifies the declaring of a dividend of four per cent. upon the capital stock of the company. This dividend in the aggregate amounts to nearly $80,000."

The Master: What is the date of it?

The Witness: From the president's report. The report is not dated. It was subscribed and sworn to by the treasurer and superintendent on the 29th day of November, 1859, as shown on page 458.

Q. Does that show payment?

A. I say that the report was subscribed and sworn to on that date.

Q. I ask you now if you have shown two payments of $79,239.90 and $79,247.90 respectively for the years 1859 and 1860.

A. Yes, sir, I think so.

Q. You think so?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it is shown by what you have read from this document just now, does that show payment of the 1859 dividend?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Your first reference was to the document book.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were corrected and reminded if there was any record at all it was in another book, were you not?

A. No, sir. I went to that other book of my own volition. I will state that I had used every source that I could to determine any charges against the income of these roads, and when I found a reference to the charge—to the income of the road I have deducted it from that income so as to be sure that I was deducting every item that could possibly be legally or properly deducted from it, and that is the reason why the four per cent. was taken in 1859 from the declaration of the president that it had been declared and that the four per cent. was taken in 1860 from the records of the State of Virginia showing that they had received a dividend December 31, 1859, which fell in the 1860 fiscal year.

Q. According to that then it would be a payment of a dividend nine months before it was due, would it not?

A. No, sir, not at all.

Mr. Holt: Your Honor will perceive right there that even if that other dividend had not been declared and paid it makes it all the worse for us, because he has actually deducted two dividends when he should have only deducted one.

Mr. Harrison: I was not addressing my inquiry on that subject with reference to the effect it would have on the State of Virginia or West Virginia, but to show the accuracy of this account.

Mr. Holt: That may be true, but wherever we err, if err we do, it is on the safe side in ascertaining book value, that is my point.

The Master: I understand its effect.

Mr. Holt: Of course you are not interested in Virginia any more than you are in West Virginia, I know that of course.

Mr. Harrison: I am actuated by avaricious motives altogether.

Q. You have no information in respect to the value of this stock at either date, January, 1861, or June, 1863, except what you obtained in this document No. 17? You may have answered that, I may have perhaps asked you that question, but I have forgotten it and I want to be sure that I have got it in.

A. Yes, sir; I have been able in this case to construct an incomplete trial balance of the Richmond & Danville Road on September 30, 1860, which I consider rather as indicative than actual.

Q. What did you construct it from?

A. From Document No. 17.

Q. Did you examine to see if you could ascertain what the market value of any of these stocks was in January or June, 1861, or 1863?

A. No, sir, I did not.

Mr. Holt: Do you mean by that market quotations?

Mr. Harrison: Yes, sir, I mean market quotations.

The Witness: Your Honor, I am now prepared to answer the question concerning dividends of four per cent. on the Richmond & Danville stock in 1859 and 1860. The answer is that this dividend was declared in 1859 payable in the fiscal year ending September 30, 1860, and that therefore there was but one dividend in the fiscal years 1859 and 1860, and that in order to be on the safe side in determining these earnings I have, as I said before, deducted it from both years so as not to over state it.

Mr. Lilly: That would increase the surplus $79,000, wouldn't it?

The Witness: It would, yes, sir.

The Master: If it was not deducted.

Mr. Lilly: But he deducted it for two years and he said it was only declared for one year.

The Master: If he had not deducted it it would have increased the surplus, but he has deducted it, so that diminished the surplus.

Mr. Lilly: What I mean to say is this, that having deducted it, that would entitle us to increase the surplus $79,000 or increase the book value of that road.

The Master: It would if you corrected it upon the assumption that there was only one dividend to be deducted.

By The Master:

Q. Do I understand that you deducted two dividends from one year's value?

A. No, sir, one for the year 1859 and one for 1860.

Q. They did not declare them for both years. If the 1859 dividend had not been declared I suppose there would have been that much more in profit and loss account.

A. I find that the dividend which the president spoke of as being declared in 1859 was declared payable in 1860. Finding the declaration in 1859 I deducted it from my 1859 net earnings. Finding the payment on the books of the State as December 1, 1859, included in the next year, in order to be on the safe side I also deducted from that year so as not to over state my surplus.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. In reference to the Richmond & Petersburg Railroad Company, will you please state what you ascertained to be the book value of the State's holding of that stock on January 1, 1861—I mean the book value of that stock on January 1, 1861?

A. $121.86.

Q. $121.86 a share?

A. Yes, sir.

Q The total amount of the State's holdings in that company were what of stock, at that time?

A. $385,600.

Q. That is the par value?

A. The par value.

The Witness: Your Honor, this is shown on page 13 of the current record in the exhibits.

Q. You ascertained the book value of that stock in the same manner that you did the previous railroad stocks that we have been inquiring about?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And relying upon the same book, Document 17 of the Board of Public Works?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have no knowledge of the value of that stock other than you derived from that book?

A. No, sir, I have not.

Q. And your book value there was based upon the profits as shown in the source of information on which you relied?

A. Yes, sir, the profits added to the profit and loss account on the last trial balance.

Q. Now what did you show to be the book value of the Richmond & Petersburg stock in June, 1863?

A. $141.24, as shown on Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, 1863 page No. 15.

Q. That is an increase of $19.39 a share, is it not, over 1861?

The Master: I have it here page No. 7. That contains the recapitulation. It is the same thing, I suppose.

Mr. Hogg: Page 15 is the one that he is looking at.

The Master: Well, that is identical with the other page.

The Witness: It is the sub-exhibit, your Honor.

Q. (Question repeated.)

A. $19.38 over September 30, 1860.

Q. Well that makes a total increase then in June, 1863, over January 1, 1861, in the State's holdings of this stock, how much?

A. $74,729.28.

Q. Did you rely upon Document No. 17 for your statement of the value of this stock in June, 1863, as you did in January, 1861?

A. Yes, sir, it is the same report, but I see it is noted as document 15 in that year, on file in Washington, D. C., Congressional Library.

Q. And your testimony is based exclusively on whatever information you derived from that book?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you have carried those items respectively in your summaries for 1861 and 1863 as constituting a claim on the part of West Virginia, have you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I presume in this case, as in others, you found no evidence of any allowances being made for depreciation?

A. I found none; I looked for none.

Mr. Harrison: We can suspend here.

The Master: Perhaps on account of the suggestions that have been made I had better make this inquiry, whether or not Mr. Potter has had the opportunity to check up these '63 schedules with the accountants on the other side and if so whether they have been checked up.

Mr. Potter: The calculations are being checked now. Most of them are finished.

The Master: Will there be any objection—of course I do not want to make any suggestion that will embarrass either side, but after Mr. Potter completes his checking up will there be any objection to his notifying the other side as to what items he disagrees with them on, so that we may confine any controversy there may be to those items?

Mr. Harrison: I do not suppose there would be any objection to that. Mr. Potter can explain.

Mr. Potter: I would like to make a little explanation. The gentlemen on the other side seem to feel that I have not acted in good faith in this matter. I have. I have been in constant touch with Mr. Leeds, in Mr. Hillman's absence. Mr. Leeds made the same explanation that Mr. Hillman has since made , and I knew of it on the 24th of August, and I so noted it in my record. And it was not changed in the final schedule, so I had no choice in bringing these matters before the attorneys. It is not up to me to say what will be presented here or discussed. That is the item of $79,000 of dividends.

The Master: In the other item of $20.—

Mr. Potter: I cannot say that I remember that particular item, but there are a great many items that we have gotten together and agreed on.

The Master: The understanding is that you will pursue your investigations and checking, and as to the items that you are not able to agree on, why those can be reported to me and I will pass on them. Otherwise, everything is all cleaned up. If I understand it correctly, Mr. Harrison, no question is raised as to the accuracy of the schedules and the supporting schedules submitted by Mr. Hillman with reference to items 1, 2 and 3, which have been examined about this afternoon and found on page No. 7; that is, the Orange & Alexandria Railroad Company, the Richmond & Danville Railroad Company and the Richmond & Petersburg Railroad Company. That is, it is conceded that the items are accurately expressed and that the computations are accurately made as to those three items in the schedules and the supporting schedules. Am I right about that?

Mr. Harrison: I understand from Mr. Potter that the figures and the calculations as far as he has checked them, are correct. We have no idea of making any question about them, because if we found any error in the calculations, why, we would have it made right. But on those lines that your Honor suggested, so as to limit any controversy as to whether the calculations are right, why I have no question on earth that we will be able to agree on that.

The Master: That cleans up those three items. As to the other items, if disagreements are developed, the accountants will do the best they can to get together on them, and if they do not get together on them I will pass on them. With that suggestion we will adjourn until to-morrow morning at 10 o'clock.

Adjourned to September 5, 1914, at 10 A. M.

BEFORE THE MASTER.

Richmond, Va., September 5th, 1914.

Present, the same counsel who appeared on yesterday.

The Master: You had completed, as I understand it, Mr. Harrison, items 1, 2 and 3 of page 7. Are you ready to proceed?

Mr. Harrison: Yes, sir.

Continuation of the cross-examination of

CONWAY W. HILLMAN.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. Mr. Hillman, please state what amount of stock you show on your exhibit, Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, page 13, was owned by the State of Virginia on the 1st day of January, 1861, in the Virginia Central Railroad.

A. $1,927,382.57, in a side note in brackets after the amount $1,891,670.68. I notice that in the print that $1,927,382.57 is out of line. I had not noticed it before.

The Master: The type is distributed on that. Of course that is no particular harm, but at the same time you can see how that would immediately give rise to confusion.

Q. What do you show the book value of that stock to be on the 1st of January, 1861?

A. $131.16 per share of $100.

Q. What sum did you charge to Virginia at $131.16 per share, as shown by your exhibit?

A. $2,481,115.26.

Q. What sum did you multiply by 1.3116 to reach that result?

A. $1,891,670.68.

Q. What significance then have the figures in brackets to which you have referred, of $1,927,382.57?

A. To identify the amount of stock owned by the State of Virginia in the Virginia Central, so as to connect it with the amount upon which I had calculated its value on the book value basis.

Q. But those figures do not enter into your calculation, do they?

The Master: I do not quite understand that question. What Mr. Harrison wants to know is what the significance of $1,927,382.57 is, and I think you would make that plainer if you would state in the first place just exactly what that is and what you got it from, and then make your distinction if you have any distinction. I do not understand your answer.

The Witness: Folio 185 of Ledger B, Internal Improvement Fund, shows that on January 1, 1861, the cost value of the Virginia Central Stock held by the State of Virginia was $1,927,382.57.

Mr. Harrison: Let him answer my last question in that connection.

The Witness: And the amount put in brackets upon page 13 of the exhibits in this case is to identify the amount of this stock so that it can readily be traced upon the books of Virginia as well as upon the statement which shows the final settlement of this stock. In short, it is for identification purposes only that it is entered here.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. (Question repeated).

A. No, sir, they do not.

Q. The figures $1,891,670.68 which are extended under your column of values at 131.16 represents what?

A. The amount of the subscription of the State.

Q. As of what date?

A. As of September 30th, 1860.

Q. To the capital stock of this road?

A. To the capital stock of the Virginia Central.

Q. And the figures that are enclosed in brackets which do not enter into your calculation, namely, $1,927,382.57, represent for identification what?

A. The amount of the subscription or paid subscription to the Virginia Central stock by the State of Virginia on January 1, 1861, three months later.

Q. Why did you not extend those figures at the price per share?

A. For the reason that the price per share had to be determined of the date of September 30th, 1860, and therefore, having determined the book value of that date, we applied it to the subscription of that date, as further subscriptions to the stock would upset the book value by having a larger divisor into the surplus.

By the Master:

Q. Do I understand that on September 30th, 1860, the State of Virginia had subscribed and paid for stock to the amount of $1,891,670.68, and that on January 1, 1861, it had subscribed and paid for stock to the amount of $1,927,382.57, is that the fact?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How does it happen, I suppose these shares are $100 par value, are they not? I don't quite understand how you get the odd figures in subscribing and paying for stock, particularly if it is subscribed and paid for at par; for instance, you get $70.68 in one aggregate and $82.57 in another aggregate, and neither one of those can represent a share of stock. What I would like to know is if there is any explanation on the books how that irregular number appears there, if it is predicated upon a definite number of shares and the payment thereof.

A. Yes, sir, there is an explanation, and it is this, that the subscriptions to the stock were taken in in installments, and, as the public, the general public, would subscribe and pay an installment the State would then pay a proportional amount to public subscriptions on its account.

Q. Now do you mean that that was true even where it resulted in the fractional part of a share?

A. Yes, sir.

The Master: That is all right then, I understand it. If that is the explanation that makes it clear.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. Do you mean by the explanation that you have given that you had no means of ascertaining the book value of this stock on January 1st, 1861, and that for that reason you took the book value of September 30th, 1860, and based your calculation on the amount subscribed, as of that date, September 30th, 1860?

A. Yes, sir.

By the Master:

Q. Then this item is not exactly in harmony with your heading on the schedule. Your schedule says par at the opening of business on January 1st, 1861, and it now develops that this was September 30th, 1860. Am I right about that?

A. Yes, sir, you are.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. Did you not find the total value of the Richmond & Danville stock by multiplying the stock paid in under January 1st, 1861, by the book value which you ascertained as of September 30th, 1860?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then you apply a different method in relation to the Richmond & Danville from that that you now apply in the matter of the Virginia Central, do you not?

A. No, sir, for the subscription to the Richmond & Danville Railroad stock was the same on both dates, September 30th, 1860, and January 1st, 1861.

Q. Now did you arrive at the book value of the Virginia Central road by the same method that you arrived at the book value of the stock held by the State in the other roads that you have testified about?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did you rely upon the same source of information?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Namely, the book referred to as Document No. 17?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Which book contains the annual reports of the officers of the road, does it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You ascertained the value then on the basis of income and expenses as shown by those reports, did you not?

A. Income and expenses after September 30th, 1856, yes, sir.

Q. No allowance was made by those reports for depreciation, was there?

A. That I am totally unable to answer, whether there was or was not.

By the Master:

Q. Well you can state whether or not the reports so far as you saw them showed any allowance for depreciation, I suppose?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is the fact in that regard?

A. As far as the reports go there was no entry on them under the heading of depreciation.

Q. That is consistent with your statement the other day that so far as you were able to ascertain from either reports or books that there had never been anything charged off to depreciation so far as you knew?

A. That is correct.

Q. So far as the reports go they show no direct charge to depreciation?

Mr. Lilly: As I understood, he did not know but what it was included in some of these items.

The Master: All he could say was that so far as his examination went, both as to the reports and the account, nothing appeared in there that showed that no charge had been made, or as far as he was concerned had not been made.

Q. The books and the records were entirely negative on that proposition, is not that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that I take it applies to all of these railroad accounts?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Holt: I have understood the statement of the witness heretofore to have been, which is the same thing, that there was no specific charge on that subject in any of these railroad accounts.

The Master: I understand. In other words if that was the issue they do not contain any evidence of it one way or the other, simply leave us to speculation.

Mr. Holt: That is it exactly.

The Master: That is the way I understand it.

Mr. Holt: So do I.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. Your testimony in relation to this stock value is based wholly upon the annual reports as found in this document No. 17, is it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you intend the value to which you have testified, based on the reports of these officers as of January 1st, 1861, to be taken as your opinion as to their value?

A. No, sir, I do not. I have made the statement in the record quite frequently that I am determining as far as possible the book values of these stocks as of the date of January 1, 1861, or the nearest date to that which was available; further than that I have not testified.

Q. Now, referring to Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, Asset No. 4, page 25 of the printed record, you show that this stock held by the State in the Virginia Central Railway was disposed of on various dates for a sum total of $241,858.50, which appears from that exhibit to have been paid in 1888 and 1890. Was that the total amount received by the State for that stock at those dates?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. On your exhibit I see you have taken 95 & 7-10ths per cent. of that total amount received by the State. What is the significance of that?

A. As shown by this page 25 which we are examining, there were invested after January 1, 1861, five items in the stock of this road bringing the total up to $2,013,987.52, and $1,927,382.57 is 95 & 7-10ths per cent. of this. I have therefore percented according to the amount of the investment on January 1, 1861, the total amount received for all of the stock purchased both before and after 1861.

Q. What use is made of that per cent. as shown on your exhibit?

A. It is applied to the total receipts for the stock of $241,858.50 and equals $231,458.58.

Q. Is that the amount then properly chargeable against Virginia, is that what you intended it for?

A. Yes, sir, if this is considered the basis upon which a charge should be made to Virginia.

By the Master:

Q. You mean January 1, 1861, is considered the basis, is that what you mean by that?

A. No, sir; I mean that if the total receipts for the stock, that is the total amount realized on the stock eventually, is considered the basis of the charge, that $231,458.58 is the amount which should be considered in determining West Virginia's claim as of the date of January 1, 1861.

Q. That is, if Virginia is to be charged on the basis of what she actually received, rather than on the basis of value on a certain date, why this should be the basis of the charge?

A. Yes.

Q. It is simply a calculation made to meet that contingency?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. Now, turn to your 1863 schedules of the Virginia Central Railroad.

The Master: What sheet page is that?

Mr. Harrison: Page No. 7 of the blueprints.

Mr. Lilly: The underlying page would be 17.

Q. You take as the par of the stock owned by Virginia on the 20th of June, 1863, $2,013,987.52. That represents the total amount as of that date?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have under the heading book value $164.61. Was that intended to represent the book value of that stock, and if so as of what date?

A. That represents the value upon the nearest date, September 30th, 1863.

Q. According to your exhibit this stock had increased in value from January 1st, 1861, to September 30th, 1863, how much per share?

A. $33.45 per share of $100.

Q. And the total amount extended by you as representing the value of this stock, under the column value June 20th, 1863, is how much?

A. $3,315,224.86.

The Master: It occurs to me that I am going to give the printer this instruction; I am going to instruct him to print for me two extra copies of these schedules separately from the record.

Mr. Anderson: We had that done before to the great convenience of everybody.

Mr. Holt: We would like four copies for West Virginia.

The Master: There may be fifty copies made.

Q. Then according to your figures this stock had increased in value from January 1, 1861—I mean the States interest in this stock—to June 20th, 1863, or rather to September 30th, 1863, $834,-109.60, had it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Your testimony in relation to the value of this stock as of September 30th, 1863, I understand is based upon the reports of the officers of the road as you have heretofore testified?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And which are found in the Board of Public Works' records bound volumes numbered 17, etc.?

A. I believe the numbers on those volumes in Washington is 15, not 17, document 15 and not 17, and it is noted on the stub sheets.

Q. Based I intended to say upon the same data.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Those reports did not undertake to state the value of the stock, but you have used the figures shown there to reach this result, have you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And this is put in by you for what it is worth as showing value without intending to be an expression of your opinion on that subject?

A. I have expressed no opinion on that subject.

Mr. Holt: Mr. Harrison, before you begin another question, it was our object in the examination in chief during the time Mr. Hillman was here to ask him, and we believe we did, whether these exhibits do not in each instance indicate book, document, volume and page of all the sources of his information. It was our purpose to make the exhibit show just what his entire source of information was.

Mr. Hogg: You want to propound that question to him now.

Mr. Holt: We propounded it to him a hundred times.

The Master: I think it will be understood that the question was asked as often as was necessary in order to complete the proof on the part of West Virginia. It is so understood by the Master and by both parties to the controversy.

Mr. Lilly: With that in view, it looks as if the cross-examination might—just a slight suggestion—be relieved somewhat.

The Master: I cannot instruct the other side how they shall cross-examine.

Mr. Lilly: I appreciate that.

The Master: Although I have made that suggestion two or three times. And of course I cannot be expected at this stage to comment on it. It is quite a familiar right of cross-examination that the fellow on the other side has the right to have the same facts stated under his cross-examination that the other fellow had if he wants it.

Mr. Holt: It may be introductory to something else.

The Master: Mr. Harrison is within his rights.

Mr. Holt: We are not criticizing Mr. Harrison.

Mr. Harrison: I understand.

The Master: There is no serious suggestion to the contrary. What Mr. Lilly meant was that he did not know but what you might make a little more rapid progress by eliminating some part of it, but that was rather an expression of a wish than a criticism.

Mr. Harrison: I do not think that involves over two questions anyhow, and they are very quickly answered.

Q. Now in respect to the stock which you have just been testifying about, Virginia Central, Mr. Hillman, have you made any investigation to ascertain the market quotations of this stock at the period about which you are testifying.

The Master: In connection with any of these roads.

Q. In connection either with this stock, that is to say the Virginia Central, or any of the railway stocks about which you have testified in this case.

A. No, sir, I have made no investigation as to the market value or quotations.

Q. And the data upon which you based your figures to ascertain the book value of the Virginia Central stock were silent, or contained nothing as to whether or not anything had been charged off for depreciation?

A. That is correct.

Q. I call your attention to a heading, disposed of for, on your 1863 exhibit, page No. 7. What are those figures under that heading intended to represent?

A. They are intended to represent the amount finally realized by the State of Virginia for the securities in question.

Q. Opposite the Virginia Central Railway you have $241,858.50, instead of 95.7 per cent. of that sum which you have testified represented the amount for which her holdings were disposed on January 1st, 1861—I should say which was the percentage of the amount with which you said Virginia should be charged. Why did you not insert in lieu of the $241,858.50 the true amount with which you said she should be charged if those figures should be utilized at all?

A. Because between the dates January 1st, 1861, and June 20th, 1863, the investment of Virginia in the stock of the Virginia Central road had increased to $2,013,987.52, or 100 per cent., and therefore when the date of June 20th, 1863, is considered, of course the full amount received, viz., $241,858.50 must be considered.

By the Master:

Q. One principal related to one date and the other principal related to the other date?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Harrison: That is what I wanted to get clear on the record.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. Now take up item No. 5 of Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, page 13, the Blue Ridge Railroad built by the State. What was the total amount expended by the State for that road January 1st, 1861?

A. $1,604,723.23, as shown on page 27 of the printed record.

Q. What value as of January 1st, 1861, do you put upon the total expenditure made by the State in the Blue Ridge road which you have just given?

A. $625,348.08.

Q. How did you arrive at the value of that investment as of that period?

A. It was the sales value as of that period.

Q. When did the State receive the money or bonds, as the case may be?

A. April 1st, 1870.

Q. Was it paid in money or bonds?

A. It was paid in bonds and money.

Q. How much money?

A. $8.96.

Q. It is a small matter, but I believe that eight dollars and something was represented by a check, was it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Which the Speaker's report shows was not collected?

A. I did not follow that.

Q. Didn't you?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know how that valuation was arrived at, did your investigation involve an inquiry into that or have you been informed about it?

A. No, sir, I do not know how that value was arrived at.

Q. It is all shown in the original record and embraced in the Master's report, but you did not have your attention called to that.

The Master: Please state the page of the original record.

Mr. Anderson: The acts which show the terms on which this transaction was carried out are found at pages 33 to 49 of the appendix to the original record. They were concurrent acts of the State of Virginia and the State of West Virginia.

Q. On your exhibit, Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, page 27, the reference you give for taking this item of $625,348.03, as the amount received by the State in April, 1870, for expenditure in the Blue Ridge Railroad, you refer to Journal D, Internal Improvement Fund, page 171. Did you not find there full information as to how that value was reached? Did you not see, in other words, a report of the Commissioners of the two States, Virginia and West Virginia, or rather, find there that the value was based on their reports? I just want to know.

A. No, sir, I do not recall that fact; it may have been there.

Q. Refer to your exhibits for the year 1863, page 7, and please state what amount you charge Virginia with under the head of June 20th, 1863, on account of her expenditure in the Blue Ridge Road.

A. $1,674,723.23, or the total amount which they had expended.

Q. Then according to your figures the value of that investment had increased from 1861 from $625,348.08 to $1,674,723.23 by June 20th, 1863, hadn't it?

A. Yes, sir, as the exhibits are made up that is the net result.

Q. How do you explain that?

A. I explain it by the fact that I have two columns on page

No. 7, Defendant's Exhibit 3, 1863; one, value June 20th, 1863, and the other, disposed of for; and that the par value is carried into the column June 20th, 1863, and the value of $625,348.08 was carried into the column, disposed of for; and that on page 13 of the present record I had allowed the value of the expenditure to remain in a column headed par, and had carried into value January 1st, 1861, the disposal price.

Q. My question was this; why did you charge Virginia on June 20th, 1863, with the total cost of construction of the Blue Ridge Road as its value, and yet charge her on January 1st, 1861, with $625,348.08 as the value of that total cost of construction at that time, January 1st, 1861.

The Witness: Now, Mr. Stenographer, will you please read the question prior to that, which I had answered.

(Testimony read by stenographer.)

A. That is an inadvertence upon my part.

By the Master:

Q. What is the inadvertence upon your part?

A. That there was a different charge made, or that it was headed differently.

Q. Well, now, you are getting me confused. Where is it headed differently, that is what I would like to know. Now, is not this all there is about it—let me see if I understand it. I understand that on January 1st, 1861, you have got in a schedule here on page 27 of the printed record an item of $1,604,723.23. That you say represents, according to the books, the cost of construction up to that date; am I right about that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, then, you have got another schedule for June 20th, 1863, an item of $1,674,723.23. Do I understand that that represents the cost of construction up to June 20th, 1863?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, now, then that shows that there was additional cost of construction from January 1st, 1861, up to June 20th, 1863, does it, of the difference between those two sums, is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, I do not understand that you have done anything, so far as disposal is concerned, except to stick to the item of $625,348.08; am I right about that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where is the confusion then?

A. The confusion is that in one case, which is on page No. 7, Defendant's Exhibit, No. 3, 1863, under value of June 20th, 1863. I have entered the par value; on page No. 13, under the value of January 1st, 1861, I have entered the disposal value.

Q. Wait a minute and let me get that. Page 13?

A. Page 7 of the 1863 exhibits.

Q. I have that page, and under the head of the disposal value you have $625,348.08?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, give me the other disposal exhibit where you have given a value at any other sum.

A. On page 13 the same disposal value is shown.

Q. Now, page 13 shows what—you say page 13 of the exhibits of 1863?

A. Page 13 of the printed record.

Q. That is another thing. Page 13 of the printed record shows the valuation of par January 1st, 1861, of $1,604,723.23, which is exactly the item we have been talking about; it shows a disposal value of $625,348.08.

Mr. Hogg: That is the sales value.

Q. I suppose that column on page 13 is marked value instead of disposal value, is that the trouble?

A. Yes, sir, it is marked value January 1st, 1861.

Q. I get it now. That is the difficulty. In other words your schedule does not accurately state the exact situation?

A. Yes.

The Maser: In order to have his schedule consistent with what he claims the facts are, instead of having a heading, value January 1st, 1861, on page 13, he ought to have said disposed of for, because every other item there is predicated upon, disposed of for.

Mr. Hogg: That foot note would explain that.

Mr. Holt: I think there is a foot note there that fully explains that, on the exhibit itself.

The Master: I get it now. But I wanted to get at what the confusion was. The examination does not enlighten me any unless I understand it as it goes on. I get the point now. Clearly enough that item appears, so far as the designation is concerned, independent of the explanation, in an improper column, that is all. That is your point, is it not, Mr. Harrison ?

Mr. Harrison: No, sir, it is not a question of improper columns with me. If your Honor would have let me had a minute or two more you would probably have seen the point I was driving at.

The Master: I wanted to see if I was keeping up, that is all. Go ahead and develop your idea.

Mr. Harrison: It was not a question of columns. He started off with an answer concerning some explanation, but he was giving the correct statement of the second line, which was that he had made a mistake.

The Master: Instead of being illuminated, I was getting confused.

Mr. Harrison: In order that your Honor may understand what I was driving at, I am contrasting the values that this witness has placed upon the State's expenditure in the Blue Ridge road as of two dates, January 1, 1861, and June 20th, 1863, and you will find that on his schedule where he gives the value of that expenditure, amounting to more than a million and a half; in January, 1861, he states it at six hundred and twenty-five thousand and some odd dollars.

Mr. Holt: The sale price.

Mr. Harrison: The price for which the investment was sold in 1870.

The Master: I get your point.

Mr. Harrison: Now, when you turn to the 1863 sheet you find that he has charged Virginia with the total expenditures of that road; in other words, more than a million dollars or something along there more in 1863 than she should be charged with in January, 1861, and when he was asked to explain that, he then had started to say that he had made a mistake, and at that point your Honor came in, because you had not gotten hold of the point.

The Master: Page No. 70 is the schedule you refer to where he charged you with $1,674,723?

Mr. Harrison: Yes, sir, that is the 1863 schedule.

The Master: On page No. 7, of the blue print schedules.

Mr. Harrison: Yes, sir.

The Master: I get it. I understand that your contention now is that he admits that this item of $1,674,723 is an error.

Mr. Harrison: That is what I understood him to say.

The Master: Very well. Start from there on, if that is the understanding.

Mr. Harrison: I really have forgotten where I was.

The Witness: Your Honor, since the counsel has made the statement into the record that I stated it is an error, I wish to make a further statement then. Am I entitled to one?

Mr. Harrison: I stated that I understood that to be your reply.

Mr. Holt: So did I; but let him go on.

The Master: I shall have to allow Mr. Harrison's wishes in that respect. Mr. Harrison is conducting the cross-examination and his idea is that the witness has made a statement as a result of that examination. It is Mr. Harrison's privilege to pursue the examination from that on if he desires to do so, and then after, as he goes along, if the witness has any occasion to make an explanation, very well. Of course, without Mr. Harrison's permission I should hardly want to allow the witness to go on now when the examination has stopped and make an explanatin. Mr. Harrison has a right to pursue his cross-examination, and if the cross-examination does not clear it up in accordance with the views of the other side or in accordance with the views of the witness, as he goes along, the witness can make such explanation as is proper as he goes along.

Mr. Harrison: I am of course not undertaking to object to the witness making any explanation.

The Master: True; if it is agreeable to you he can make any statement, but if you prefer to pursue your cross-examination, you have that right.

Mr. Harrison: I would like very much to get back to base again and see if I can take up the thread.

The Witness: Your Honor, the objection that I made was that Mr. Harrison stated into the record that I had admitted that I made an error. That is a statement that does not appear in the record, and I must insist on correcting it.

The Master: Mr. Hillman, don't discuss this case with Mr. Harrison. You are simply the witness; you are under his cross-examination, and you do not make any statement here except it is in response to some question put by him, unless he is willing that you should make some statement in the record. There can be no discussion between the witness and counsel. You will have a full opportunity to make all explanation that you think may be necessary or that the attorneys for West Virginia may think will be necessary.

Mr. Holt: I have no doubt that Mr. Harrison's further questions will give him an opportunity to make an explanation. The only trouble with Mr. Hillman was this, he was fearful that the statement made by Mr. Harrison into the record would bind him.

Mr. Lilly: He misquoted him, he thinks.

Mr. Harrison: I did not misquote him. I said what I thought he said, and if I am mistaken about it, his own answer would correct me. I said that I had understood the witness when he started to reply to the second question, that he had stated that that was a mistake or inadvertence. If I am mistaken about that, his answer will correct it.

Mr. Holt: If you are mistaken then I am mistaken. I received the same impression; but your further examination will clear this thing up.

Mr. Hogg: I would like to submit one observation in regard to this argument—

The Master: No, I would suggest this, I do not think I can allow any discussion of this testimony as it is coming in, one way or the other. The situation is this, and I suppose perhaps I myself am responsible for breaking in and adding to the confusion. The difficulty with me was I was perhaps too anxious to get the purport of it before I allowed Mr. Harrison to complete. Mr. Harrison is conducting the cross-examination and so far as he is concerned it is for him to say how he will do it. We have reached a stage now where the witness has answered a certain question. Mr. Harrison has got a right to develop his cross-examination along that line without any suggestion from the other side or without any suggestion from anybody or without any discussion between himself and the witness. The witness is not to argue this case with counsel, and if Mr. Harrison does not wish it, nobody is to comment upon this examination as it goes in by way of explanation or otherwise. A comment might destroy the effect of a cross-examination. You can appreciate how that may be. This whole thing from now on is between Mr. Harrison and Mr. Hillman, and from now on it will be conducted in this way, Mr. Harrison will ask the questions; Mr. Hillman will answer the questions and stop when he gets through with his answers. He will not try to argue the case or try to make any explanation relative to the answer to a question that he makes. I understand that to be the proper legal rule.

Mr. Hogg: I would like to make this statement. I have not interfered with the examination or the cross-examination. I have kept very quiet. I do not understand this schedule—

The Master: That is not to be discussed now unless Mr. Harrison wishes to go into it.

Mr. Harrison: No, I do not.

Mr. Hogg: I wanted to see whether I understood it.

The Master: That is not to be made the subject of colloquy between counsel unless Mr. Harrison desires it.

Mr. Harrison: I would rather go out in the hall and discuss it with him.

The Master: Here is exactly the situation—

Mr. Holt: I am making the request of Mr. Harrison to proceed, that is all I am doing.

Mr. Hogg: And I was making a request to allow me to ask him a question.

The Master: I cannot allow this to develop into a colloquy between counsel unless it is agreeable to Mr. Harrison. There is not the slightest question about his legal rights right at this juncture. The witness is on the stand and being cross-examined, and Mr. Harrison has got a right to go on with that cross-examination, and it is between himself and Mr. Hillman and nobody else, and so far as counsel on the other side is concerned, either by way of suggestion or inquiry or anything else, it is not open until they get him, not at this stage, unless Mr. Harrison is willing that it should be done. Now the hearing will proceed on that basis.

(The last question put by Mr. Harrison and the answer thereto were read by the stenographer.)

Q. How would you correct it?

A. By charging Virginia with $1,604,722.23, on page 13 of the printed record.

Q. Do I understand now that it was an inadvertence in that you did not charge to Virginia on January 1st, 1861, the total cost of the construction as representing its then value?

A. Yes, sir. I depended upon the stars preceding each of these items to explain exactly how the charge was made up as far as page 13 of the printed record goes. I made a little different handling of it on page No. 7 of Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, 1863. The facts show in both schedules.

Q. Then the inadvertence did not occur in the 1863 schedule?

A. No, sir.

Q. Then you were wrong when you said it was an inadvertence in answer to my question a moment ago, were you not?

A. Yes, sir, I should have proceeded further and said it was an inadvertence in making out the schedules on different bases; I mean by that on a different plan of expressing them.

Q. In what respect do the schedules differ in the matter of the plan of expressing them?

A. I should have had on page 13 of the printed record a column headed value June 20th, 1863, and a column, disposed of for. Instead of that I had relied upon the stars to indicate the exact status of the case. In other words, the Defendant's Exhibit 3, 1863, page 7, is in a more complete and concise form than is page 13.

Q. We cannot then derive the meaning of your page 13 without reference to your page 7, can we?

Mr. Lilly: Pardon me, wouldn't it be well to say printed page 13?

Mr. Harrison: Yes.

The Master: That is page 13 of the print and page 7 of the blueprint.

A. Yes, sir, I think that reading page 13 of the printed record, together with the stars and foot notes, would indicate fully the state of the case.

Q. What evidence do you rely upon to give the value of the State's expenditure in the Blue Ridge Road January 1st, 1861, at your new value now given, $1,604,723.23?

A. The cost of construction up to January 1st, 1861, as shown on page 187, Ledger B, Internal Improvement Fund, State of Virginia, and expressed on page 27 of the printed record.

Q. Then you have taken the cost of the road and embraced that in your schedule and testimony as representing its value, have you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you any other information about its value than the entry showing its cost?

A. None save the entry showing its final price obtained.

Q. Was it an operating road at that time?

The Master: You mean January 1st, 1861, is that the time you refer to.

Mr. Harrison: yes.

A. It was being operated, or its tracks were being run over by the Virginia Central Railroad.

Q. You do not know the location of this road, do you, the Blue Ridge?

A. It is what is now part of the Chesapeake & Ohio and contains the Blue Ridge tunnel.

Q. Do you know to what extent that work had been completed at that time?

The Master: You refer now to the tunnel?

Mr. Harrison: Yes, sir.

A. It had been completed almost entirely at January 1st, 1861. There was a further expenditure of in the neighborhood of $70,000 after that date.

Q. Did it have any equipment or rolling stock?

A. I do not know. I do not think it did, but I do not know.

Q. Why did you take the cost, the amount expended by the State on that work, as representing its value?

A. Because the State had expended up to that date that much actual cash on the road, presumably expended for value received in the building of the road.

Q. I observe by reference to the defendant's supplemental answer, page 54, that the accountant who made up the figures upon which that answer was based seems to have made the same inadvertence that you did—

Mr. Lilly: Now, I want to make a correction there. It is evident—

Q. —by charging to the State of Virginia $705,280.82 as the value of the State's interest in that road in January, 1861?

Mr. Lilly: If the Master please, that is not what the answer states, with due deference. It says, sales of securities purchased with common funds. It says that is what was received; it does not say it was the value as of January 1st, 1861.

The Master: I am inclined to think that is correct.

Mr. Harrison: But that is the value put on it in their summary.

The Master: Well, you are referring to page 54. Page 54, where that amount appears, is under a head which relates to the proceeds of securities.

Mr. Harrison: That is the value put upon that piece of work.

Mr. Holt: That is the sale price, clearly indicated.

Mr. Lilly: It corresponds with the $625,000, as in the Hillman schedule.

The Master: The figures are not identical.

Mr. Lilly: But it is meant to correspond, with a different basis of calculation.

The Witness: Your Honor, since we are on that point of the $705,280.82, I would call your attention to the fact that that $705,280.82, is made up of the two items shown upon page 27 of the printed record, viz., the amount obtained for the cost of the road, $625,348.03, and subsequent tolls received by the Virginia Central of $79,932.74.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Received by or from the Virginia Central?

A. From the Virginia Central.

The Witness: I make this statement merely so that the two items can be identified.

By the Master:

Q. That is your suggestion is, that the aggregate of those two items produce $705,280.82?

A. Yes, sir, or within five cents of that, which happened to be five cents over on interest of bonds which was never adjusted.

Mr. Harrison: Now, I want an answer to my first question.

The Master: I can see where the aggregate occurs, but it is not a very happy statement of the items in the answer. That is, there is not anything in the answer that would indicate that detail. I can see where that computation of course produces the result. Just how significant it may be is a different matter. Of course strictly speaking in the first place this schedule does not show the value, and then strictly speaking it does not aptly describe that value. I suppose it is easy enough to see what is meant. Your proposition is that that item means this other item.

Mr. Holt: That schedule undertook to set forth the sales price or amounts received for certain securities, and into it, however, slipped the Blue Ridge, which was not a question of securities at all.

The Master: Precisely.

Mr. Holt: But it would represent its sale price as well.

Mr. Harrison: I do not see that there is any necessity of discussing those questions. My question was a very simple one, and I am going to put it in a different way.

Mr. Holt: This discussion was not addressed to your question.

Mr. Anderson: I want to call the attention of the Master to an inadvertence on the part of my friend; that item of $705,280.82, item No. 5 in Class C of the answer, is not mentioned in the answer with the meaning that my friend states, but it is recited there as being proceeds of sale of purchased securities with common funds of the two States by the State of Virginia, etc.

Mr. Holt: Yes, I say that it happened to get into a column representing the sale of securities when it was not the sale of securities at all.

Mr. Anderson: Sale of property.

Mr. Holt: Sale of the road, the property.

The Master: That is a matter to be dicussed later; it does not refer to Mr. Harrison's cross-examination.

Mr. Lilly: I was excepting to the accuracy of Mr. Harrison's question.

The Master: Read the question.

Mr. Harrison: I will put my question in a different way.

The Master: Then the pending question is withdrawn.

Mr. Harrison: And all that follows it.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. The accountant who made up the statement upon which the supplemental answer of the defendant is based seems to have fallen into the same inadvertence that you did with reference to the value of the State's expenditure in the Blue Ridge Road in January, 1861, by not charging Virginia with the total expenditure as representing its value; isn't that true? I refer to page 54 of the supplemental answer.

A. Yes, sir, that is true. In his final summary he has presented as a charge against the State of Virginia the sales price.

Q. Now, let us take up the next item, Item No. 6 of Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, page 13 of the printed record, Alexandria, Loudoun & Hampshire Railroad stock. What do you give there as the total amount of the State's holdings in that road January 1, 1861?

A. $993,248.

Q. You give no book value for that, do you?

A. No, sir.

Q. What do you give as the value of those holdings January 1st, 1861?

A. Referring to page 13 of the printed record I give the value of $49,662.05 with the double star which indicates that it is the sales value.

Q. That sales value was had after the war, wasn't it, realized after the war?

A. Yes, sir, November 27th, 1867.

Q. Now, what do you charge to Virginia as the value of her holdings in that road June 20th, 1863?

A. $1,017,248, the total amount expended up to that date.

Q. For the purchase of stock?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then you have made a difference in the values you put upon her holdings in that road by charging her with $49,662.05 as its value January 1st, 1861, and by charging her with $1,017,248, a total expenditure as its value in June, 1863. How do you explain that?

A. In the same way as we have explained at considerable length the matter of the Blue Ridge Road.

Q. How would you correct it if it needs correction?

A. In the same method, by introducing a column of value on January 1st, 1861, on page 13 of the printed record and entering thereon $993,248, as the value, and then having the disposed of value column on page 13 also wherein $49,662.05 would show.

Q. Haven't you a column on your January, 1861, schedule headed value, January 1st, 1861?

A. I have, yes, sir.

Q. And haven't you under that column opposite Alexandria, Loudoun & Hampshire Railroad Company $49,662.05 as representing the value of her holdings at that time in that road?

A. I have that amount entered there marked with two stars, which referred to a foot note, "states that it was sales value."

Q. I understand that, that it is sales value, that is shown on your schedules very largely, and the foot note merely calls attention to that. Does the foot note explain the mistake in any other way excepting by mentioning the fact that that was the proceeds of the sale of her interest in that road realized afterwards? Does the foot note serve any other purpose than to indicate that the figures there were the sales price?

A. No, sir; it serves no other purpose than to indicate that it was the sales price.

Q. Then if I understand you, you want to correct your exhibit of January 1st, 1861, is that correct?

A. No, it is not.

Q. I thought you said it was a mistake.

Mr. Holt: No, that was your language.

Mr. Harrison: Or inadvertence then.

Mr. Holt: On the question of this road he has not used either word.

Q. Very well. Then I will ask you to explain why you have charged Virginia with $49,662.05 January 1st, 1861, as the value of her holdings in the Alexandria, Loudoun & Hampshire Railroad and charged her with $1,017,248, June 20th, 1863, as the value of her holdings, why did you do that and how do you account for that difference?

A. I have already explained that at considerable length, but I will do so again. The notation on page 13 of the printed record distinctly states that it is the sales value which I had considered there, $49,662.05. There is another column which shows the par value of that stock or the amount which had been expended by Virginia up to January 1st, 1861, viz., $993,248. In Defendant's Exhibit, No. 3, 1863, page 7, these facts were stated in a different manner, having two columns, one headed value June 20th, 1863, and the other one "Disposed of for." In the value June 20th, 1863, was entered the amount expended up to that time on the Alexandria, Loudoun & Hampshire Road. In the next column, "Disposed of for," was entered the amount which Virginia finally received for its stock in this road. I have relied upon the stars on Exhibit No. 13 to make my meaning clear on that page, and in putting it in "Value January 1st, 1861," I will admit these schedules would have been in better shape had they been made more in conformity with one another rather than left as they are.

Q. Is it a fact that you have charged Virginia as of January 1st, 1861, with $49,662.05 as the value of her holdings in the Alexandria, Loudoun & Hampshire Railroad? Page 13 of the printed schedule I have before me and I referred you to.

A. Yes, sir. That has been entered in the summary of the amount to be charged to Virginia for consideration in this case as $49,662.05.

Q. Is it a fact that you have charged to Virginia as of June 20th, 1863, $1,017,248?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. As the value of her holdings in this road?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. On that date?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is the first charge correct or do you wish to amend it?

A. If it needs amendment, page 13 should be amended as I have stated.

Q. What I will ask you, and you will have to determine whether it needs amendment or not, because it is your work and not mine, have you correctly stated as you intended to do the value of her interest in this road on January 1st, 1861, on your Exhibit No. 3, page No. 13, as $49,662.05?

A. No, sir. The amount therein entered should be $993,248.

Q. Then you made a mistake, did you not?

The Master: In place of $49,662.05?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

Q. Then you made a mistake in that exhibit, did you not?

A. I have stated right through this testimony, or the cross-examination I mean, that the expression of these amounts on the two schedules should have been synonomous and not left to be carried by the notations which I have made, and therefore the exhibit may be considered as erroneous in form.

By the Master:

Q. The simple question is did you make a mistake with reference to that item. Mr. Harrison has a right to an answer to that question. You can answer that and then you can explain in your own way. Is it or is it not a mistake. The question is, when you inserted in the schedule the item of $49,662.05 which ought to be $993,248, Mr. Harrison wants to know whether that is a mistake or not, is that it?

Mr. Harrison: That is what I am asking him.

A. Yes, sir, $993,248, should be entered under value January 1st, 1861, instead of $49,662.05.

By the Master:

Q. Now then was it a mistake? What is the answer to that question? Was that entry under those circumstances a mistake, or was it not? Was it or was it not, and if it was, give your reasons.

A. It was a mistake.

Q. Now, then if you want to explain it go on and explain it.

A. I do. For the reason that the value of the stock on January 1st, 1861, should be considered as the amount of the investment in the stock in 1861, and the claim based upon that value; this in accordance with our method of treating this on June 20th, 1863. The alternative column should then show, upon page 13 of the printed record, the amount which was finally received for the stock in the same manner as has been done on page 7, Defendant's Exhibit 3, 1863.

By Mr. Harrison::

Q. Now I understand that you wish to correct your Exhibit No. 3, page 13, of the printed record, by substituting in place of $49,662.05 as the value of Virginia's holdings in the Alexandria, Loudoun & Hampshire Railroad Company with $993,248, the par value of the stock held by her in that road; is that correct?

A. No, sir; I do not propose, unless instructed to by the Court, to correct the exhibit; having given my testimony as to what I consider the proper amount should be considered there, and as the full information concerning the method of handling is contained upon page 13 of the printed record.

Q. Which of those items will you charge against Virginia in your summary, or have you charged against her in your summary?

A. I have only charged $49,662.05 in my summary.

Q. And you do not intend to correct your summary of 1861 by striking that charge out and putting in the greater charge?

The Master: I am looking for that summary of 1861, and I do not seem to find it.

Mr. Lilly: It was not introduced until the second sitting.

Mr. Harrison: Let him answer my question.

The Master: You may answer.

A. No, sir; unless instructed to by the Court I do not propose to.

The Master: Before we go on I want that summary of 1861.

Mr. Anderson: Unfortunately it has not been printed.

The Master: But I want it, because I have got to keep track of it.

Q. If Virginia should be charged with $993,248, January 1st, 1861, instead of with $49,662.05, why will you not correct your summary and charge her with the proper amount?

A. For the reasons that I have stated, with the explanation as given in full on both exhibits, and that it is the province of the Court and not of the witness to say what the amount is which should be charged against Virginia in this final settlement, and that having all the facts laid before the Court I deem it sufficient, unless instructed by the Court to make up the statement for its information and guidance on the plans which I have outlined in my explanation of this matter.

Q. Which amount, according to your judgment as the accountant making up this statement for the guidance of the Court and the Master, should Virginia be charged with—in your summary as of January 1st, 1861, on account of the Alexandria, Loudoun & Hampshire Railroad Company?

The Witness: Is that a proper question?

The Master: Yes.

A. $993,248.

Q. Why then would you not correct your summary and put in it the proper amount according to your judgment?

A. I have already answered that question.

Q. If you intend your summary to be of assistance to the court?

A. I think I have already answered that question sufficiently in this answer.

The Master: That is not a proper answer. Let me explain this to you, and we won't have any trouble. The cross-examination has developed the fact that did not quite appear before, which entitles Mr. Harrison to ask this question; I am not going to discuss it in detail, but it is simply up to you to give the best answer you can to this question without reference to what you may have said before. It is a proper question, and you are to answer it without predicating your answer on what you may have stated before. Give the answer to the question right now.

The Witness: What is that question?

(Question repeated by stenographer.)

A. For the reason that I think the matter as it stands now is in sufficient form and fullness for the information of the court without making a summary in the method outlined.

Q. Unless you make the correction your summary will now, according to your judgment, be correct, will it?

A. No, sir.

Q. Then you think that you will assist the court and the Master by submitting to them a summary of results which you say does not truly represent your judgment as to what it should be?

A. Yes, sir; I deem with the explanation that I have made that the summary is sufficient.

By the Master:

Q. This cost of construction by the State of the Blue Ridge Railroad, I take it, is taken from the books of the State?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that I assume shows in detail what the cost of construction consisted of?

A. Yes, sir, it does.

Q. In what way is that divided in the account? Give me the large and salient items making up that aggregate?

A. It is spread out, if my recollection serves me, and I think it is correct, in detail, showing how much paid to contractors, showing how much paid for ties, rails, and all kinds of different things, all the usual construction expenditures, sometimes taking a page or a page and a half of detail to make up one entry which is entered during say the current quarter.

Q. Well, when did the construction begin? I think it is probably already in the record, but I would like to have it right here?

A. Your Honor, I will have to refer to the commencement of the construction of that Blue Ridge road.

Q. Can you give the year, without giving the date? The year will be enough for my purpose; I simply want to get an idea about what period this covered.

A. I cannot do so without looking at the ledger. It will take but a moment, and I will give it to you. The stenographer will just leave a blank for it.

(The witness later supplied the date of the commencement of the work as September, 1850.)

Q. Is there anything to indicate how much of this road had been in operation prior to January 1st, 1861, if any?

A. Yes, sir; there had been tolls paid by the Virginia Central for the use of this road prior to 1861, and subsequent to that date.

Q. Is there anything on these books showing the cost of repairs or maintenance?

A. No, sir.

Q. That is, what I mean by that is, is there anything on these books af the State showing the cost of repairs and maintenance of this road during this period or any part of it?

Mr. Lilly: May I call your Honor's attention to the fact that the road was leased, and that would probably be in the Virginia Central's items?

The Master: That has not appeared. I rather got the impression that the tolls were tolls for the use of the tunnel.

Mr. Anderson: The State owned ten miles of the road, and the approaches on the east were several miles long, and there were two or three tunnels there.

The Master: What was this Blue Ridge road, a tunnel?

Mr. Anderson: Ten miles of road, including two or three tunnels.

The Master: Let us see if we can get this from the witness.

Q. I understand that the Blue Ridge road included about ten miles of construction, the principal part of which was tunnels, is that the information you get from the books?

A. I do not know concerning the length of the road or whether it was tunnels, that is what you might say is hearsay information as far as I am concerned. But I do know that this road was leased, practically leased by the Virginia Central for payment of tolls of both passengers and freight passing over this portion of the line, and was operated by the Virginia Central and presumably kept in repair as part of their lease, as no charges as far as I can find out were ever made against the tolls of the road or its receipts for operating.

Q. Then as I understand it, in its incomplete condition, the Virginia Central leased it, and under this lease the State of Virginia was continuing to complete the road up to and beyond January 1st, 1861, notwithstanding that it had already been leased and was being operated by the Virginia Central, is that the practical condition?

A. Yes, sir, with this explanation, that they made the agreement with the Virginia Central road that they should complete this construction, and that they would allow them a rebate on their tolls to the extent of the sum which they expended to complete the road. There was $90,000 really expended, but there was only charged up $70,000 as the amount which Virginia assumed of that, through cancellation of the West Virginia Central Railroad Company's tolls, which were due it.

Q. And that was charged to construction?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. You don't mean West Virginia Central?

A. Virginia Central.

By the Master:

Q. Was there any account of depreciation in connection with the road?

A. No, so far as I know, none.

Q. Was there any construction upon the part of the State of Virginia after the leasing to the Virginia Central except through its insisting on tolls and under and by virtue of the terms of the lease?

A. No, sir.

Q. So that the bulk of this item of construction had been incurred by the State prior to the lease to the Virginia Central?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was the date of the lease to the Virginia Central?

A. I will get that for your Honor.

Q. Put the date in the record. You need not stop for it now.

A. The first tolls were paid in September, 1858, by the Virginia Central.

Q. That is as near as you can get to it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is it a fact that after the lease to the Virginia Central the increased cost of construction that appears upon the books is the result of the application of sums that were received or rebated on account of the tolls under the lease?

A. Yes, sir.

The Master: That covers that.

Q. Is there any fixed percentange of depreciation that is applied to the construction account of a railroad and its operation, and if so, what is it?

A. No, sir; there is no fixed percentage. Each road is allowed to make that depreciation, subject to the approval of the Interstate Commerce Commission, for itself. The whole proposition on maintenance of way and structure accounts, which includes the roadway and track and the buildings, is that the buildings depreciate to the extent of about five per cent. per annum and that roadway and track are taken up by renewals and by means such as might be called consolidation of the roadbed through its use, so that there is no depreciation on roadbed and track of a railway. Bridges being structures, of course, are subject to depreciation and are generally considered to have twenty-five years of life.

Q. Which would be four per cent. per annum depreciation?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say that is an Interstate Commerce rule?

A. Well, that is the general method of handling it with all roads, though the Louisville & Nashville Railroad charge up on depreciation their roadbed, rails and ties. They are as far as I know the only railroad that do it.

Q. What do they charge up?

A. They charge up two per cent. on roadbed, five per cent. on ties and I think seven and a half per cent. on rails. They are very liberal in their charges to operating accounts, and depreciation accounts are now included in operating accounts.

Q. And of course the depreciation upon a roadbed and operating factors depends very largely upon the amount expended for repairs and maintenance?

A. Yes, sir.

The Master: That is all.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. Let us take up item No. 7, Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, page 13 of the printed record, Winchester & Potomac Railroad loan, which you show to be $83,333.33, which amount you have charged to Virginia, January 1st, 1861, at $83,333.33. Why did you do that?

A. Because that was the amount which was entered on page 241, Ledger B, Internal Improvement Fund, as the par of the loan and was also shown on folio 175 of Journal D, Board of Public Works, under September 30th, 1873, as the amount received in full settlement of this loan.

Q. Settled how?

A. It was settled by the payment of bonds, which included not only the principal, but included the interest or unpaid proportion of the annuity, as this Winchester & Potomac had been boiled down to an annuity instead of calling it an interest charge.

Mr. Harrison: This matter is covered by the Master's report, page 64.

The Master: Is there any question but that the facts are accurately stated in my report in relation to that item, on either side?

Mr. Harrison: No, sir; they are all correct.

Mr. Lilly: I think the facts are quite clear in regard to it.

The Master: Yes. As I understand, we have gone through items 4, 5 and 6, and do I understand that it is conceded that the schedules submitted by West Virginia are accurate so far as they are a statement of figures and the computations made on the schedules, that there is no criticism of any of the items except such as may be inferred from the cross-examination?

Mr. Harrison: So far as mathematical accuracy of the figures I take it there is no error in the figures.

The Master: I would like to make this inquiry, so far as counsel for West Virginia are concerned, we have this schedule on page 13 of the printed record stated under head of values January 1st, 1861. Am I to understand that that represents the claim that West Virginia proposes to make and that the sums stated there under that heading are sums by which they expect to be bound so far as the amounts are concerned? I will leave that question to be answered when we come back.

Mr. Holt: We are looking at the figures referred to. As I understand it, this is Exhibit No. 3, page 13.

Mr. Hogg: The aggregate there is $9,163,256.70.

The Master: Yes; we will let it suspend for a moment then. We suspend now until half past two.

At this point a recess was taken until 2:30 P. M.

AFTER RECESS.

Mr. Holt: Your Honor, at the adjourning hour you requested of the counsel for West Virginia to know whether they intended to rely on the last column in Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, and the sum total thereof on page 13 of the printed record, or whether they desired to correct the items therein in accordance with the development upon the cross-examination this morning, which related to the Blue Ridge Railroad Company and the Alexandria, Loudoun & Hampshire Railroad Company. We desire to make the correction in that schedule, and also the summary based upon it, so as to conform the situation to the facts. Mr. Hillman prepared two schedules, one for 1861, and a corresponding one for 1863. His columns were somewhat different in 1863 from what they are upon the schedule for 1861. And in the case of the Alexandria, Loudoun & Hampshire Railroad Company he carried forward $49,662.05 as the amount of the claim on account of that item that we would make against Virginia, that is 23 1-2 per cent. thereof, the $49,000 representing the sales price of Virginia's interest in that road instead of $993,248, which was the cost of construction. Now the cross-examination developed the fact to be that in connection with the Blue Ridge Railroad Company, built by the State, he took as the value to be claimed by us the sales price of $625,348.08 instead of $1,604,723.23. And we desire to correct the schedule in that particular also. Now it will develop that this same inadvertence occurred in the case of the Virginia & Tennessee Railroad loan, where the amount of the loan finally paid, $886,685, is claimed by us in the exhibit instead of $1,000,000. We desire to make that correction. Also in the case of the Roanoke Navigation Company, $3,832, as the sale price is claimed, instead of $80,000, the purchase price of the stock. And finally, in the case of the Alexandria Canal Company stock, the sales price of $764.47 is claimed by us in this schedule, when according to the explanation of Mr. Hillman the cost price of the stock, $272,000, should be claimed. And those matters should be carried forward into the summary schedule.

Now then, it is not proposed to withdraw either one of these schedules, but let them lie in the record as they are; but as soon as they can be prepared, add the new schedules thus readjusted, because that represents our contention. Mr. Hillman, in other words, has already in the body of his testimony made the corrections, but has declined to carry that correction into the schedule, which now we request him to do. I may say in addition to that, however, and in justification of this situation, that Mr. Hillman has labored under adverse circumstances, being away a good portion of the time, and troubled with distress of mind, and the different mode of getting up the two forms of schedules for 1861 and 1863, upon these items was a matter that might very readily have been expected to have resulted under the circumstances.

The Master: Proceed.

Mr. Lilly: I might state that Dr. Hogg is feeling indisposed this afternoon and will not be here for some time.

Mr. Anderson: I want to suggest to our friends on the other side that a more serious difficulty confronts them in that in their answer they have committed themselves to the propriety of the set-off exactly in the form in which it is alleged in the answer as to these items. I do not know that a party will be allowed to change pleadings of that kind at will.

Mr. Holt: We are not asking to amend the answer. We will take care of that proposition when we reach it. We understand your contention, General Anderson.

The Master: There cannot be any amendment of the pleadings.

Mr. Holt: No, sir, I do not ask that.

The Master: If this explanation is in the record that takes care of it. The cross-examination will go on and develop their point of view, whatever they see fit to develop in relation to it. I do not think you need to encumber the record with a new schedule. The explanation I take it is clear to me and also to the other side. At any rate, they will proceed with their cross-examination and develop whatever they have occasion to.

Mr. Holt: Our idea was for Mr. Harrison to go on at this moment, but that it might be made clear by putting in that corrected schedule later on.

The Master: If you want to do that, all right, but as far as I am concerned, I understand it.

Mr. Lilly: We would prefer to file a supplemental schedule.

The Master: If there are any supplemental schedules to be submitted, they should be prepared and submitted before Mr. Hillman leaves the stand, so that the other side can cross-examine on them. You can do that between now and to-morrow.

Mr. Lilly: They are advised as to the purport of the amended schedules.

The Master: While this may be obvious what the schedules will be, still they ought to be submitted before Mr. Hillman leaves the stand, so that the other side can cross-examine if they wish in relation to it.

Mr. Harrison: I do not intend at this point to discuss the question, if your Honor please, but I do not wish to be understood as waiving our right of objection to the proposal now to amend schedules that have been prepared and tendered and put in proof by counsel on the other side as representing the case upon which they will rely. The mistakes, so far as they relate to form, are perfectly immaterial. We are making no objection to the forms of the schedules but to the substance of them.

Continuation of the cross-examination of

CONWAY W. HILLMAN.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. I refer you now to item 8 in Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, page 13 of the printed record, which item is Virginia & Tennessee Railroad loan, $1,000,000. What value do you give that loan on that schedule as of January 1st, 1861?

A. $886,685.

Q. How do you arrive at that? Upon what evidence do you rely for that statement?

The Master: What schedule are you referring to now Mr. Harrison?

Mr. Harrison: Page 13 of the printed record, the same one we are dealing with.

Mr. Anderson: It is item No. 8.

The Master: I get it, yes.

A. Upon the final payment of that loan, as shown in detail on page 31 of the printed record.

Q. Does that show the final payment of the loan?

A. It shows the final payment on the loan, not of the loan.

Q. By reference to the sub-sheet that you have called attention to, I observe such payments are set forth, with the dates, as follows: Payment on above loan made as follows: June 19th, 1863, $200,000, June 30th, 1863, $300,000, August 6th, 1863, $100,000, August 7th, 1863, $100,000, September 11th, 1863, $186,685, making a total of $886,685. Are those the payments to which you referred?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were not those payments repudiated by the Board of Public Works?

The Master: What is the trouble about that Mr. Hillman? Do you know anything about it? Take all the time you want, but I do not want to wait too long.

A. One-half of this loan was afterwards turned over by the Board of Public Works to the Literary Fund and marked by them as one-half refunded to them because of a resolution of the Board of Public Works of even date. I have a copy of that resolution, which has been furnished me, which I could not find at the time.

The Master: Is that what you refer to, Mr. Harrison?

Mr. Harrison: Yes.

The Master: I do not want you to understand that you are not to take plenty of time, but if you had that fact in mind I do not like to delay.

Mr. Lilly: He was trying to hunt the paper.

The Master: There are so many of these delays that it takes up a lot of time. I want Mr. Hillman to take all the time he needs; if he can give an oral answer and then he needs further time for the detail or any original memorandum, why then we may decide that later we will have the original memorandum come along. You shall have all the time you want to make a full and complete statement, but I do not like to wait for the detail when we can have the detail coming along a little later and save time, perhaps.

The Witness: I would say with reference to that matter then, your Honor, that the resolution which I saw afterwards, is not at all clear as to what was authorized to be done, at least to my mind, or what was done, and that there seems to be no further entry than the one which I have mentioned of the Board of Public Works, handing over to the Literary Fund one-half of the amount which had been paid in on this loan, whether from its own resources or not, I do not know.

By the Master:

Q. Now, you will produce that resolution as soon as your assistant can bring it in?

A. Yes, sir.

The Master: Can you go on from that, Brother Harrison?

Mr. Harrison: Yes, sir; I will go on.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. Now, my question was if those so-called payments had not been repudiated by the Board of Public Works.

Mr. Harrison: I would like to know, if the witness knows, whether that is a fact or not?

A. I do not know.

Q. Did you examine in connection with this loan, Journal N of the Board of Public Works?

A. No, sir; I do not think that I did.

The Master: What is that journal, a book of original entry?

Mr. Harrison: Yes, sir.

Q. Then I call your attention now to a resolution of the Board of Public Works adopted Tuesday, February 4th, 1868, found on pages 249, 250 and 251 of Journal N, Board of Public Works, dealing with that specific subject.

Mr. Holt: What is the date of that journal entry, Mr. Harrison?

Mr. Harrison: February 4th, 1868.

Mr. Holt: A payment made in 1863?

Q. I will read at this point the following extract from the minutes of the Board: "And, whereas, during the late war, and while the authorities of the State Government at Richmond City, adhering to the Confederate States, and when and while the said Railroad Company had no right to pay and no officer of said Government had any right to receive payment of the principal or interest or any part thereof, specified in the mortgage aforesaid"— that refers to the original mortgage of one million dollars—"acceding to the terms thereof according to law, under and as recognized by the said State Government or otherwise, in whatever currency or money which might be tendered, yet the said Second Auditor of said State Government received from the president of the said Railroad Company in pretended satisfaction of the debt and interest, then not due, but secured by said mortgage, such sums in Confederate Treasury notes at par, though grossly depreciated and almost worthless, to-wit: on the 26th day of June, 1863, $200,000; on the 30th of June, 1863, $300,000; on the 6th of August, 1863, $100,000; on the 7th of August, 1863, $100,000, and on the 11th of September, 1863, $186,685, in all $886,685; which act of the Second Auditor was unauthorized, illegal and void. And, whereas, the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund, at a meeting on the 6th of December 1864, as appears by their records, reciting that said act of said Second Auditor was unauthorized and that they had no control over said Confederate Treasury notes other than to return them, ordered that said Second Auditor return said notes to said company by his warrant on the Treasurer on account of the amount paid into the Treasury without authority. And, whereas, in pursuance of said order the said Second Auditor, made and presented to the president of said Railroad Company, his warrant on the Treasurer, and the said President refused to receive the same, by reason whereof the said Treasury notes unlawfully received remained in the Treasury until they perished; and, whereas, it is represented by this Board that the funds of the said Virginia & Tennessee Railroad Company had been attached at Knoxville, Tennessee, whereby the receipts and interests of the Board and the Commonwealth are jeopardized, and it seems to appear necessary and opportune that some measures should be adopted to protect the receipts and interests aforesaid, it is, therefore, resolved, that the principal and interest of the said loan of $1,000,000 to the Virginia & Tennessee Railroad Company, falling due after the 1st day of July, 1863, according to the terms of the mortgage of said company above mentioned, remain wholly unpaid and due to the Board of Public Works of Virginia for the Commonwealth of Virginia, as also the interest on the several arrearages, resolved that the receipt of the Confederate currency by the Second Auditor, by the said Virginia & Tennessee Railroad Company, or an officer thereof above mentioned, was wholly unauthorized, illegal and void, and constitute no payment or discharge of the indebtedness of the said Company described in and secured by the aforesaid mortgage. Resolved, that the Governor be, and he is hereby authorized and requested to adopt such measures as he may deem proper for the protection of the rights and interests of the Board and the Commonwealth, secured by the mortgage aforesaid, now jeopardized by the said attachment at Knoxville, and that he adopt such other measures as he may deem necessary and proper for securing the payment of the principal and interest due on the said mortgage." Signed, F. H. Pierpont. And the Board adjourned.

Now, I will also call your attention to and read into the record from the record book of the Sinking Fund under date of December 5th, 1864, the following: "Present all the Commissioners. Whereas, it appears that the Virginia & Tennessee Railroad Company has paid into the Treasury of the State of Virginia to the credit of the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund the sum of $886,685.47 in Confederate States Treasury notes on account of the debt of the company for money loaned to the same above State; and, whereas, it further appears that such payment into the Treasury was made without authority of the Board of said Commissioners of the Sinking Fund and after a decision by said Board that they had no authority to receive it and that this Board has no other or further control over said money than to return it, it is therefore ordered that the Second Auditor do issue his warrant on the Treasury in favor of said Virginia & Tennessee Railroad Company for the $886,685.47 in Confederate States Treasury notes on account of the moneys so paid into the Treasury without authority." Neither of those resolutions you say you have seen or heard of in the course of your investigation?

A. I had heard of them but was unable to locate them. I had heard of the resolution wherein that money was returned for certain reasons to the Sinking Fund, but I could find no reason for its return and no source from which it was returned to them.

Q. Did you say returned to the sinking fund?

A. I think it was returned to the sinking fund.

Q. Returned to the sinking fund or by the sinking fund?

A. To the sinking fund, I think.

Q. Who returned to the sinking fund?

A. That is what I do not know?

Q. I am talking about its being repudiated by the Board of Public Works as well as by the sinking fund and ordered to be returned to the railroad company, and my question was whether the two resolutions bearing on that subject which I have just read had been called to your attention before.

A. No, sir; I had not seen them before.

Q. Did you not state in answer to a question propounded by the Master on your direct-examination that the full amount of this loan of $1,000,000 was due to the Commonwealth of Virginia at the time it was transferred to the Atlantic, Mississippi & Ohio Railway? I refer you to your direct examination, page 548.

A. No, sir; I did not so testify.

Q. Then I will read your answer in the record. At page 548 of the typewritten record the question is as follows: "Was that full amount due at that time on the $1,000,000?" The $1,000,000 was referred to in the question before and that time was July 1st, 1870. Your answer was, "Yes, sir." Do you wish now to correct that answer?

Mr. Holt: Look at your testimony if you want to.

The Witness: I want to look at the testimony. I think there are some things that preceded that that explain fully what I mean.

Mr. Holt: The question is what did you say in answer to the question?

(The witness refers to the typewritten record of his testimony.)

The Witness: Yes, sir. My direct testimony in answer to your question reads as has been stated by you.

The Master: His question is whether you want to correct it or not.

The Witness: Yes, sir, I certainly do. What I had intended to say there and what I felt very sure I had said was made plain, and the reason for my reading the record was that the full amount of the loan of $1,000,000 was due on January 1st, 1861, and that the balance unpaid, whatever it might be, had been transferred by this $4,000,000 transaction and no money carried out into the body of the transaction to represent it. I see that I have, however, made the statement baldly that the loan on that day was $1,000,000 and further stated that I would have carried it out for $1,000,000 into the margin. I am surprised that I was led into that or that I said that, as I had no intention of saying it, and at the same time

I had a full recollection that I had said an entirely different thing. It was merely to state that the loan had not been paid in full that I emphasized the matter that all the State's right and title in that loan had been carried into that transaction though no sum had been carried opposite.

Q. You have charged in your January 1st, 1861, schedule, which we now have before us, page 13 of the printed record, the alleged payments aggregating $886,685, as the value of that $1,000,000 on January 1st, 1861, whereas I find on page 7 of the manuscript exhibit, the blue print, under head of value June 20th, 1863, you have charged $800,000 as the value of that loan on that date. How did you arrive at that value you have placed upon this loan for June 20th, 1863?

A. By deducting from the face value of the loan a payment of $200,000 on June 19th, 1863.

Q. Where did you get that date from, June 19th, 1863?

A. Cash book No. 10, Board of Public Works.

Q. Do I understand that you wish to correct the figures stated in either or both of these schedules for January, 1861, and June 20th, 1863?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In what respect?

A. In making the entry on page 13 of the printed record $1,000,000, instead of $886,685.

Q. Any other correction?

A. No, sir.

Mr. Holt: Do you mean with respect to the other roads or just that one item, Mr. Harrison?

Mr. Harrison: I am dealing with those two dates, but that particular item. I have not gone to any other as yet.

The Master: Do you include that particular item in your statement?

Mr. Holt: Yes, sir.

Q. If the $200,000 payment which you have just referred to as made on this loan of June 19th, 1863, was repudiated, then you should amend the figure you have in your June 20th, 1863, schedule, should you not?

A. I am by no means certain on that point as—

The Master: Is not that a matter of computation right on its face? Mr. Harrison's question is if that payment of $200,000 was eliminated or repudiated, whether that would not result in a change from your standpoint of $1,000,000.

The Witness: If it was returned, yes, sir.

Mr. Holt : It depends upon what you mean by repudiated.

The Master: Eliminated; I assume he means eliminated.

Mr. Holt: The fact shows the payment in 1863 and repudiation in 1865.

The Master: Mr. Harrison's question was put upon the assumption—he does not concede that it was repudiated by answering on that assumption, that is, he does not to my mind. Am I correct about that, Mr. Harrison?

Mr. Harrison: Yes, sir.

The Maser: Of course the answer to that question is simply a matter of computation. It is obvious right on its face.

Mr. Holt: The witness does not understand all those things.

The Master: He has got to answer it in one way.

Q. Now will you tell us what became of the State's interest in that $1,000,000 loan to the Virginia and Tennessee Railroad?

A. It was turned over to the Atlantic, Mississippi and Ohio Railroad Company.

Q. When? The date of the deed is December 22nd, 1870. Have you seen the deed?

Mr. Holt: Let him find out whether his date agrees with yours.

Mr. Harrison: Very well.

A. July 1st, 1870.

Q. Where did you get that date from? That must be the date of the act.

A. In answer to your question I would say that the computation of interest was made up to July 1st, 1870, and therefore the settlement took place as of that date.

Q. Now how much of the loan was turned over by the State?

A. That is an irdeterminate quantity. The sixth item reads, and the sixth item is this loan, all rights, claims and privileges which belong to the State of Virginia on account of the loan of $1,000,000. No amount carried out.

Q. If $886,685. had been paid, why should the amount be indeterminate?

A. Because it is not memtioned.

Q. That would not leave it inderterminate, would it?

A. No, sir; but it is not mentioned in the transaction or in the journal entry, and therefore denominated inderterminate.

Q. Do you mean by that that it had not been mentioned in the deed when you say indeterminate?

A. I mean that it had not been mentioned in the journal entry.

Q. Then I am correct, am I, in understanding you mean by indeterminate, not mentioned?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. According to your schedule you could determine the amount that had been paid over, could you not?

Q. Yes, sir; I could.

Q. Turned over, I mean?

A. Yes, sir; I could.

Q. And when you say turned over to the Atlantic, Mississippi & Ohio road, do you mean that that was one of the items, that is to say, that is to say this million dollar loan made by the State to the Virginia & Tennessee Railroad, was one of the items turned over to the Atlantic, Mississippi & Ohio Railway Company as part consideration for their $4,000,000 second mortgage which was given by that road to the State of Virginia?

A. No, sir.

Q. What do you mean?

A I mean the article sixth which I have read, all claims, rights and privileges which belong to the State of Virginia on account of loan of $1,000,000. The distinction is very marked in the wording as between the claims, rights and privileges under the loan, and the turning over of the loan itself at its face of $1,000,000.

Q. Do you mean to say that no part of the loan was turned over to the Atlantic, Mississippi & Ohio?

A. I do not know whether it was or not. According to my interpretation of the records of Virginia the sum of $113,315 would have been turned over to the Atlantic, Mississippi & Ohio Railroad in that transaction.

Q. Then according to your interpretation $113,315 of the $1,000,000 loan to the Virginia & Tennessee Railroad was turned over to the Atlantic, Mississippi & Ohio Railroad in 1870, as part consideration for the mortgage of $4,000,000 given by that road?

A. According to the interpretation which I would make if I had made any, yes, sir.

Q. Well, have you in your computations included any part of that loan in the $4,000,000 mortgage transaction?

A. No, sir.

Q. And that item is charged against the State in addition to the $4,000,000 transaction that we are speaking of?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Harrison: Now I will take the next item.

The Master: Before you leave that, I have not stopped to figure it, but does the total of the items found in Defendant's No. 6, page 56, of the printed record, aggregate $4,000,000, or does it aggregate more than that?

A. It aggregates more than that.

Q. Before you leave that item, or before you go any farther with it, is there any evidence in existence other than this resolution of the Board of Public Works, as to the nature of that transaction which resulted in an apparent credit upon the amount of this million dollar loan having been in Confederate Treasury notes during that period?

Mr. Harrison: None that I know of, except the Act of Assembly and the deed of trust, in which the million dollar loan is referred to.

The Master: Does the Act of Assembly set out what you claim is an attempted payment?

Mr. Anderson: No, sir; not explicitly.

The Master: Then the only evidence in existence as to the character of the payment is found in this resolution of the Board of Public Works for the Sinking Fund?

Mr. Anderson: Yes; I remember it is referred to in one of the messages of March, 1870, of Governor Walker, who was then Governor of the Commonwealth, in which he shows that the claim had not then been paid.

The Master: What I wanted principally to know was whether there was extant any contemporaneous evidence of the payment. These resolutions are declarations subsequent to the act.

Mr. Anderson: The resolution of the Sinking Fund was afterwards.

The Master: Well, the next year.

Mr. Anderson: They refer to the fact that there was no authority in the Second Auditor to receive payment at all.

The Master: I understand that.

Mr. Anderson: Under the law then and under the law now, the Second Auditor had no right to receive any money at all.

The Master: My attention of course can be called to the law relating to that. But what I wanted to get at now was whether there was anything tending to the establishment of the fact, other than these resolutions.

Mr. Harrison: I intend to put into the record at the proper time the Act of February, 1853, under which the loan was made, and showing the terms upon which it was to be paid.

The Master: Of course I understand that at present nothing but cross-examination is going on.

Mr. Harrison: The loan was repudiated because they had no authority to take it.

Mr. Holt: Do you want all this to go down?

Mr. Harrison: No, that can be taken out.

The Master: Of course these other matters are matters for later consideration.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. Now I come to the next item, No. 9, Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, page 13 of the printed record, as follows: South Side Railroad Company loan, $800,000. What value do you put upon that loan in your schedule under date of January 1st, 1861?

A. I have entered no value opposite it.

Q. Then according to your schedule it had no value on that date; that is correct, is it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now I find on your schedule, blue print, page No. 7, June 20th, 1863, you have entered that loan as having a value of $800,000 on June 20th, 1863. If it had no value on January 1st, 1861, how did you conclude that it had a value of $800,000 on June 20th, 1863?

A. The par of the loan—

Mr. Lilly: Face Value.

The Witness: The face value of the loan was entered as its value on June 20th, 1863. The face value of the loan should have been entered on the schedule of January 1st, 1861, page 13.

Mr. Holt: That was one of the items is my statement likewise.

Mr. Harrison: I do not think you mentioned it, Judge, but that is immaterial. I have no doubt that you intended to mention it.

The Master: I do not think you did mention it, Judge.

Mr. Holt: I had them checked on a book here.

The Master: The Judge's statement may be amended.

Mr. Harrison: I make no point of that.

The Master: I do not think you did mention it as a matter of fact.

Mr. Holt: I would not swear to it at all.

Q. I observe on your 1863 schedule immediately opposite the entry of $800,000, the amount of this loan, as constituting its value June 20th, 1863, you have written under the column "disposed of for" as follows: "Turned over to A. M. & O." If it was turned over to the A. M. & O. and covered by the mortgage of four million dollars, the second mortgage, does not this constitute a double charge?

A. No, sir, I hardly think it does.

Q. Why not?

A. Because the fourth item in this journal entry reads: "All claim the State may have versus the South Side Railroad Company on account of the principal and interest due upon the loan of $800,000," but no amount is carritd out into the total column to show how much there was due on this loan, either principal or interest. It is again merely a matter what I considered at the time as of a release of possible claims and not a transfer of a principal amount.

Q. The fourth paragraph of the deed under which the four million dollar mortgage was created relating to this particular loan reads as follows: "All and whatever claims, rights and privileges which are accrued to the State of Virginia under and by reason of a deed executed by the South Side Railroad Company to the Board of Public Works to secure the payment, principal and interest, of a loan of $800,000, made by the Commonwealth to the said Railroad Company under an Act of the Assembly passed February 6th, 1853, and modified by an Act of Assembly passed January 18th, 1866." Do I understand you now to say that you do not for the purposes of your statement consider that any part of the loan was turned over, transferred or assigned to the Atlantic, Mississippi & Ohio Railroad Company under and by virtue of that deed?

A. No, sir, you do not.

Q. Well, what have I to understand?

A. You are to understand exactly what is said, that all claim the State may have versus the South Side Railroad on account of the principal and interest due upon the loan of $800,000, which simply means that any title or right or anything that they had was turned over to them and that no amount was specifically mentioned as the value of that loan; it was merely rights under a loan of that amount. This opinion is further influenced by the immediately preceding item of this transfer which is on page 56 of the printed record, and numbered 3 under bonds and notes, where it says "Unpaid balance of the $300,000 loan on the Norfolk & Petersburg Road," and that item is carried out, $163,000, in the amounts which are set out as cancelled by this loan. Therefore, as no specific amounts were carried out as unpaid balances and merely their rights under it surrendered in the journal entry, I have not included any value in this $4,000,000 as far as money goes.

Q. Did you find that anyone else had any interest in this loan except the State of Virginia?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. Did you find that any part of it had been paid off?

A. No, sir, I did not find any record of any part of it being paid off.

Q. Then if no part of this had been paid off and no one had any interest in it but the State of Virginia and she transferred all her right and title in it to the Atlantic, Mississippi & Ohio, would not that have carried the entire loan?

A. Yes, sir; I think that would have carried the entire loan.

Q. Then if that is true why isn't this a double charge?

A. For the reason that there is no sum specifically entered in the $4,000,000 is the compensation, amount to considerably more and that the sums which are mentioned in the transaction where the $4,000,000 is the compensation, amount to considerably more than the $4,000,000.

Q. But here is a specific sum mentioned in the assignment, all the State's right and title in a loan of $800,000. If none of it had been paid and no one else had any interest in it but the State of Virginia, why then was not the whole of the $800,000 mentioned transferred by the assignment? You have just said, did you not, that that would be true?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then if that is true why is this not a double entry?

A. I made the statement quite frequently—

The Master: Is that the only reason that you can give that it is not a double entry?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

Q. That is just what I was going to ask you, if that is the only reason that you can give.

The Witness: No, your Honor.

The Master: If you have another reason, go ahead and give it.

The Witness: No, sir; the reasons would be simply in amplification and repetition of what I have already stated. It is not necessary to repeat that.

The Master: Then those are all the reasons?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

Mr. Holt: May I ask a question right there to clarify it?

The Master: I have no objection unless they have.

Mr. Harrison: I would rather you would reserve it.

Mr. Holt: I will do so then.

Mr. Harrison: Because I think I have clarified this thing. I have no doubt that you have got some clarification.

Mr. Holt: One thing is axiomatic to my mind, which would not take more than three words to explain. I will not persist.

Q. Now, will you turn to page 32 of the printed exhibits, called asset No. 8, Class C, wherein you state as follows: "The loan itself, asset C-9, was never paid." That is the South Side Railroad Company loan of $800,000, is it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then that statement was followed with this further statement: "It was turned over with the stock to the A. M. & O. R. R., with other roads for $4,000,000." If according to your testimony as shown there the loan was never paid but was turned over as you also note to the A. M. & O. and other roads for $4,000,000, why did you charge it under Class C against Virginia?

A. I did not charge the $4,000,000 to the State of Virginia, as will be seen by reference to my summary of charges.

By Mr. Anderson:

Q. You mean your summary for 1861?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. I am not at all concerned with what you had included in what you describe as $4,000,000 in your summary, but I directed your attention to your own statement wherein you say that the State of Virginia turned over all her right, title and interest in that loan of $800,000 to the Atlantic, Mississippi & Ohio Railway Company, which was secured by a general mortgage, which along with a number of other items aggregating a large amount was secured by a mortgage for $4,000,000. If that is true that the State's interest in the loan which included its interest in the entire loan, as it has not appeared that any part of it was paid off, was turned over to the Atlantic, Mississippi & Ohio Road, my question is why have you charged it as a separate charge against Virginia?

A. Because the $4,000,000 which you mentioned is not charged against the State of Virginia; it is not on the summary and it is not charged.

Q. Is that an additional reason now that you are giving for it not being a double charge?

A. It is the reason that it is not a double charge.

Q. It is a new reason, isn't it?

A. It is a new reason and it is the reason why it is not a double charge.

Q. You were asked a little while ago by the Master if you could give any further reasons than the one you had already given, and you said you could not except by amplifyig what you had already said. Now, you are furnishing us with a new reason, are you not?

A. Yes, sir, I am. The answer before had reference to the fact that this was included in a statement wherein I showed that certain items were disposed of for $4,000,000. That $4,000,000 was never charged by me to the State of Virginia and therefore items of duplicate charge do not enter into the account at all.

Q. The State of Virginia turned over to the Atlantic, Mississippi & Ohio, or rather assigned to the Atlantic, Mississippi & Ohio, a number of debts and claims due to her, considerably in excess of $4,000,000, did she not?

A. Yes, sir.

The Master: There were fourteen items in all.

Mr. Harrison: Quite a number of them.

The Master: Yes, fourteen.

Q. And they footed up an amount considerably in excess of $4,000,000, but they were all turned over for the $4,000,000, were they not?

A. Yes, sir, they were. But we made no claim for the $4,000,000 in our exhibits or in our summary.

By Mr. Anderson:

Q. Either 1861 or 1863?

A. Either in 1861 or 1863. Our claim for those securities was based upon an entirely different computation.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. What does your 1861 exhibit show that you claim?

A. $4,276,044.39.

Q. And what does your exhibit for 1863 show that you claim?

A. $4,566,015.61.

Q. Then in both cases you charged more than $4,000,000, didn't you, to the State of Virginia?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Anderson: I have here $4,487,000.

Mr. Lilly: I expect that was changed.

The Witness: This will be found upon page 57 of the printed record. The 1863 sum will be found on Defendant's Exhibit 6, 1863, page 45 of the blue prints.

Q. On page 57 of the printed record, on your Exhibit No. 6, you have not extended any value opposite the South Side Railroad Company loan of $800,000, have you?

A. No, sir.

Q. You have marked opposite that no claim, no claim, too indeterminate.

The Master: That is struck out.

Mr. Harrison: I understand.

Q. You desired that struck out, you say?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Because that was a memorandum you had made for your private guidance, did you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you mean by that that your private judgment was that it was no claim?

A. No, sir; the matter was that it had been considered in other respect, that these items had been taken up before, and that what balance would be left over, if any, or if payments had been made would be too indeterminate for me to make any notation of them at this point. I had afterwards determined just that there were no payments on the South Side loan, and that the Norfolk & Petersburg loan had been paid, all except $137,000, which I had not determined at that point; and therefore that notation was left on my working papers.

Q. But my question is, that your notation of no claim, too indeterminate, must have meant, if the language means what it purports to mean—it seems to amuse you?

A. Decidedly.

Q. Well, I am going to continue to do it, because I always study to please. My question is, that your notation of no claim, too indeterminate, must have meant, if the language means what it purports to mean, that you could base no claim, for the reason given on that item, and your explanation of your purpose to strike it out was that that was intended for your private guidance and not to be testified to. Now, my question is, if that was true as a matter for your private guidance, why is it not true for all purposes, for public expression, for the purpose of your testimony here?

A. For the reason that that being on my working papers at the time I was working on it, the amount of this loan which was to be turned over to the Atlantic, Mississippi & Ohio under this date, and therefore enter into the value, was not determined by me and was intended at first to be taken up here as a balance, afterwards I found that it could not be, and the notation was left in that form.

Q. Do you now mean to say that you subsequently found that it could be determined and that you were mistaken in your opinion that it was indeterminate?

A. Yes, sir; that is a notation which was made on private papers where you are not always strictly classifying your ideas but are guiding yourself, and I never intended that for any more than a personal guidance to me in making further investigations. It is quite unfortunate that the wording was put in that way. I think I have explained that several times.

Q. Does your explanation mean that you have taken this $800,000 South Side Railroad Company loan out of the Atlantic, Mississippi & Ohio holdings where it was placed by the State of Virginia and have charged it as a separate item under C?

A. Yes, sir; it means that I have charged it under the statement C. I have not removed it from the $4,000,000.

Q. Then what do mean by your explanation of no claim, too indeterminate, that you have charged it elsewhere? If you charged it elsewhere you must have taken it out of the place where it had belonged, didn't you?

A. No, sir; I think not. It was to my mind necessary to mention that matter as being in here and I see no impropriety in the way that I have treated it whatever.

By the Master:

Q. In one of your answers in stating the disposition of the $800,000 loan you stated that it was surrendered. What do you mean by that? Is there any entry on these books anywhere that shows that this was surrendered?

A. No, sir.

Q. What do you mean by that, by the term surrendered?

A. I mean just the notation which we have just quoted on——

Q. You do not mean this notation about no claim, indeterminate?

A. No, sir; I mean on page 56 of the printed record, item No. 4, under bonds and notes, It is surrendered under the following terms or under the following words—

Q. Then what you mean is it was assigned under this deed?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That makes it all clear. I could not quite understand what you meant by saying surrendered. If that is what you mean, you mean it was part of the items that were assigned?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then it is all right. I know what you mean now. I could not seem to make out what you meant by surrendered. Surrendered of course would be returned to the company that gave the loan. That was not this fact at all, as I understand it?

A. No, sir.

Q. Am I right about that?

A. They gave up their rights in it, whatever they may be.

Q. But that is what you mean, you simply mean that they transferred and assigned whatever claim they had when you used the term surrendered?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then I know what you mean.

Mr. Holt: He used surrendered instead of assigned.

The Witness: I meant by that to make a distinction between that and a sale for a specific sum.

Q. I must say that I do not think you illuminate the situation any. What in your mind by the way is the distinction between transfer and assignment and sale?

A. An assignment and transfer may be made without specified consideration of value; a sale must have a specified consideration of value in it.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. We will take up now the next item, No. 10 on the printed schedule, Exhibit No. 3, page 13, described as Norfolk & Petersburg Railroad Company loan, $300,000. You have extended under the column Value, January 1st, 1861, $137,000 as constituting the value of that loan at that time. What does that $137,000 represent?

A. It represents the proportion or the amount of this loan which had been paid prior to its final disposal, amongst other securities, to the Atlantic, Mississippi & Ohio Railroad.

Q. Where is the rest of it, $163,000., charged?

A. It appears on page 179, Journal D, Internal Improvement Fund—

The Master: His inquiry is, where is the charge here in these proceedings, he does not mean on the original books.

The Witness: It is not charged at all.

Q. Why not?

By The Master:

Q. The question is, why not.

A. I think, your Honor, it should have been charged.

Q. Your answer to that is, then, that it was overlooked, that it ought to have been charged?

A. It was overlooked; it should have been charged.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. How was that $137,000 paid?

A. I do not know.

Q. In money or in bonds?

A. I do not know. There is nothing in the books showing that payment; it is only an inference from the fact that when this loan was turned over to the Atlantic, Mississippi & Ohio it was turned over as the balance of the loan, $163,000. The inference is unavoidable therefore that $137,000 of it must have been paid in the interim. There is no entry that I can find showing in any way that payment.

By The Master:

Q. Then that accounts for the whole principal of the loan, and it proceeds on the assumption that there was no overdue interest?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And about the overdue interest, if any, you have left that out of the account altogether?

A. I have left it out because there was nothing to indicate whether there was any overdue interest or not.

Q. The assumption is that the interest was unpaid and accrued, and therefore should be added to principal, is it not? If there is nothing on the books to show the payment of any interest on this amount, the assumption is that it drew interest, and therefore interest had accrued, and in order to get at the accurate amount of the loan you would take the principal and the accrued interest?

A. No, sir; your Honor, they had been paying interest on that loan right along, from the time, and I did not make any specific—

Q. Well, if the interest had been subsequently paid up to date of course that is taken care of?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is in accordance with your explanation the other day?

A. Yes, sir. That is shown on the next schedule, which I suppose will be arrived at in a short time.

Q. Is there anything in this original record or in these reports that you have had access to that gives any reason in detail why the aggregate of these 14 securities was lumped at the sum of $4,000,000 or why any of them were carried out at the prices fixed, or do you just simply find the entries and that is all there is to it?

A. Just find the entries, and we have filed the whole Journal entry of that as a supplementary answer to this—

Q. Not as a suppiementary answer, but as a supplementary exhibit?

A. As a supplementary exhibit.

Q. If the whole journal entry is in, that covers the scope of my inquiry?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I remember now that you quoted from the Journal entry in one or two instances.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But I had forgotten that the whole journal entry was put in as an exhibit?

A. It was.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. You have referred in your Exhibit No. 3, Asset No. 10, page 34, of the printed record, notation, to a report made by John O. Steger as Senate Document No. 2, pages 19 and 20, and dated 1874 and 1875, and transmitted to the Senate as an appendix to the Governor's message. Did not that report show how this $137,000 was paid?

A. No, sir.

Q. Your own notation there, going further, shows, "The report further says that the book entries were missing and that he counted the bonds in many instances"—"There is shown to have been paid on this loan $151,524.49 and the report further says that the book entries were missing and that he counted the bonds in many instances, and that report can be relied upon as very nearly, if not absolutely, accurate." Would not your own notation indicate that it had been paid in bonds?

A. That would look so; but his reference that he counted the bonds in many instances refers to other items upon which he reported besides this $151,524.49.

Q. As a matter of fact, his report applied strictly to that loan of $300,000 this portion of it, this portion of the loan of $300,000, and upon this loan his report shows that the company paid as follows, 1867, new registered stock, $65,436.90; 1868, old registered stock, $60,500; new coupon bonds cancelled, $7,500; 1860, old registered stock, $8,000 fraction new, $87.59 new registered stock $10,000 footing up $151,524.49 as shown in your notation, with this accompanying note found in Stegar's report, the coupon bonds paid by the company, $7,500 were cancelled; the balance due on the loan was merged in the contract between the State and the Atlantic, Mississippi & Ohio Railroad Company for $4,000,000 which is still due and unpaid. So it appears then that the $137,000 was paid in the bonds of the Company?

A. Do I understand you to say bonds of the company or bonds of Virginia?

Q. I mean to say bonds of Virginia of course.

A. I am perfectly willing to accept as a fact that the payment was made in bonds.

Q. Do you charge Virginia with any value for stock held here in the Norfolk & Petersburg Railroad Company on January 1st, 1861?

A. No, sir; I have made no charge against the Norfolk & Petersburg Railroad for stock held by the State of Virginia.

The Master: You mean you have made no charge against Virginia?

The Witness: Against Virginia for stock held by Virginia in the Norfolk & Petersburg Railroad.

Q. Did you make any charge against Virginia for stock of the Norfolk & Petersburg Railroad Company, June 20th, 1863?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. To what extent?

A. $1,199,970.

Q. Why did you charge Virginia with that valuation of stock in this road June 20th, 1863, and make no charge against her on the same account January 1st, 1861?

A. That was in error. There should have been a charge made against her for the par of that stock on January 1st, 1861.

Mr. Holt: Is that one of the roads I mentioned in my statement?

The Master: No, I do not think you had that in, Judge, I do not remember that you did. That is not referred to on the schedule. The schedule is simply silent on that.

Mr. Holt: I just want to get them all, that is all.

The Master: You will not be censured for lack of diligence on that line.

Mr. Harrison: Judge, I will understand that you intended to include all such items.

Mr. Holt: Yes, that was my idea.

Q. You have got opposite your charge against Virginia of $1,199,970, as the value of this stock June 20th, 1863, this notation: turned over to A. M. & O. What did you mean by that?

A. I meant by that that this stock was turned over to the A. M. & O. Railroad Company in the transaction which we have mentioned wherein four million dollars was the consideration.

Q. Well, if the State's interest in that stock was turned over, as you have stated, to the Atlantic, Mississippi and Ohio, this is a double charge, is it not?

A. Yes, sir, it is. I have made the claim there twice; having made the claim for this stock on Defendant's Exhibit 6, 1863, page 45 of the blue prints.

Q. The next item is No. 11, Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, page 13, of the printed record—

A. Before you ask this question, Mr. Harrison, may I state that Mr. Stegar in his report, as shown in printed document No. 2, appendix to the Governor's messages for 1874 and 1875, on pages 18 and 19, does discuss other matters than this particular loan.

Q. The report is a very full and comprehensive one?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And embraces a variety of matters?

A. Yes, sir.

By the Master:

Q. Is it to be understood from that that the items referred to in your notation relate to other matters, or that they relate to the matters suggested in the note?

A. It relates to this, that the item of $151,000 was stated as specific payment, and the amounts noted; but that the notation which I have used, that he had examined and counted the bonds in several instances and so on, refers not only to that item but to a number of others.

Mr. Harrison: That has no bearing here.

Q. That does not affect the significance of the $151,000?

A. No, sir.

Q. But that is your point?

A. Yes, sir, that he had reported on other matters.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. Now we come to item No. 11, Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, page 13 of the printed record, reading as follows: Roanoke Navigation Company stock, the par value of which seems to be $80,000.

What value does that exhibit show that you placed upon that stock January 1st, 1861?

A. $3,832, being marked with a double star, and being the sales value.

Q. Then on the 1st of January, 1861, as shown by this exhibit, you accepted as the then value of that stock what was realized for it after the war on a sale in 1882, did you not?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. Now, in 1863, on June 20th, 1863, on the blue print No. 7, what did you charge to Virginia as the value of that stock?

A. $80,000, being par.

Q. Why did you charge $3,832 on January 1st, 1861, as its value and $80,000 on June 20th, 1863, as its value?

A. That is in the same category as these previous items, where the item should have been charged at $80,000 on January 1st, 1861.

Q. And that error you wish to correct by substituting $80,000 for $3,832 on your 1861 exhibit?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That $80,000 simply represents, as shown by the books, the cost of the stock, does it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. It has no other bearing or relation to its value than its cost, does it?

A. Its cost and par.

Q. Well, it is the par value, and it cost par, and that the State paid $80,000 for it, and other than that it has no relation to its value, has it?

A. None.

Q. Now, the next item is No. 12, which is on the same exhibit, page 13 of the printed record, described as Alexandria Canal Company stock, $272,000, the par value of it. What did you place on that exhibit as the value of that stock January 1st, 1861?

A. On page 13 of the printed record I have carried opposite that, under the value column, $764.47, marked with a double star, which means the sales value.

Q. And that was realized for it in what year?

A. July 1st, 1887, as shown upon page 36 of the printed record.

Q. The same stock you show on your 1863 exhibit as having a value of $272,000 June 20th, 1863, as against $764.47 as shown on your January, 1861, exhibit. Do I understand that that was an inadvertence also?

A. That is in the same category as the previous ones, and is desired to be corrected or amended as they were.

Q. By placing on your January, 1861, schedule $272,000 instead of $764.47 as its value?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That $272,000 simply, as shown by the books, represented the cost of the stock?

A. The cost of the stock and its par.

Q. Did it show that it had been paid for?

A. I did not go back to see whether it had been paid for or not. I only know that it was carried at par on the books of the State of Virginia. I did not go back to see whether it had been paid for in actual cash up to its par value, or whether they had received a higher par value than they had invested money.

Q. At all events it would represent in no event anything more than the cost, would it?

A. No, sir, nothing more than the cost to the State.

Q. And would have no other bearing on its value than that?

A. None.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Was that its par, may I be permitted to ask?

A. Yes, sir, it was.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. The next item I find is No. 13, on Defendant's Exhibit 3, page 13 of the printed record, described as Upper Appomattox Company stock, the par of which is stated to be $56,500; the value of which, on January 1st, 1861, you have placed as $16,144.26; that is correct, is it not?

A. Yes, sir, that is carried at that value and is marked with the double star, which means that it is the sales value.

Q. That then was the sum the State realized for her interest in that company at what period?

A. In 1875, first payment, 1881, second payment, 1884 final payment, as shown on page 37 of the printed record.

Q. That stock you have valued on the 20th of June, 1863, as shown by your blue print, Exhibit No. 7, at $56,500. Is that one of the items also that was inadvertently made and that you wish to correct by placing on the January 1st, 1861, exhibit, the par of the stock as you have on the June 20th, 1863, exhibit?

A. Yes, sir, it is.

Q. That sum represents the par and the cost of the stock?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In respect to that entry do you know whether it was paid—I mean the full subscription was paid or not? If not, you can just say so.

A. I do not know.

Q. But at all events it has no other bearing upon the value of the stock then to show that it originally cost the State $56,500?

A. That is right, and was as far as I know the par value of the stock held.

Q. The next item on the same exhibit, page 13 of the printed record, numbered 14, is described as Dismal Swamp Canal Company stock, $190,000 par. What value do you place on that stock on January 1st, 1861, as shown by that exhibit.

A. $9,935.99.

Q. And how did you arrive at that?

A. There were 760 shares, $250 each, being $190,000, and it was sold for $9,935.99.

Q. In what year?

A. In 1874.

Q. And so far as this exhibit is concerned you adopted that price realized for the stock in 1874 as its value on January 1, 1861?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That same stock is shown on your exhibit, page 7, for 1863, as having a value of $190,000, on June 20th, 1863; that is the par of the stock, is it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And is this also one of the items which you wish to amend?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You wish then to change your 1861 schedule by striking out $35,925.99 and substituting in its place $190,000, is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That $190,000 represents as shown by the books I suppose that you examined the cost of the stock as well as its par?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Holt: You are making our corrections very complete indeed, and I thank you and congratulate you.

Q. And the figures have no other bearing upon the value of the stock at either period than as showing what the stock originally cost the State and its par value?

A. None.

Q. The next item shown on this exhibit, page 13 of the printed record, No. 15, I mean is numbered 15 and described as loan to Washington College, $2,000; you carried that as of a value on January 1, 1861, at $2,000, is that correct?

A. It is correct, yes, sir.

Q. Do you wish to change that?

A. No, sir, that is the correct amount.

Q. That same amount is shown on your 1863 schedule, is it not, as the value of the loan on June 20th, 1863?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you wish to make any change in that?

A. No, sir.

Q. The next item shown on this exhibit, page 13, of the printed record, is numbered 16 and described as Richmond Academy bonds, $400, which is extended on January 1, 1861, under the column value at $400. Is that correct?

A. Yes, sir, it is.

Q. And the same amount is shown on your schedule for 1863, page No. 7 of the blue prints, as having a value June 20th, 1863, of $400. Is that correct?

A. It is.

Q. Were those two loans paid?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you tell us when?

A. The $2,000 loaned to Washington College was paid on January 1, 1896.

Q. And the Richmond Academy?

A. The Richmond Academy was paid on February 5, 1896. The dates are shown on pages 39 and 40 of the printed record.

Q. Now, the next item on this exhibit, page 13 of the printed record, and numbered 17, is described as a claim against the United States Government, put down under the column paid at $298,369.74, and extended at the same figures under the column Value January 1, 1861. Now, will you explain that item for us and your reasons for entering it there as a charge against Virginia, having a value on January 1, 1861, of $298,369.74.

A. Yes, sir; as shown on page 41 of the printed record, the principal of the loan made by Virginia to the United States Government, July 1, 1814, was $298,369.74. This loan was afterwards paid in full as shown by the same page of the printed record with interest in full up to the date of settlement, which was fixed between Virginia and the government as February 11, 1894, although the settlement was not made until 1903 actually.

Q. How much money did the United States Government pay to Virginia in settlement of the claim?

A. In acual money they paid over $5.50.

Q. On what date did you say?

A. It was in 1903, the settlement being made as of the date of February 11th, 1894.

Q. In other words, the result was reached as of February, 1894, and settlement made on that basis in 1903?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. By a check from the Government to Virginia of $5.50?

A. Yes, sir; and the return to Virginia of certain Virginia State bonds.

Mr. Holt: How much were the bonds?

The Witness: The principal, $581,800 of Virginia bonds; Chesapeake & Ohio guaranteed bonds, principal $13,000; interest on the $594,800, being the sum of the Virginia bonds and the Chesapeake & Ohio guaranteed bonds, from January 1, 1861, to February 11, 1894, $1,181,669.33, making a total of principal and interest of $1,776,469.33, from which is deducted the interest which Virginia had paid, 1867 to 1870, of four per cent. on the principal of the $581,800 State bonds of $69,816, which left $1,706,653.33 as the Virginia payment.

The Witness: I think I had better continue that entry to its end. There was also paid to the restored State of Virginia, no date given, $16,928.50, and cash paid to Virginia by the United States, as a balance of settlement, of $5.50, making a total payment of $1,723,582.53, which payment was in bonds of Virginia and cash.

Q. What you are now reading from is the statement of the account shown on page 41 of the printed exhibits, is it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The statement of the account between the State of Virginia and the Government wherein the respective claims were balanced?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Harrison: If your Honor please, we expect to file with the record the report of the Second Auditor.

The Master: Relating to this same subject matter?

Mr. Harrison: Yes, sir, on September 30th, 1904, which deals with that subject.

Q. The second item to which I ask your attention, shown on Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, page 13 of the printed record, and numbered 18, is described as the claim against Selden, Withers & Company. Nothing is stated under the column par for that claim, but under the column headed value January 1st, 1861, is given the following figure, $152,023.04. What does that represent, those figures that are set down as constituting the value of that item?

A. Excuse me, you have misquoted it, it is $132,000.

Q. No, I did not.

A. That figure that you have quoted, $152,023.04 is placed there in order to reconcile the statement which I have made upon pages 42 and 43 of the printed record with the supplemental answer. The amount which I have taken into consideration as the value on June 20th, 1863, is $132,842.74.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Is that the same as the value on January 1st, 1861?

A. Yes, sir, that is the value of January 1st, 1861.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. Do you mean to say that you want to correct the January 1st, 1861, exhibit by stating the value at $132,842.74 instead of $152,023.04?

A. Yes, sir, I do. That claim of Selden, Withers & Company should have been $132,842.74, the same as it is in 1863. That is an error in making this summary. The amount due is $132,842.74. And since I am correcting that summary I will ask permission to include this with the other corrections.

Q. The next and last item, No. 19, on this printed Exhibit No. 3, page 13 of the record, is described as Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac Railroad loan. It was not a loan, was it? They were dividend bonds, were they not?

A. Yes, sir; they were dividend bonds.

Q. Then that word loan ought to be substituted for dividend bonds?

The Master: You mean that the word dividend bonds ought to be substituted for the word loan?

Mr. Harrison: Yes.

A. Yes, sir, to describe it exactly.

Q. You show the par of that was $149,984?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you give the same figures as constituting the value of those dividend bonds January 1st, 1861.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did you arrive at that?

A. For the reason that that was the face of the bonds, and they afterwards were paid in full with interest.

Q. When were they paid and in what currency? Or you can just state when they were paid.

A. $27,520 of this loan was paid on March 13th, 1863; the balance of the loan was paid on July 1st, 1863, as shown on page 44 of the printed record.

Q. Then these dividend bonds, as shown by you, were paid off during the midst of the war, were they not?

A. Yes, sir, in 1863.

Q. On your exhibit for 1863 you show the amount of those dividend bonds as paid and possessing that value, $122,464. That refers to the payment made after June 20th, 1863, does it not?

A. Yes, sir, the $27,520 having been paid prior to June 20th, 1863.

Q. And that is not included then?

A. No, sir.

Mr. Harrison: What is the next item that we come to?

The Master: Does that complete your schedule?

Mr. Harrison: Yes.

The Master: I understand it to be conceded that the schedules that have been filed as exhibits on the part of the defendant, relative to this list of items found on page 13 of the printed record of the schedules, as to January 1st, 1861, and also as to June 20th, 1863, and the supporting schedule, that as to all of those the amounts therein stated and the computations therein made are conceded to be correctly stated and correctly made, so far as the figures are concerned. Am I right about that, Mr. Potter?

Mr. Potter: Yes, sir.

The Master: Then that may go on the record. That undoubtedly is the obvious inference from the examination, but there is no harm in having these matters from time to time cleaned right up. That takes care of the schedules up to this point, both for 1861 and for 1863; and the suggestion that has been heretofore made in relation to the accuracy of the schedules as to the amounts stated and the computations made is understood by me to apply to the schedules for 1861 and June 20th, 1863, as they are related to the items preceding this schedule that I have just referred to. So that up to date all of the schedules for 1861 and 1863 are taken care of by this admission. That is your understanding?

Mr. Holt: Yes, sir. And if Mr. Harrison is now through with this Class C, if that is the one, I want to hand to the stenographer the promised copy of the deed that was introduced the other day from the Commonwealth of Virginia to the Richmond & Alleghany Railway Company, conveying the property of the James River & Kanawha Company. I am only making a record of that because I do not want to be charged with its loss hereafter.

The Master: I think perhaps, as it is twenty minutes of six, that this may be as good a place to stop as any, and we will suspend until Monday morning at ten o'clock. And I think we have made pretty good progress.

Adjourned to September 7th, 1914, at 10 A. M.

BEFORE THE MASTER.

Richmond, Virginia, September 7, 1914.

Present the same counsel as on Saturday last.

Mr. Lilly: Before proceeding, if the Master please, I would like to ask the opposing counsel if they have any schedules or data to submit to our side, that we may be going over it and checking it.

Mr. Harrison: No, we have no schedules.

Mr. Holt : If it be not improper, may I inquire whether or not you will have any schedules, Mr. Harrison, on the subject of market quotations.

Mr. Harrison: Yes, we are going to introduce some testimony on that subject, and will probably do it in the form of a prepared statement or memorandum.

The Master: That you will submit to them as soon as you have it prepared.

Mr. Harrison: Yes, as soon as we get it ready.

Mr. Conrad: I understood Judge Holt to have said the other day, I may have misunderstood him, that you have a witness to prove those things.

Mr. Holt: We said that we had a man to examine them, not Mr. Hillman.

The Master: You said it was some one else.

Mr. Holt: Yes.

The Master: The statement was that they had an accountant making that up. But that being so, you want what they have on that line?

Mr. Holt: Yes. We may not offer anything on that line at all on account of the condition the quotations are in.

The Master: Exactly so.

Continuation of the cross-examination of

CONWAY W. HILLMAN.

The Master: I have a little examination of the witness I would like to make providing you are about to go to the next paragraph.

Mr. Harrison: Yes, I am about to take up the next paragraph. I was waiting for Major Anderson.

The Master: Then if you are through I want to make an inquiry or two, and I will do that while the General is coming in, if it is agreeable.

By The Master:

Q. Mr. Hillman, in the case of any of these railroads whose trial balances or annual statements appear in the record have made any charge for depreciation during the period covered by the statements, in what item of the trial balance would you expect to find the charge reflected or indicated?

A. In the Maintenance of Way and Structures account, sub-heading, Repairs of Buildings and Fixtures.

Q. Well, do you mean that a depreciation charge would be charged to maintenance account?

A. Yes, sir. It is now charged as maintenance account under a separate heading.

Q. Well, you mean under existing conditions?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But as a matter of bookkeeping, if an annual charge or depreciation had been made, you would expect that to be reflected in the operating expenses or the maintenance charges?

A. Yes, sir.

W. Well, we have not any maintenance charges in any of these statements. Now take for instance, there is the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac Railroad Company, page 4. I just call your attention to that. That is the printed record. All we have there on the asset side is the cost of road, new cost of superstructure, then engineering expense, and debts due the company and bills receivable, etc. and investments. Now we do not have any account there relating to maintenance or operating expenses. What I want to get at is, if there had been any charge made during this period for depreciation, would you find it indicated in any of these items, and if so in what item?

A. In the item on page 5, expenses of transportation since the commencement of the work, March 31, 1859, etc.

Q. That is, it would be a liability?

A. Yes, sir, operating expenses. Does you Honor wish an explanation?

Q. Yes. What I want to get at is whether there is anything in these trial balances that will give us any information as to whether or not any annual charge for depreciation was made?

A. There is nothing in the trial balances which would give you that, and to the best of my recollection there is no entry on the details of the operating expenses, which are also on file in these volumes of reports, which would indicate that there had been a direct charge to depreciation. In those days it was repairs and renewals, and renewals were supposed to keep the property up to date.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. How do you know what renewals were supposed to be fifty odd years ago?

By The Master:

Q. There is nothing in the accounts to indicate it one way or another?

A. No, sir.

Q. Why should not a charge for depreciation reduce the construction cost? Isn't that the real essence of a charge for depreciation? For instance, you have a property that has cost a million. If it has depreciated $100,000, why does not that leave the actual cost $900,000? This is simply for purposes of illustration. I am seeking now illumination with reference to getting at the value of the property. For instance, if a property cost a million and it depreciated $250,000 during a period of years, or even $50,000 how can it with any propriety be still said to be worth a million or to be carried as of a million dollars in value upon the books of the company?

A. For the reason that this depreciation cost which is charged against operating expense is supposed to be put back into the property, not as repairs, but to renew a depreciation as distinct from actual repairs. A building, in spite of whatever repairs you make, will gradually become old and depreciated where it is necessary that it be renewed, and against that the roads are allowed to charge up to their operating expenses a certain amount of depreciation; the same with their rolling stock, and especially with their rolling stock. That is anticipating the time when despite all repairs that you can make to a car or to a building, that car will become obsolete or depreciated beyond any repair, and it will be necessary to renew it or get a new one.

Q. We have not got anything here that gives us any information as to whether or not there was a renewal account?

A. No, sir, there is nothing to show a renewal account.

Q. Whether the renewal account and repair account were all charged up against operating expenses or not?

A. No, sir.

Q. And we have nothing either that indicates depreciation. The figure you gave for depreciation for rolling stock was twenty-five years, that is, based upon renewal at the end of twenty-five years?

A. For engines, locomotives, yes, sir; about twelve years for freight cars.

Q. And how about passenger cars?

A. Passenger cars run about twenty years.

Q. Those all originally of course have gone into the construction cost item?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And if renewed and paid for by operating expenses, why they have been taken care of on that side of the account?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Assuming that to be the fact?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But in the absence of any knowledge of the fact, it is altogether a matter, I suppose of speculation?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you keep in your bookkeeping, in order to be able to establish from your books, a presumptive value of the road? Do you keep a constant figure for its construction?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is, you start out with a total construction and that item never changes?

A. That is right.

Q. If that is affected one way or another it is affected by whatever may be charged into or out of operating expenses?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And taken care of by operating expenses?

A. Yes, sir, with this other statement that you will find in the reports now that they have the cost of road and they have deducted an amount of depreciation from that cost.

Q. Under existing conditions do they have an operating construction account predicated upon the amount of depreciation from time to time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why was not that true away back in 1850 and 1860?

A. For the reason that at that time we did not take into consideration depreciation at all. We had an account which we called, instead of repairs, we called it repairs and renewals, and where we were supposed from time to time to renew the rolling stock or to renew our buildings to the 100 per cent full value and take care of our depreciation by renewals.

Q. Do you mean that there was an arbitrary charge to renewals irrespective of the actual fact, in order to take charge of theoretical depreciation?

A. No, sir; it was the actual amount expended.

Q. Whether or not that took care of depreciation depended altogether upon the amount of the renewals?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. If the road was run properly and economically and kept up in first class shape, why then the renewal charge might take care of the depreciation?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. On the contrary, if the road was run with as little expense as possible and clear away down to the bone, you might not get much of any repairs and you would not get anything for depreciation?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Whether these factors have any influence or not in the value of the road would depend altogether upon the history of each particular road in that respect?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what the policy of the road was?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. If it was the policy of the road to minimize renewals and repairs and increase dividends, why, the natural tendency of that would be to decrease value, notwithstanding dividends may have been paid?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. On the other hand, if it was the policy of the road to make liberal charges for depreciation, keep the renewal account or keep renewals up so that the road was in first class condition, that might minimize the dividend paying value and still leave the property worth very much more than the property would be under other conditions?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The result of all that is here, that with these statements before us, we have not any definite information as to what policy was pursued in connection with any road?

A. That is right.

Q. Under these circumstances, state whether or not in your judgment the book value, or what was in your judgment the book value, under those conditions, should be entitled to receive in determining actual cash market value on a particular day. What I mean now is a practical proposition, with our lack of knowledge and information of the conditions to which I have just called your attention.

A. As roads were operated at that date, I would not like to accept the book value of the stock as its actual value.

Q. Well would it be fair to say this—I don't want you to go any farther than you can properly go, but I want to get your candid judgment about it—would it be fair to say that under the conditions developed, that the element of book value was of more or less doubtful value in determining the actual cash market value on any particular day? Is that a fair statement of it in your judgment?

A. Yes, sir; that is fair.

Q. It is impossible of course for you to state anything definite in relation to it? That is, you cannot minimize by a percentage, because you have not any basis upon which to make any calculation; that is correct is it not?

A. That is correct.

Q. And of course what you have done, and what we will all have to do of course, is to take the best evidence possible, and then reach the safest and most satisfactory conclusion?

A. Yes, sir.

The Master: That is all. You may proceed.

The Witness: I understand, your Honor, that you do not care to have me go into any particular discussion of these different roads and the amount of their operating expenses with reference to what might or might not be a proper charge, and all that.

The Master: I will tell you what I think perhaps you had better do; of course I have developed this general proposition, and my notion is that if that needs any further explanation I think you had better take it up with the counsel for West Virginia, and let them exercise their judgment as to what in addition had better be done with reference to the details. Of course the embarrassing position that we are all in I am not expressing any opinion one way or the other, but this perhaps embarrasses me more than it does you—but the embarrassing position that we are in is the paucity of the proof, and it may be that I will have more difficulty coming from each quarter so far as that is concerned. I do not know how that may be. My only purpose is so far as I can t get into the record the most definite facts upon which I will have to reach my conclusion. And in this respect I wanted to get Mr. Hillman's judgment as to the particular weight to be given to this particular factor. Now if there are any particular roads as to which there is data in existence that enables you to make any more definite statement, that may be one thing; but my suggestion would be now—I do not wish to take it out of the hands of the counsel for West Virginia—my suggestion would be that the wiser thing for you to do would be to take the matter up with the counsel for West Virginia, and let them pursue it farther along in detail, if they see fit. I have not any personal objection to your taking it up in your own way, but I think perhaps the counsel had better be consulted.

The Witness: That, your Honor, was what I was leading to when I asked the question.

The Master: If I was sitting there as they are I would rather have the witness talk it over with me before he went into details, than to give the details on his own responsibility; and that is the reason I make the suggestion. But it is agreeable to me, if counsel are satisfied, to go on and make any explanation that you may desire.

Mr. Harrison: Explanation about what? I do not understand, if your Honor please. He has gone into the subject on direct examination and cross-examination very fully, and had effectually stated the basis of any—

The Master: I think perhaps the phase that I developed this morning has not been specifically emphasized.

Mr. Harrison: Were you suggesting that he make some further investigation?

The Master: No, he suggested that he might have some further statement to make about these roads, I inquired about this morning. My suggestion about that was that perhaps it would be better for him to confer with his counsel before he undertook to make the statement in detail. But so far as I am concerned it is quite agreeable to me to have him make the suggestions independent of that.

Mr. Holt: When the cross-examination is finished we will have some questions.

The Master: But you would prefer to go over the subject with him yourself first?

Mr. Holt: Yes.

The Master: I presumed that would be the fact. I do not know enough about the details to go into the matter. You get my point, Mr. Harrison?

Mr. Harrison: Yes.

The Master: Then if you are ready, Mr. Harrison, you may proceed.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. I will take up Class D, which appears on Defendant's Exhibit No. 4, page 46 of the printed record, which purports to be the statement of interest on loans and dividends on stocks accrued prior to January, 1861, and collected by the State of Virginia after January, 1861. Your first statement is Orange & Alexandria Railroad Company stock, $31,604.09. Will you please state on what date that was collected by the State of Virginia or paid by the railway company?

The Master: You are examining now from page 46?

Mr. Harrison: Yes, sir.

The Master: That is the summary.

Q. That I take it is intended to be a dividend on the stock, is it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When was that paid?

A. It was paid in 1854.

Q. 1854?

A. 1864, excuse me, as per page 157 of Journal D.

Q. You cannot give the month?

A. I can in a moment. I see it has been omitted from here, but I can do so in just one moment, if you desire.

Q. I would prefer to have it, but I do not want to lose any time. If you have got to send out for it, I would rather let it go as 1864.

A. Well, it was paid—I will leave the date blank and fill it in.

Q. Now the next item is Orange & Alexandria loan, $20,336.98. Was that intended to represent the payment of interest on a loan by that road?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when was that paid?

A. There are four items going to make that up, as shown on page 16 of the printed record.

Q. I would like to get them in the record here. Will you give the date?

The Master : Let me make one inquiry to clarify my mind a little. We have supporting exhibits here for Class C and Class D, it being convenient to put them in that shape. What I want to inquire is whether those supporting exhibits, so far as they are joint and relate to Class D, are in their chronological order. Will I find the others following right along in their regular order?

The Witness: Yes, sir. There may be slight breaks in that, due to the fact that some of the Class C items have no entry in the Class D items.

The Master: Well, you can call attention to the discrepancy when there is any.

Q. Can you give the dates of the payment of interest on that loan?

A. The first item is the interest up to September 15, 1859, wherein there had accrued $10,415.94; and on that date there was paid $9,086.61, leaving a balance of $1,329.33 of the interest due up to September 15, 1859. The second item is the interest up to September 17, 1860—

Mr. Lilly: Is not that April?

The Witness: April 17, 1860, of $14,019. On the same date there was paid $9,840.47, leaving an unpaid balance of $4,178.53. There then matured interest on this same loan from this date, from the last mentioned date, up to July 1, 1860, of $5,035.18; there was paid on July 1, $4,159.53, leaving an unpaid balance of interest of $875.65. This loan then ran on from July 1, 1860 and bore interest. We have therefore calculated the interest from July 1, 1860, to January 1, 1861, which amounted to $13,953.47. The sum of these four items which I have mentioned amounts to $20,336.98, as shown on page 46 of the printed record.

By The Master:

Q. That detail does not appear on page 16, does it, Mr. Hillman?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where do you get it? Oh, I see it. Where do you get your computation?

A. Six months interest at 3½ per cent.

Q. Is that statement made on the schedule? I do not find it on mine, that is any place where you have those three items aggregated.

A. No, sir, I simply took the aggregate—

Q. Give me the three items that make up your $20,336.98?

A. Four items.

Q. Yes.

A. $1,329.33, $4,178.53, $875.65 and $13,953.47.

The Master: I get it now all right.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. They foot up $20,336.98?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now my question was, when were they paid?

A. The payments of interest from that date, July 1, 1860, on up to the final settlement of the loan, were made in piecemeal, as shown on pages 17 and 18 of the printed record, and finally both loan and interest paid up in full.

Q. You have not answered my question yet. I asked you when were those items paid. You have never given me any date when they were paid?

A. The first item was paid on September 15, 1859, $1,329.33—

Q. I am not talking about that. The Class refers to interest on loan and dividend that accrued prior to 1861 and were paid after 1861; and you have shown that $20,336.98 was paid after 1861?

A. Yes, sir; I see your point.

Q. Now, when?

A. It was paid at various dates afterwards. There was no specific payment of these items, but interest was calculated along on balances, and payments made on account of these balances, until, at the final end, the entire loan and its interest was retired. Payments have been made, but in piecemeal, as shown on pages 17 and 18 of the printed record.

Q. You have not given me any date yet when they were paid.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Do pages 17 and 18 give the dates of those partial payments?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. Well, won't you please give them to the stenographer?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Answer my question. On what dates were the several items that you detailed paid, after January 1, 1861?

A. There was brought forward from page 16, $405,054.11 Up to October 20, 1862 interest charges had accumulated on that sum of $54,934.61. In this sum which I have just mentioned is included the six months interest, which is mentioned as the last item on page 16. On October 20, 1862 there was paid, on account of the above $54,934.61, $10,071.

Q. Now is that one-half of the twenty thousand and odd dollars that you take up?

A. No, sir, it is not.

Q. Is it any part of it?

A. Yes, sir, it is.

Q. What part?

A. That is an indeterminate matter. No one can tell.

Q. Do I understand then that some part of it, but how much you do not know, was paid on the 20th of October, 1862?

A. That is a matter that no one can tell exactly, what that $10,071 was paid upon. It may have been paid upon back interest, it may have been specifically designated as the interest for a certain period.

By The Master:

Q. The books would show that, wouldn't they?

A. No, sir. It just simply shows that it was a payment on account of interest.

Q. Well, I do not understand that Mr. Harrison asks you for anything except what appears from the books.

Mr. Harrison: Of course that is all I want.

The Master: He does not want anybody to speculate about what is outside of the books. We could all speculate about that.

Q. He wants you to tell him where you find on these books the entries in which you claim these amounts that aggregate twenty odd thousand dollars were paid.

The Master: That is in substance what you want, is it not, Mr. Harrison?

Mr. Harrison: Yes, sir.

Q. Now go right to the books and tell him what you know about that?

Mr. Holt: May I ask, Mr. Master, if pages 17 and 18 are not copies of the books themselves.

The Master: I so understand it. I am not testifying.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. What is the fact Mr. Hillman?

A. That they are copies of the books of the company.

The Master: I suppose what Mr. Harrison would like to have Mr. Hillman state, as an accountant, is just exactly which one of these credits of the payments of interest Mr. Hillman in getting up his account has allocated to these four items aggregating $20,000. Is not that in substance what you want?

Mr. Harrison: Well what I want to know is the date of the payments of the four items, that he said footed up $20,336.98, represented to have been paid after January 1, 1861.

The Master: Precisely, and it is up to Mr. Hillman now to take his books, or the copies of the books, and do the best he can to answer the question.

Mr. Holt: It is a question of allocation entirely.

The Master: It is up to Mr. Hillman, and they have a right to find out about that.

Mr. Harrison: This witness ought certainly to be able to say whether he can give me the information.

The Witness: No, sir, I cannot give that information.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. Then if you cannot give the dates of the payments, how can you say that it was paid after January 1, 1861?

A. For the reason that the entire loan, with its accumulated interest, was finally paid in full. Therefore all items of interest, which had accumulated up to January 1, 1861, must have been paid.

Q. When was that final settlement made to which you have referred, of the entire loan and the accumulated interest?

A. It was made in October, 1862.

Q. Now do I understand you to say that all you can say so far as indicating the date upon which that charge of twenty thousand and odd dollars of interest was paid, is that it was between January 1, 1861, and October, 1862?

A. Yes, sir; it was paid during that period.

Q. You show on page 17 of the printed exhibits that there was a payment made of $10,071 on the 20th of October, 1862, do you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you also show that there was a payment made of twenty thousand and odd dollars on the 25th of October, 1862, both items being described by you as interest. Now what is the rule as to the application of payments for interest?

The Master: In the absence of any agreement between the parties, is that what you mean?

Mr. Harrison: That is what I mean.

A. I should consider that it applied to the back interest which had accrued up to that date.

Q. Well, these items that make up this twenty thousand and odd dollars are back interest, are they not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then according to that rule, would not the first payments be applied to the discharge of those items?

A. I should say they would, yes.

Q. And according to that rule those two payments made in October, 1862, would discharge the twenty thousand and odd dollars that you have shown on your exhibit at page 46, would they not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that according to your last answer that interest was paid on October 20th and October 25, 1862, was it not?

A. On the assumption that I have made that these payments would be paid to back interest, yes, sir.

Q. Now, going to the first item just for a moment, a question I omitted to ask you, that is the dividend on the stock of the Orange & Alexandria Railroad Company, put down at $31,604.09, which you have stated was paid in 1864, when did that dividend accrue?

A. It is marked as accruing—as declared in 1854, paid in 1864.

Q. Now, come to the second item, Richmond & Danville Railroad stock. You show no dividend opposite that. Is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. On the Richmond & Danville Railroad Company loan you show a payment of interest amounting to $10,500 after January 1, 1861. When was that paid?

A. Page No. 21 of the printed record, it was paid on a date subsequent to January 1, 1861. I have not entered the date here, but it was included in a payment of $21,000, which is a semi-annual payment of the interest on this loan. If the date is material I will furnish it.

Q. I would like to know the date. Haven't you got it on page 21?

The Master: He said part as semi-annual payment of interest, as I understand.

Q. Did you say it was included in the semi-annual interest that was due when? I don't know that I understood your last answer.

The Master: He did not state when it was due. He said part was in the semi-annual payment.

Q. I want to know when that was paid?

A. This was paid February 21, 1861.

By The Master:

Q. That appears on your printed schedule?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. Does that entry on your schedule at page 21 of the printed record, "This was paid February 21, 1861," refer to the payment of the semi-annual installment of interest?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. It is not opposite then the correct figures, is it?

A. No, sir, it is not.

The Master: That does not seem to have anything in the figure column in relation to it.

Mr. Harrison: In other words, what I wanted to show was that the date he has given as the date of the payment is not indicated by the exhibit.

The Master: No, but evidently that was intended as a notation to follow that item.

Q. The next item is Richmond & Petersburg Railroad Company stock, a dividend of $9,640, entered as paid after January 1, 1861.

The Master: I suppose this printing has gone so far that we cannot make any changes now, but I just call your attention, here is an element of confusion in this schedule, and if it is not too late we will have it fixed. On page 21, it states that this was paid February 21, 1861 and in parentheses July to January, six months, and then follows a little line carrying out to $576,303.34, which has not the slightest earthly connection with this notation. That ditto line should be stricken out if you can get it out. It has confused you, and I have been studying over that for five or ten minutes and finally got it cipered out. But we have got to get that ditto line out because it has not the slightest earthly connection with the item. I mention this now because every little while I run across something of that sort. I do not know how it happened to get in there. I suppose the printer stuck it in.

The Witness: Your Honor, we cannot blame the printer for that. It is in the original writing with the intention of applying to the line above, but it happened that on this account it comes in opposite that other line.

The Master: It is impossible that more or less of that sort of a thing cannot happen as we go along, but we will straighten it out as far as we can. Personally, I think I will remember most of this as I go along, so it will not bother me when I get to it, but a little thing like that is sometimes a source of infinite annoyance.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. (Question repeated as follows.) The next item is Richmond & Petersburg Railroad Company stock, a dividend of $9,640, entered as paid after January 1, 1861. When was that paid?

A. Page 23, of the printed record shows that it was paid on February 28, 1861, page 82, Journal D, Internal Improvement Fund.

Q. No. 4, on page 46 of the printed record, described as Virginia Central Railroad Company stock, and nothing opposite that. Does that mean that no dividend was paid on that stock after January, 1861?

A. None that had accrued prior to that date, yes, sir.

Q. That is what I mean, prior to January, 1861.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Virginia Central Railroad Company, interest on loan, is entered as paid $1,159.34, after January 1, 1861. When was that paid?

A. January 2, 1861, Cash Book No. 10, Board of Public Works, Second Auditor's office, as shown on page 26 of the printed record.

Q. Virginia Central Railroad Company, dividend bonds; there is entered as payment of interest on these bonds $5,-959,-80 accrued prior to January, 1861, and paid after that date. Can you give the date of payment?

A. On January 19, 1861.

Q. The next item is No. 5, Winchester & Potomac Railroad Company. There is an amount of $833.33 as paid after January, 1861. Does that mean stock or loan, is that interest or dividend?

A. That is an annuity.

Q. Can you give the date of that payment? You mean it is on account of an annuity?

A. Yes, sir.

The Master: That is that $83,000 item?

Mr. Harrison: Yes, sir.

Q. Give me the date of payment.

A. It was paid July 27, 1861, anticipating the date of its maturity.

Q. The next item is No. 6, Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac Railroad Company, dividend certificate, opposite which is an entry of an amount of $4,467.41 as paid after January 1, 1861. That means interest on those dividend certicates?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you give the date of that payment?

A. January 16, 1861, as shown on page 44 of the printed record.

Q. The next item is No. 7, Virginia & Tennessee Railroad Company loan, opposite which there is entered $280,000 as a payment on account of interest after January, 1861. On what date or dates was that amount paid?

A. That was paid at various dates as shown on page 30 of the printed record:

May 21, 1861,.....	$ 6,000.00
May 23, 1861,.....	10,000.00
June 3, 1861,.....	10,000.00
June 26, 1861,.....	7,952.00
July 9, 1861,.....	1,653.57
January 11, 1862,.....	14,394.43
February 7, 1863,.....	90,000.00

May 14, 1863,.....	55,000.00
August 15, 1863,.....	35,000.00

Q. The next item, No. 8, South Side Railroad Company loan opposite which is entered $264,500 as a payment of interest on that loan after January, 1861. Can you give the date or dates of different payments?

Page 32 of the printed record:

November 10, 1862,.....	$ 12,500.00
October 2, 1862,.....	56,000.00
July 29, 1863,.....	56,000.00

August 8, 1863,.....	28,000.00
August 27, 1863,.....	21,000.00
September 16, 1863,.....	28,000.00

Q. The next item, No. 9, Norfolk & Petersburg Railroad Company stock opposite which is entered $9,900 as a dividend paid on that stock after January, 1861. On what date was it paid?

A. It was paid on January 22, 1862, as shown on page 117, Journal D, Internal Improvement Fund, page 33 of the printed record.

Q. The next item immediately under is Norfolk & Petersburg Railroad Company loan, showing payment of interest of $36,000 on that loan after January, 1861. Can you give me that date now?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is that?

A. That is shown on page 33 and was paid January 11, 1864, four and a half years interest which had accumulated up to July 1, 1863, $94,500; and the $36,000 is the proportion of that from January 1, 1859, to January 1, 1861.

Q. The date, I believe you gave of payment was January 11, 1864?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The next item, No. 10, is James River & Kanawha Company, opposite which is entered $250. What does that mean?

A. That means that there was paid a dividend on the James River & Kanawha Company of $250.

Q. Dividend on its stock?

A. On the stock owned by the State of Virginia.

Mr. Lilly: Was not that on a $100,000 loan? It is not in these exhibits; it was introduced since they were printed.

The Witness: I find that that is a partial payment of interest on a loan of $100,000 to the above company, made by the State of Virginia.

The Master: Made to the State of Virginia?

The Witness: No, sir, made by the State of Virginia.

The Master: Oh, loan made by the State of Virginia.

The Witness: Yes, which was due January 1, 1861, and was paid January 4, 1861, as shown on the treasurer's blotter which is not paged. This exhibit has been filed by us later than the printed record, but in 1861.

Q. Did you examine the cash book No. 9 of the Board of Public Works with reference to this payment which you have now described as a payment of some interest on a loan? If you did, did you find it described as you have stated? I will proceed with the examination as you are not ready to answer that question. Take item No. 11, loan to Washington College. What does the $60 entered there represent?

A. The interest accruing on loan made to Washington College.

Q. Accruing before January, 1861?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And paid when, if you can state?

A. And paid March 29, 1861, as shown on page 39 of the printed record.

Q. The next item, No. 12, Richmond Academy bonds, shows a payment of $12. Does that mean interest on this bond paid after January, 1861?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And which had accrued prior to that date?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The date of payment?

A. As shown on page 40 of the printed record, July 9, 1861.

Q. The next is item No. 13, entered as claim against United States Government, $832,451.57. What is that?

A. That is the amount of interest at 6 per cent, from July 1, 1814, to January 1, 1861, which had accrued upon the loan to the United States by the State of Virginia, the principle of which was $298,369.74.

Q. Is that the same transaction that you testified about under Class C, showing the payment by the Government of the United States to the State of Virginia of $5.50 in February, 1903?

A Yes, sir.

Q. On a balancing of accounts between them?

A. Yes, sir, shown on page 13, item No. 17 of the printed record.

By The Master:

Q. Does the transcript that you have from the treasurer's office show that the loan bore interest at the rate of 6 per cent?

A. The settlement of that account is in the Second Auditor's office.

Q. Wherever it comes from.

A. And it was calculated at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum on both sides of the account.

Q. The settlement shows that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The answer is that the rate of 6 per cent. interest was computed on both sides of the loan?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is, the note or account or claim of Virginia against the United States on one side bore 6 per cent. interest, and the bonds of Virginia which were surrendered to the United States as part of the settlement were also at 6 per cent. interest?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So they have the same rate on each side?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Harrison: It would be unprofitable to be asking the witness for any opinion about that item. The whole matter is shown by the records of Virginia, and of the United States as General Anderson suggests, and I intend to put in, as I stated on Saturday, a copy of the Second Auditor's report.

The Master: I do not suppose anything that Mr. Hillman can say will affect the rights of the parties one way or the other with reference to that. It is probably a matter of legal construction; but I was simply getting right here just the facts so I will have them in my mind.

Mr. Holt: These documents are very plain.

The Master: If there is any peculiar legal construction to be given, that will be for me on argument rather than for Mr. Hillman to express an opinion about as an accountant. It is a matter of construction, that is your idea, isn't it?

Mr. Harrison: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. The next item is No. 14, the Farmer's Bank of Virginia, opposite which there is an entry of $33,691.00. Does that represent dividend paid on the stock of that bank after January 1, 1861, which had accrued prior to that date?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The next items, 15, 16, 17, 18, and 19, represent several payments of interest, I presume on the dividends of those banks, do they not, similiar to that of the Farmers' Bank, similarly situated?

A. Yes, sir, they do.

Q. Having accrued prior to and paid after January, 1861?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I want to know the date of the payments of those entries representing dividends on the stock of those banks respectively. If they were all paid at the same time or approximately the same time you might give one date; if not, I would like to have the separate dates.

The Master: That is the dates of the payments you mean. You said interest, but what you mean is amounts?

Mr. Harrison: Yes, sir, dates of the payments of the several amounts of dividends on the stock respectively indicated as owned by the State in those banks.

Q. Is it shown on page 47 of the printed exhibits?

A. Yes, sir, it is shown on page 47 in detail.

Q. Does that show they were all paid in the year 1861?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And all of them paid on some date in January, 1861 and three in February 1861?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is sufficient. No. 20 is Blue Ridge Railroad Company, tolls for use of, showing $1,534.69. When were those tolls paid?

A. January 26, 1861, as shown by page 27 of the printed record.

Mr. Harrison: We are through with that schedule.

The Master: As to that schedule, I understand it is conceded that all of the principal exhibits and the supporting exhibits and the summary of the amounts are correctly stated and the computations accurately made; that is so, is it not?

Mr. Harrison: As far as the mathematical part of it is concerned, the additions and multiplications, I presume that is correct.

The Master: I am stating that so as to eliminate any question hereafter.

Mr. Holt. Of course the Master is not trying to indicate the value.

The Master: Not at all, simply this, so that when I come to look this over, whatever argument may be predicated on this, I will have no disturbance as to the figures; I may be satisfied that the figures are all right.

Mr. Holt: And before Mr. Harrison goes on I want to congratulate him for the expedition with which he has gone through Class D. He has done it rapidly and beautifully, you will permit me to say.

The Master: And if the Judge has no objection, I desire to concur without the slightest reservation in the statement made by the Judge, and in a very adequate manner taking care of the interests of Virginia also.

Q. Now, we come to Class E. Class E is described in the supplemental answer as bank stock purchased by Virginia with joint funds prior to January 1, 1861, and in her possession on that date. The first one of these banks in the list is the Farmers' Bank of Virginia. What is the amount of stock you show owned by the State in that bank January 1, 1861?

A. 9,626 shares, par $100, $962,600.

Q. What do you value that stock at as of January 1, 1861, per share?

The Master: In order that there may not be any confusion—this does not interfere with your cross-examination—I do not understand that Mr. Hillman predicates any idea of value upon the banks other than the same method that he has used in connection with the railroad companies, but of course this question literally speaking is based upon the actual value, but I suppose what you mean is his method of computation.

Mr. Harrison: I am going to pursue that through.

Mr. Holt: That is a book value of course, your Honor.

The Master: Yes.

Mr. Holt: There is some difference between the values of a bank and a railroad.

The Master: Yes.

Q. The question was what do you show to be the value per share of that stock January 1, 1861?

A. $111.57.

Q. How do you describe that value?

A. Net value.

Q. What do you mean by net value, does that have the same significance as book value?

A. Yes, sir, the net being taking the book value and deducting the amount of the dividend from that book value, and I have therefore denominated it net.

Q. It means the same as book value in this connection?

A. Yes, sir, book value less the dividend.

Q. You relied for your exhibit on the printed report of the officers of the bank to the Board of Public Works, did you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you had no other source of information than that upon which you have predicated your exhibit or based your testimony, did you?

A. None.

Q. Is your exhibit an exact copy of the report of the officers upon which you relied, or have you changed in any way the designations of the items found in the report?

A. My recollection is that that is a copy and I have not changed the titles.

Q. I call your attention to the fact that on your exhibit, page 48 of the printed record, Farmers' Bank of Virginia, you have an item of $337,067.05, which you have described as profit and loss. Now look at the report itself and see how that is described.

A. It is described as surplus and contingent fund.

Q. Why did you change the description of that item to profit and loss, did you have any reason for that or object in it?

A. No, sir, none.

Q. Profit and loss is a different thing from Surplus and Contingent Fund, isn't it?

A. No, I think not.

Mr. Holt: Do you mean generally or in this particular instance.

The Witness: In this particular instance.

Q. Now, look at the next page of the original report and see how it is there described, that same entry. That is page 16 of the report.

A. It is there described as contingent fund.

Q. You don't mean to say the contingent fund is the same thing as profit, do you?

A. Yes, sir, in this case it would be.

Q. For the purpose of figuring the net value?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What does contingent mean? It must mean that its value is contingent upon something, does it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, if its value is contingent you can call it profit?

A. The assets of the bank are stated—

Q. That is not an answer to my question. I do not care having you go into an account of the assets of the bank, but I would like to have an answer to my question.

The Witness: All right. Your Honor, the question cannot be answered unless I do go into it. I submit that to your Honor.

The Master: I cannot tell in advance how he should answer the question. You are an accountant, Mr. Hillman, and you go ahead and answer that question as directly and concisely as you can. You are answering the question that Mr. Harrison is asking you, and it is up to you to say what the answer is, and I expect you to make it as responsive as is compatible with the circumstances.

Mr. Holt: May we have the question repeated now?

The Master: Yes.

(Testimony read by stenographer.)

The Master: Go ahead and make the best answer you can and make it in your own way, and cover the ground from your point of view as fully as you can.

Mr. Harrison: I do not want the best answer, I want a true answer to the question, fully.

The Master: If it is an untrue answer it would be a bad answer and not the best answer.

The Witness: A contingent fund is intended to cover a possible depreciation in assets, or some contingency that might arise of that character. It has therefore been specifically laid aside and distinct from all other liabilities of the bank. Until that contingency arises, and until the fund is expended it is a profit of the bank, or an asset which can be considered as a profit.

Q. Then the bank's statement itself described that fund as a contingent fund, whereas you have described it as profit and loss, as a profit?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have taken it as a profit, although the bank called it contingent?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now why didn't you put on your schedule the description that the officers of the bank used in their report, instead of substituting for it a different description? Your schedule, in other words, is not accurate.

A. For a special reason, that I considered it a profit and loss account, it being entered as surplus and contingent funds, on page 15 of Document 14, the bank statement.

Q. But if you were undertaking to transcribe here an accurate statement from the report of the officers, why didn't you give the report as you found it instead of giving your construction of it as being an accurate statement of the report itself?

A. There is no reason why I did so, excepting that I have stated that I considered it a profit and loss account, and so entered it.

Q. Does the statement show any bad debts or doubtful debts?

A. No, sir.

Q. Look on page 16, the tabular statement of the condition of the bank, which is part of the report of the officers, and tell me whether or not it shows any bad or doubtful debts included in the assets?

A. Yes, sir, it does on page 16.

Q. What are the bad debts there shown?

A. $70,773.96.

Q. What are the doubtful debts shown?

A. $45,437.24.

Q. Did you base your book value on $116,210, in part, of bad doubtful debts?

A. Yes, sir, it looks as if I had not taken that into account in my statement. I have taken the trial balance only, as shown on pages 14 and 15.

The Master: What do those bad debts aggregate?

Mr. Harrison: $116,210 bad and doubtful debts.

Q. Then your book value is based on a surplus which contains $116,210 of bad and doubtful debts, and an unknown contingent fund, is it not?

A. No, sir.

Q. Well, why?

A. For the reason that it is—

Q. Did you take account—

Mr. Holt: Let him answer.

The Witness: Let me answer the question, will you?

Q. Go ahead.

A. For the reason that it is shown on page 16 that there are bad debts and doubtful debts to the amount of the $116,211.30 mentioned, but that the contingent fund is not mentioned as a doubtful item at all, it is mentioned as a distinct item.

Q. Now for the year 1861, as shown by that statement, how much did the bank apparently earn as profit, assuming that there was nothing else to deduct except the bad and doubtful debts?

A. I do not know how much they earned that year.

Q. Well, what does your exhibit on page 48 show to have beeen the profits for the year 1861, of the Farmers' Bank of Virginia?

A. The total profits up to January 1, 1861, $475,168.23.

Q. If you will look at the comparative statement of the officers of the bank on page 15, do you not find there the profits stated for the year 1860 and the year 1861?

A. Yes, sir, on that page 15 there are two years mentioned 1860 and 1861.

Q. Now what are the profits shown for the year 1860 on that statement, the report of the officers which you hold in your hand?

The Master: Is it shown there?

Mr. Harrison: Of course it is.

The Master: Why don't you state it then?

The Witness: It shows the total profits, yes, sir. For 1861 it shows the surplus and contigent fund and the profits of the institution $475,168.87.

Mr. Harrison: I did not ask that question.

By The Master:

Q. Does that report that you have got there show that the officers state what the profit was?

Mr. Harrison: That is what it shows, "Profits of the institution for the year 1861."

The Master: What objection is there to reading that and putting it into the record? I want to tell you from now on I do not want you to sit five minutes and look at an entry like that to determine what you are going to say about that. Now that entry shows right on its face what the profits were. I hope that is clear. There is no progress made by that. I have got to see these reports; and it is stated right there what it is and you have no right to wait five minutes deciding whether you are going to answer that question. Now read it.

The Witness: The profits of the institution show $138,101.18.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. And does it not show the same item on your report?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. As to profit for 1861?

A. I do not know whether it is profit for the year or not. It is headed profits of the institution.

Q. It is headed profit for the year 1861, under the report of the officers, is it not?

A. Yes, sir. Whether it is cumulative for the year or not I do not know; the report does not say.

Q. Does not the same comparative statement, page 15, show what the profits were of the institution for the year 1860?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is it?

A. $145,813.47, subject to the same comments I made on the other.

Q. Then the profits for the year 1861 could not be cumulative, could they, when they are shown to be less than they were for the year 1860?

A. Not unless they had paid a dividend in excess, and so reduced the value. I do not know.

Q. Now what dividend was paid by this bank?

The Master: Before you leave that, please, I have a question.

By The Master:

Q. I notice, and that is where I am getting into a little confusion, on page 48, Mr. Hillman, you have an item profits of institutions, $138,101.18. Now should that read "Profits of institution"? I was just going to inquire what these "institutions" were. I suppose that is the bank itself. What is the fact about that? Because, as that reads in the exhibit, it would lead me to think they had some stock in some other institutions.

Mr. Harrison: The report of the officers reads "Profits of the institution."

The Master: That is what I thought "Profits of the institution." Then that, I suppose, is the entry we ought to have on the exhibit. We will strike off the "s" on "institutions," so that relieves me of any confusion about that.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. Now I want to know what dividend this bank declared and paid for the year 1861?

A. 7¼ per cent.

Q. What would be 7¼ per cent upon the total capital stock of the bank, the total capital stock of the bank being $3,150,900.

A. $228,440.25.

Q. Then if the dividend declared amounted to $228,000 and the profit of the institution was $138,101 for that year, they did not earn their dividend, did they?

A. If that is true—I mean if those figures are true—they did not earn their dividend.

Q. By how much? What was the deficit?

A. $90,339.07, if those figures are correct.

Q. I am taking the figures from the report of the officers.

A. Yes, sir, and it is for that very reason that I do not accept the fact, if it is a fact, that those profits of the institution do show the profits for the year 1861.

By The Master:

Q. That is because they have declared a dividend larger than that amount?

A. Yes, sir, and there does not show between the two years a corresponding reduction of surplus and contingent fund and final profits, and therefore there must have been some other item than the par after all profits entered in there and it must have been cumulative, either in the way of additions or of deductions on account of other payments or dividends.

Q. In other words it does not look like either good bookkeeping or good business, is that it? It is either not good bookkeeping or it is not good business?

A. Yes, sir. It shows that that item is not the profits of the year, that is all.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. These statements, you have several times said, were made under oath; that is true, is it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I am taking the statements as I find them, and I am not indulging in suppositions or conjectures about them, and my questions are based upon the figures in the report upon which you have undertaken to base your conclusion.

Mr. Lilly: Do not argue with the witness.

Q. Now was there a falling off in the profits of the institution, under the comparative statement of profits for the years 1860 and 1861, and if so to what extent?

A. The item which you have mentioned, profits of the institution, showed a falling off of $7,712.29.

Q. Is there any falling off in the deposits for the year 1861 as compared with 1860, as shown by the report of the officers?

The Master: While he is making that computation I wish you would get word to Mr. Harris to have this print changed, while there is time to do it, so that instead of "Profits of institutions" it will read as it ought to read, "Profits of the institution." We will have all these things checked up as we go along, and then we won't have any confusion.

Mr. Holt: I should certainly think that could be done, especially in those volumes that embody the exhibits alone.

A. The deposits declined from 1860 to 1861, $296,404.77.

Q. Now will you please tell me whether there was any falling off in the circulation of the bank between 1860 and 1861, as shown by the comparative statement referred to?

A. Yes, sir; there was a falling off in bank circulation.

Q. To what extent?

A. $237,294.

Q. Well, now, was there any falling off in specie which the bank owned between 1860 and 1861, as shown by the same comparative statement?

A. Yes, sir; the specie on hand was less in 1861 than it was in 1860.

By The Master:

Q. By how much?

A. $132,692.50.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. Was there any increase in the debts of the bank between 1860 and 1861, as shown by the same statement?

A. No, sir; there was a decrease in the debts of the bank.

Q. Debts due to other banks, of debts due by the bank to other banks, was there any increase between the two years in that item?

A. Yes, sir, in the debts due by this bank to others, there was an increase.

Q. Of how much? In the year 1861, of course I refer to. Now what was the amount?

A. $110,527.39.

Q. Now then, taking the report, which contains the only information you have had in respect to the condition of this bank in January, 1861, and upon which your figures are based of $111.57 as its book value on that date, in view of the facts that we have just brought out, namely, that the bank did not earn its dividend for the year 1860 by ninety thousand and some hundred dollars, that the profits had declined between 1860 and 1861, by $7,700, that the deposits had fallen off—I have forgotten the number of dollars, but it was several hundred thousand—that the circulation had decreased two or three hundred thousand, that the specie had decreased by $132,000, and its debts to other banks had increased by over a hundred thousand dollars, what would you say as to the condition of the bank in January, 1861? Would you call it good or would you call it bad, or would you call it indifferent? Now remember that your answer is based on the evidence that we are all relying on.

A. In the first place, leaving out—I beg your pardon, I would say that if I am restricted only to the items which you have mentioned, the bank was in worse condition in 1861 than it was on January 1, 1860. And if I accept as a fact that the profits of the institution were only the amount that you say, they did not earn their dividend.

Q. Instead of being worth eleven dollars and some odd cents premium, would it, confining your answer to the facts that have been laid before you, in your judgment be worth par?

A. If I am restricted to the facts which you have mentioned, and not allowed to take anything else into consideration, it would not be worth par. But I consider that but a partial statement of it.

By The Master:

Q. In other words you do not concede the assumption to be predicated upon the facts, the assumption in the question?

A. Not on the full facts in the case, that is all.

Q. But assuming all the facts stated by him in his question to be true, you make that answer?

A. And that there are no other facts in the case.

The Master: That can be determined later on. If we have got to take the examination by piece-meal we cannot answer it in a minute.

Mr. Harrison: We cannot go outside of the facts represented by the figures in the document on which the witness relies.

Mr. Holt: I think he has answered your question.

The Master: He concedes, on the facts stated by you, that the stock would not be worth par.

Mr. Harrison: I have not stated anything as a fact that is not contained in the report of the officers, upon which he has based his statement.

The Master: Well, may be that is the subject of argument.

The Witness: Mr. Master—

The Master: All that you are required to do Mr. Hillman is to answer the questions put by Mr. Harrison. If there is any impropriety about the question, that matter will be raised by Judge Holt.

The Witness: I understand that I am restricted to the facts stated in his question.

The Master: You have answered the question exactly right from his point of view and from your point of view. My suggestion is that if he happens to put a question that is not a proper question, the objection to that question will have to come from Judge Holt or Attorney General Lilly, and until it does come the question goes, and you are compelled to answer. You have done it all right and answered all right with all necessary qualifications. I think I understand it right?

Mr. Holt: I think so. I would like to inquire— I may have misunderstood a moment ago, I may have misunderstood the question, that the liabilities of the bank had increased or decreased, which was that?

The Master: The liabilities had increased.

Mr. Harrison: Had increased a hundred thousand.

The Master: There is not any question about that fact.

The Witness: I beg pardon, they show that the liabilities as regards circulation—

The Master: Does the Judge refer to the total liabilities?

Mr. Holt: Yes.

The Master: I had in mind debts of the bank.

Mr. Holt: What answer did he give a while ago? Let the stenographer read it.

(Testimony read by stenographer.)

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. Now what do you show on your exhibit, and on what page will it be found, the value of this Farmers' Bank stock June 20, 1863?

A. Page 38 of the blue prints.

The Master: Before you proceed, I want to make just one additional inquiry in relation to this dividend and the profits of the institution. Assuming that the profits of the institution are correctly stated by the officers in their sworn report, it would indicate that they had declared something like ninety thousand dollars out of their capital as a dividend, wouldn't it?

Mr. Lilly: It would be out of surplus, wouldn't it?

The Master: If they had any surplus.

Mr. Lilly: The record shows that they had $337,000 surplus.

By The Master:

Q. It would be $90,000 out of their surplus?

A. Yes, sir, out of their surplus.

Q. Which had already been reduced to somewhere over a hundred thousand dollars by bad debts?

Mr. Harrison: Yes, and they called it, not surplus, but contingent fund.

The Master: I am glad you called my attention to that, I wanted to get that into the record.

Q. There was surplus enough on hand to have justified the declaring of a dividend in excess of the current profits, that is the fact, I suppose?

A. Yes, sir, and the surplus fund increased in 1861 over 1860.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. How much?

A. $6,026.96.

Q. What value do you give this stock of the Farmers' Bank on June 20, 1863, as shown by your exhibit at page 38 of the blue prints.

A. Taken at the same value as January 1, 1861.

Q. Namely, a value of $111.57 per share?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you have based that on the same report that you used for 1861?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In other words it is simply a duplication of your 1861 report, is it not?

A. Yes, sir, with the notation which I have made below on page 38.

Q. Using the date of June 20, 1863, instead of January 1, 1861?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you tell us, if you please, what became of this bank?

The Master : Before you reach that—this schedule contains the same error that the other contained, "Profits of institutions." Now be sure on the original that goes into the case that the "s" is stricken off and that the "The" is inserted.

Mr. Lilly: If the Master please, we do not want to be captious, but we object to that question and state the reason now that it is not material.

(Question repeated by stenographer.)

The Master: I shall admit that. I cannot tell what weight it may have.

Mr. Lilly: I just want to call the Master's attention to the fact that we made the objection, but do not insist on it at this time.

A. I do not know.

Q. Is it in existence today?

A. I do not know.

Q. Have you really any doubt on that subject?

A. I have no doubt on the subject, but I have no evidence on the subject save hearsay.

Q. Except hearsay?

A. That is all.

Q. Well, according to hearsay what became of the bank?

Mr. Holt: I object to that, your Honor. If they want to prove that the bank went out of existence they can do it.

The Master: If they insist on that I cannot admit it.

Mr. Harrison: There are some things that we all take knowledge of, historical facts, and I presume it is as well known to this witness as it is to you.

The Master: Well I do not know anything about it.

Q. If you do not know anything about that subsequent history of the bank, if you want to give that answer you can do it.

The Master: He has no knowledge except hearsay, he has no legal knowledge.

Q. Do you know of any such bank in existence today?

A. No, sir, I do not.

Q. Do you know that it was in existence after June 20, 1863?

A. Yes, sir, I do.

Q. How do you know that?

A. For the reason that I have traced some payment of dividends on this bank stock into the record subsequent to June 20, 1863, in order to make up these statements.

Q. Then how long did the bank continue to exist, according to the trace that you made of its history and its existence?

A. I know that it was in existence in January, 1865; I do not know any further than that.

Q. Now do you not know anything at all about its value, the value of the stock, June 20, 1863, as appears from your testimony here; that is true, is it not?

A. I know nothing whatever of its book value.

Q. On June 20, 1863?

A. On June 20, 1863.

Q. All you have done with reference to testifying in respect to its value on that date is to file figures taken from the report of the officers of the bank for January 1861, as you did in that case?

A. Yes, sir, as shown on page 38 of the blue prints.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. Right there pardon me a moment. What is the difference between the schedule for 1861 and for 1863?

A. The simple notation that we were unable to find any further statements of the bank, and simply that the continued payments of dividend at the same rate would tend to indicate that the stock was of at least equal value.

Q. That last fact does not appear on the 1861 schedule, and that is the difference between the two schedules, is it not?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. The real difference is a date, as you have already called attention to. One is January 1, 1861, and the other is June 20, 1863.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. We come now to the Bank of Virginia. What was the State's ownership in the stock of that bank?

A. 13,766 shares, par $70, total value $963,620, par.

Q. (Handing book.) I observe on your exhibit, page 50 of the printed record, you have described, as you did in the case of the Farmers' Bank, the item shown in the report of the officers as surplus and contingent fund, as profit and loss. You did not make an accurate transcription of the report in this case in that particular, did you?

A. No, sir, I used the term profit and loss instead of surplus and contingent fund.

Q. Now, Mr. Hillman, I also find on your exhibit, page 50, under the heading assets, you have an item of $18,900, which you have described as unredeemable—stolen notes. How was it described in the report of the officers, that item?

A. Lost by robbery at Portsmouth in $100 notes.

Q. Have you included in the assets of the bank upon which you have based your calculations of book value that item of $18,900, described in the report of the officers as loss by robbery at Portsmouth in $100 notes?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Holt: What was the amount of that item, Mr. Harrison?

The Master: $18,900.

Q. Is it proper to include that item of loss in estimating the profits of the bank?

A. Yes, sir, in this case I should say it was.

Q. Why in this case any more than in any other case? If the bank had lost $18,900, how can that constitute an asset upon which you can base value?

A. Because the entry of that item, where it appears in the 1859 report, is stated as notes not to be redeemed because of robbery at Portsmouth. They had their entire amount of liability on account of their circulation outstanding, but here is an item which they would never be called upon to redeem. Practically, payment had been stopped on those notes, and therefore they had included it as an asset, when they should have deducted it from their circulation. The amount would show the same in either case.

Q. How could the bank stop payment on notes that it had issued, because they had been stolen?

The Master: He did not say they could.

Mr. Harrison: He is basing his answer upon some assumption of that sort.

The Master: Not exactly upon that; he was simply using that as an illustration, as I understood it.

The Witness: They had stopped payment and took it up as an asset to offset outstanding notes.

Mr. Lilly: Their circulation was charged up as a liability, and naturally they would not have to pay.

Q. Is your answer a matter of assumption?

The Master: When you say that they had stopped payment, that is what he means.

A. No, sir, it is not assumption.

Q. Where is there evidence that the bank had stopped payment?

A. The notation in the 1859 report.

Q. Have you got that before you?

A. No, sir, I have a note from that report, on the side.

By Mr. Lilly:

Q. Suppose you read the notation?

Mr. Harrison: I would rather he would produce the original.

The Witness: Notes not to be redeemed because of robbery at Portsmouth, $18,900.

Q. Does that show that the payment had been stopped? In other words that is what you rely upon for your conjecture or statement that payment had been stopped, is that true?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And is it your testimony now that payment had been stopped? Is that your construction of that entry?

A. Yes, sir.

The Master: I was mistaken in my suggestion.

Mr. Holt: No, you were right as his answer originally stood, he was illustrating simply, that as they treated it practically it would be the same.

Q. Now will you please tell us whether—

The Witness: Your Honor, may I read from this document which has been asked for?

The Master: If there is no objection on the part of Mr. Harrison.

Mr. Harrison: I do not object to his reading anything that is pertinent.

The Master: Is it something that explains that item?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

The Master: All right.

The Witness: Document No. 14, page 8, under the date of January 1, 1859, reads, "Lost by robbery at Portsmouth office in $100 notes, not to be redeemed, $18,900," carried as an asset.

Q. Do you find on this entry that you have just read the words "Carried as an asset," which you gave as purporting to be the language?

A. I did not give it as purporting to be a quotation.

Q. That is your own statement then?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Holt: He has just told the stenographer where to put the quotation marks, while you were looking at it.

Q. Now will you tell us whether the statement, the report of the officers upon which you rely, shows whether that bank had any bad or doubtful debts on hand as per the statement of January, 1861, if so, how much?

The Master: As a part of this asset.

Q. That is page 8, Document No. 14, the tabular statement of the Bank of Virginia, January, 1861?

A. From that statement I am afraid I will have to give it up, I do not know.

Mr. Harrison: There are two items right under the caption on the tabular statement.

The Master: What is the trouble about that, Mr. Hillman, about this $6,412?

The Witness: That is for the quarter ending January 1, 1861. There are three other items mentioned below about which nothing is said. I could not tell what that entry meant without examination of the whole matter.

Q. Is January 1, 1861, the date of the balance sheet?

A. Yes, sir.

The Master: I will tell you what this shows, quarter ending January, 1861, bad debts, $6,412, and then doubtful debts. The next entry is 1860, November 1st, and then December 1st, and then the next notation is January 1, 1861. I can understand how you might want to take it to look it over, but it seems to me that is pretty plain. I wanted to see what the book showed, to see why it was necessary to take four or five minutes to get the answer to that question.

Mr. Holt: When an entry of that kind is asked for, Mr. Hillman, give it. If you have any explanation to follow it then give that.

The Master: We cannot all wait here to look this whole matter over. The effect of this testimony is not up to you, Mr. Hillman. You are to give it and let counsel take care of the effect of it.

The Witness: One page 8, Document 14, under the heading quarter ending January, 1861, there are bad debts shown for $6,412; doubtful debts, $43,973.57.

The Master: We will suspend right here until half past two, and instead of running along until half past five, which would be our regular time, on account of the fact that the stenographers have been bothered a good deal by not having any electric power and have had to dictate to the typewriter, and might have to work until about midnight, I am going to stop at five to give them an opportunity to get their work out.

Mr. Holt: Before you adjourn, there is one matter that I want to call attention to. On Saturday evening I asked our friends upon the other side, General Anderson, Mr. Harrison, Mr. Robinson and Mr. Potter, to expedite the matter if they could in one direction by a stipulation according to what I believe to be the fact, and that was that all of the assets that we are now seeking to vouch were paid out of the proceeds of the bonds that constitute the debt in controversy here, of Virginia. And it was suggested upon the other side that that was true, as I understood these gentlemen, and the loans also were made out of the proceeds of the bonds that evidence the debt of Virginia prior to 1861; that was true with respect both to stocks and to bonds, except in a few instances where the proceeds were so used and earnings were derived from the investments thereof, and the earnings used also in the purchase of the assets sought to be valued here. I thought they were going to agree to that, and so I prepared a stipulation to this effect:

"It is stipulated of record by counsel for the States of Virginia and West Virginia, as well as by counsel for the bondholders, that the various stocks and bonds mentioned and described in Classes B, C, D, E, F and G set forth in the exhibits to the defendant's supplemental answer herein, were purchased by the State of Virginia prior to the 1st day of January, 1861, out of the proceeds of the bonds of the State of Virginia evidencing the public debt of said State that was apportioned between the two States by the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States rendered in this cause on the 6th day of March, 1911, or with the earnings of securities so purchased. Also, that the loans mentioned and described in said Classes B to C inclusive were made out of the proceeds of said bonds or the earnings from the investment of said proceeds; and that the Blue Ridge Railroad was likewise constructed out of the proceeds of said bonds or the earnings from investment of their proceeds."

Now I learned this morning that there may be some little difficulty about their agreeing to that; and the reason I bring it up at this time is this; if these gentlemen feel that they cannot stipulate those matters I want to know it at as early a date as possible, because it means a tremendous pile of documentary evidence here, and I am seeking to avoid that and shorten the record and save time. If these gentlemen believe or know those things to be facts I hope they will see their way to the stipulation.

The Master: Well, if they are true or they are willing to concede they are true, with such exceptions as they may stipulate or specify, that would narrow the inquiry as to those exceptions. I have not any doubt, as far as that is concerned, that the counsel for Virginia are prepared to make every concession that they can legitimately make with safety to the rights of their clients.

Mr. Anderson: I will very briefly reply to what my friend has said. Counsel for Virginia will be very glad to enter into any stipulation which will expedite the hearing of this case—

Mr. Holt: And which is according to the truth.

Mr. Anderson: —without doing injustice to either of the parties, or conceding as true what we do not know to be true. We could not agree to this stipulation because these securities were not purchased—that is an inaccurate and we think a misleading statement. That is one objection we have to it, but not the most important. The fact is that, in every case in which these stocks were acquired by the State, or in which loans were made by the State to these improvement companies, they were not made primarily as investments at all. As the former record of this case overwhelmingly shows, they were made in carrying out an internal improvement policy of Virginia, in aid, not for the purpose of gain by the State but in aid of these internal improvement companies, for the purpose of developing the Commonwealth, and more especially for the purpose of developing that portion of the Commonwealth which now constitutes West Virginia.

The Master: I do not understand that the stipulation goes so far as to foreclose you from taking that position.

Mr. Holt: Oh, no.

Mr. Anderson: It would if we signed this paper, because it says they were purchases made by the State. If your Honor please, at great cost of time and labor the truth in regard to this matter has already been put into this record. This record shows in detail every bond issued by the State of Virginia, and the purpose for which it was issued, and it shows too, prima facie at least, for what purpose every dollar of the avails of those bonds was expended. It is not true, as we find, your Honor, that all of the money which went into these improvements came from the sale of these bonds; a very considerable part of it came from other sources, not only from dividends on these bank stocks, which do not represent these bonds at all. A large portion of them went to the internal improvement, as my friends well know, as certainly the senior counsel, Mr. Hogg, knows, because it was proved in this case, and never controverted by West Virginia. In addition to that, in some cases, as we are satisfied, the surplus general revenue of the State went into the construction of some of these internal improvements. So that we cannot agree to this.

The evidence is all here; my friends have it here in this record, showing how every dollar was expended and whence it was derived. And why we should be asked now to concede facts which we do not believe to be facts and which the record does not show to be facts, I cannot understand.

The Master: West Virginia has made a suggestion as to which they are willing to enter into a stipulation. The counsel for Virginia do not feel at liberty to agree to the stipulation, and that is the end of it.

Mr. Anderson: Just one word—

The Master : If we do not get anywhere there is no use arguing it.

Mr. Anderson: Let me call attention to the fact that Exhibit A-1 of the Decree, shows the purpose for which the bonds of Virginia were issued. The exhibit designated in this record as Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 1, gives every Act of Assembly which was passed by Virginia making appropriations as authorizing the issue of bonds; and shows for what purpose it was made.

The Master: If all that appears in the record there is no reason why these two accountants should not sit down together, or somebody, and cipher that out; and as to what that shows you can agree. There is no occasion for printing a lot of detail that is indisputably proved. That is my judgment about it. Whether they would be willing to accede to your broad judgment, Judge Holt, does not seem to be possible. But if a large number of items can be eliminated by taking what is in the record, you may agree as to that.

Mr. Holt: Of course if my stipulation is too broad—I expected to correct it and make the necessary exceptions. I do not want to ask these gentlemen to stipulate anything into the record as a fact that is not true. But where any portion of the securities that we are now seeking to value were purchased with the proceeds of the bonds evidencing the debt I would like to have a stipulation to that effect. And where there are others that were paid out of general revenue, let them be excepted.

The Master: Yes.

Mr. Holt: And by a few lines in that way we can shorten the record very much. In the first place it will relieve us from putting in a lot of Acts here that we would like to avoid putting in, but even if we were to fall back upon the original record, it is not sufficiently full for our purposes, and yet the intimation is very strong there in the direction of what we contend for. All I ask these gentlemen to do is not an unreasonable thing, but where they can fairly admit that, and safely, to be a fact, we hope they will do it. But wherever it becomes necessary to make an exception, of course we would not ask them to stipulate without naming the exception.

The Master: What is the reason that Judge Holt, or some one else representing West Virginia, cannot sit down with some one on the other side this evening and go through this matter in detail and find out as to what you can agree and as to what you disagree?

Mr. Conrad: Or even perhaps better than that, let Judge

Holt submit specifically the objects for which he believes the proceeds of the public debt had been invested. Where we find that is the fact I think we can say it will be conceded.

Mr. Holt: That is really along the same line as the Master's suggestion, except I am to do it alone instead of two.

Mr. Conrad: The proposition comes from you; West Virginia is making the proposition in the interest of economy of time. I suggest that that motive, that object, can be promoted vastly, if you would just by a memorandum indicate certain specific objects in which you believe the proceeds of the public debt have been invested, and then we can in a few moments from the record and memoranda in our possession see whether you are right.

The Master: We will suspend now until 2:45.

Recess taken until 2:45 P. M.

AFTER RECESS.

Continuation of the cross-examination of

CONWAY W. HILLMAN.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. Did you make any allowance for the bad and doubtful debts in figuring your book value of this stock?

A. No, sir.

Q. Please tell me by reference to the comparative state of the Bank of Virginia, including the branches, on the 1st day of January, 1861, and the 1st day of January, 1860, as shown on document No. 14, pages 6 and 7, whether there was any falling off in the deposits of the Bank of Virginia.

A. Yes, sir, there was between the year ending January 1st, 1860, and January 1st, 1861.

Q. What was the amount?

A. $428,180.31.

Q. Now, was there any falling off between those two periods, namely, January 1st, 1860 and January 1, 1861, of the bills and accounts receivable of that bank, if so to what extent?

A. I do not see any such item on the account.

Q. I call it bills and accounts receivable; I had reference to the first asset, debt outstanding. It is on the asset side.

A. Yes, sir, there was a decrease in the outstanding debt on the asset side.

Q. To what extent?

A. $235,911.36.

Q. Was there any falling off in the third column, stocks, on the asset side?

A. Yes, sir, there was.

Q. To what extent?

A. $37,650.

Q. Now, was there any falling off between the years 1860 and 1861 of the fourth item, specie, on the asset side?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. To what extent?

A. $152,190.04.

The Master: I want to suggest here that if we do not exhaust this line of inquiry this afternoon, I want Mr. Hillman to come in prepared with computations on this same line, because I do not want to wait here and have the computations made here, that is, if we do not exhaust it this afternoon.

Mr. Harrison: I think we will exhaust it.

The Master: If not, I want him to make the computations out of court and let him testify to it without delay. I cannot delay the hearing any more than is absolutely necessary for the computations. It takes an awful lot of time to get this testimony in in this way. I am sorry we had not thought of this this forenoon. Cannot you have somebody outside take these other banks and go through these banks so you can have them right ready to you?

The Witness: No, sir. We only have one copy of this book and I am constantly asked questions on it.

The Master: I do not want to hurry it at the expense of being accurate, but if somebody else could be doing it, we could pull this right off very readily.

Mr. Lilly: The delay now is occasioned by Mr. Harrison.

The Master: Yes, that is true.

Mr. Lilly: And Mr. Hillman cannot anticipate these questions.

The Master: It is not Mr. Hillman's fault. Mr. Hillman is all right. He cannot carry these things in his head.

Q. What does the tabular statement of the bank that we are now dealing with, in document No. 14, show in respect to the surplus, is there an increase or decrease in the surplus between the years 1860 and 1861?

A. There is a decrease in the Surplus and Contingent Fund.

Q. To what extent?

A. $14,906.45.

Q. You have shown by your Exhibit No. 5, page 49, that on the 1st of January, 1861, this stock had a book value of $6.30 premium or $76.30 a share.

The Master: That is $70 par value.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, I ask you whether in view of the analysis of this statement upon which your figures are based and which we have just gone over, the condition of the bank, in your judgment as an expert, was good, bad or indifferent.

A. Based on the figures which had been quoted only, it would show a bad state of affairs; based on the entire trial balance it is not a bad showing.

By The Master:

Q. Does it indicate a prosperous condition or otherwise on the part of the bank?

A. Prosperous, when I take the entire trial balance into account. If I am confined only to the items mentioned it will show a very bad state of affairs.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. The report I guess will speak for itself, the tabular statement that we are dealing with.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you show the same result for the year 1863 that you do for January, 1861, in respect to this bank?

A. Yes, sir, with the same notations on the exhibit, page 38 of the blue prints.

Q. You relied for the year 1863 upon the same report of the officers and tabulated statement that we have been considering and which you relied upon for January, 1861?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And outside of what is shown on that statement, you have no knowledge or information about the value of the stock of this bank at either period, January 1, 1861, or June 20, 1863?

A. Nothing outside of the statement shown on page 38 of the blue prints.

Q. And that statement is founded upon the report of the officers found in Document No. 14, is it not, which we have just been investigating and analyzing?

A. Yes, sir, it is, together with the notation of the dividend which is found in other places.

Q. You did not I believe look to the question of a market quotation for the stock of this bank at either period?

A. No, sir, I have made no investigation as to the market quotations of this stock.

Q. Is the market quotation of stock an important element in determining what its value is?

A. No, sir, I would say it was a secondary evidence only.

Q. That then according to your judgment would not be a matter that one would take into consideration in determining the value of stock?

A. No, sir, only as a secondary evidence.

Q. What do you mean by secondary? Do you mean to say that it would not influence your judgment as to the value of this stock?

A. I mean that in the value of the stock as evidenced by market quotations other elements enter into it which have nothing to do with the stock in question, for instance, the tightness of money, and often times a corner in stock or shortage in stock.

Q. I am not referring now to any special circumstance that might be taken account of in the matter of market quotations of stock, but I am inquiring as to the general proposition whether the market quotations of stock, that is to say, the market value of the stock, as represented by the sale as shown by the market quotation—

The Master : Why don't you confine your inquiry to bank stock?

Mr. Harrison: I will take bank stock. I was inquiring with reference to any stock.

The Master: I do not know that you want to make it as broad as that.

Mr. Harrison: I may have done that already in reference to railroad stock, but I thought the question would be applicable to any security.

The Master: I have no suggestion to make. I did not know but what perhaps you would prefer to confine it to bank stock rather than cover the whole broad field of stock speculation generally, but you pursue your own idea.

Q. I just want to know if I correctly understand you as giving the expert opinion that the market quotations if of any importance at all, are only secondary in influencing the judgment as to the value of that stock at a particular time.

A. Yes, sir.

By The Master:

Q. What do you consider the primary factor in determining the actual cash market value? Now, it is not a question of intrinsic value, but a question of the actual cash market value, which may be quite a different thing from intrinsic value. You appreciate that difference I take it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What do you consider the primary factor? You say this is secondary. What in your judgment is primary in determining the actual cash market value, that is, what it will sell for?

A. In determining the actual cash market value it would be the quotations of an active or reasonably active market.

Q. You mean that would be the primary factor?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I may have got you wrong, but I understood you to say in answer to Mr. Harrison's examination that it was a secondary factor.

The Master: I simply want the witness to have an opportunity to place himself right.

Q. Your judgment is then that a normal market quotation, uninfluenced by corners or artificial efforts to control the market, would be the primary factor, is that what you mean?

A. Yes, sir, necessarily because that would indicate what the cash value was, and you could not get more for it than the stock quotation.

The Master: I think that covers the whole ground. I was simply trying to get what the primary factor was.

Mr. Harrison: That is what I am trying to get at.

The Master: Have I helped you some?

Mr. Harrison: Yes, sir, you have helped us both.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. Then if I correctly understand you, market quotations of bank stock are of primary importance in determining the actual cash value of the stock?

A. Yes, sir; you understand me correctly in determining the amount of cash which you could get for the stock, is that what I understand?

Q. You draw your own distinctions.

A. In determining the amount of the cash which you could obtain for the stock at that period.

Q. Does not that represent its market value?

(No answer.)

Q. What became of this bank, if your investigations tended to devolop the subsequent history of the bank, after June 20, 1863.

A. I don't know what became of it.

Q. Your investigations did not extend beyond June 20, 1863?

A. Yes, sir, we ran a little beyond June 20, 1863, in determining whether or not dividends had been paid on this stock later on, so that we ran beyond that date up to, I think, if my reccollection serves me, January 1, 1865.

By The Master:

Q. What did you find there?

A. Dividends being paid on the stock.

Q. Did you find any after that date?

A. No, sir, because we ended all investigations, as I told you, in April, 1865, on account of a break in the books of the State of Virginia, and we stopped all investigations at that point, unless we came to sales of stock afterwards, but taking off dividends or anything of that kind, we stopped there.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. You found the books of Virginia broken, but did not find the banks broken?

Mr Holt: He did not say that.

A. I made no investigation of what became of the banks after the payment of that dividend.

Mr. Harrison: I will at this moment because my attention is called to it, go back to Class D, page No. 36 of the blue prints, and the question I want to ask is merely because your Honor inquired this morning if there was an agreement between the accountants in respect to the accuracy of the figures stated.

The Master: Yes.

Mr. Harrison: Did that inquiry apply to 1863 or to 1861?

The Master: That was intended to apply to both 1861 and 1863. Now, if there is any inadvertence about that we can correct it of course. I will say this, where that statement appears generally to have been made it will not foreclose either side from raising a question as to an item, but if no questions are raised to items, why, the admission goes. We can clean the record up by the admission, but that does not foreclose you from showing that inadvertently an admission was made that ought not to have been made. But unless attention is called to some particular item, the admission goes and the record is cleaned up as far as that is concerned.

Mr. Harrison: Yes, sir. In that connection I will say that item 20 on that blue print, Blue Ridge Railroad, tolls for use of, this is June 20, 1863, there is extended under the totals an item of $5,853.81.

The Master: Yes.

Mr. Harrison: And the attention of the West Virginia accountants was called to that item this morning as an erroneous item, it having been paid on March 2, 1863.

The Master: That does not affect the accuracy of the mathematical statement?

Mr. Harrison: No.

The Witness: I say that the item which is entered there was entirely erroneous, the entry as of the date of January 1st.

The Master: Put that this way, the entry of $5,853.81 under the column headed totals is an erroneous entry, is that right?

The Witness: Yes, sir; it should be $30,266.80.

The Master: That is, $5,853.81 should be stricken out and this item of thirty thousand odd dollars should be inserted in its place?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

Mr. Harrison: We just wanted to get his statement of whatever correction he wanted to make.

The Witness: Shall I proceed?

The Master: Yes.

The Witness: The entry as mentioned here was of January 1, 1863, and should have been entirely ignored, since we are dealing with the date of June 20, 1863. It seems however that my assistant's eye got that entry and used that, which was the line above the one he should have used, and pro rated that from the date of its payment, March 2, 1863, using the date 1864 which applied to the entry below, and therefore the mistake was made. He was catching one line above the proper entry.

The Master: You say then there ought to be inserted this $30,000 in its place?

The Witness: Yes, sir, which is an amount paid March 31, 1864 of $64,984.49, totals for the year ending January 1, 1864, which pro rated on the time basis yields $30,266.80.

The Master: That item will be checked up later by Mr. Potter?

Mr. Harrison: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. Take up the next item, Bank of the Valley, shown on Exhibit No. 5, page 51 of the printed exhibits. What do you show the total number of shares owned by the state in the stock of that bank to be?

A. 4,839 shares.

Q. And with a par value of what?

A. 100; total of $483,900.

Q. And what is the book value of that stock according to your exhibit as of January 1, 1861?

A. $111.20.

The Master: Per share?

The Witness: Yes, sir, per share. Your Honor, I will have to make a corrected statement here on my testimony a moment ago, and that is, the last dividend that I find paid to the state on account of its bank stock was, on the Bank of Virginia, January 3, 1863; Farmers' Bank, June 11, 1863; Valley Bank, January 23, 1863; Exchange Bank, July 10, 1863, and the Northwestern Bank, February 4, 1861, as that bank was over in West Virginia.

Mr. Holt: Do you mean by that that those are the last dividends you found paid by those banks?

The Witness: Paid by the banks to the State of Virginia.

Mr. Holt: That is what I mean.

The Witness: Yes, sir.

Q. Look at the balance sheet of the Bank of the Valley, document No. 14, page 35.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will ask you if you have not based your calculation of the value of this bank on a surplus which contains a possible loss of over $43,000, represented or rather shown by the statement on a payment deficiency in the cash account of the late teller of the mother bank, arising from overdrafts and so forth remitted by him, $13,522.12, and this notation by the directors of the bank, "In addition to the amount of ascertained liabilities as stated, it is proper to add that there may probably be due to the mother bank the bank's deposits above $30,000 for omissions on the part of the late teller to enter credits for remittances and deposits. The precise amount not yet accurately ascertained. No ultimate loss however to the bank by his credits is apprehended."

A. However that may affect the balances of the profit and loss in the bank, I have not considered it.

Q. Referrring to our schedule, page 53, do those notations that I have just read and the description of the deficiency due on account of the overdrafts permitted by the teller appear?

A. No, sir.

Q. Why not? Should they not appear in order to be an exact copy of the balance sheet?

A. No, sir, they should not be a copy of the balance sheet, they should not appear.

Q. They are on the balance sheet as shown by the report of the officers, are they not?

A. They appear as foot notes on the same sheet where the sheet is shown, they are not part of the balance sheet.

Q. If they are explanatory of the balance sheet ought they not to be shown?

A. No, sir, I think not, when the foot note on page 35 is considered, no ultimate loss however to the bank is apprehended.

Q. If you were auditing the bank would not you take that up as a contingent liability?

A. I would mention it, but I would not take it up as a liability until I had determined the amount.

Q. Then as the directors saw fit to mention it on their report, their balance sheet, my question was, in order that we might have the benefit of an exact copy as was purported to be of that balance sheet, why did you not include it?

A. Because it is not included in the balance sheet.

Q. What do you mean by not included in the balance sheet?

Do you mean to say it is not on the page that the balance sheet appears on?

A. Yes, sir, it is printed on that sheet.

Q. That is what I mean, that it is on the balance sheet, it is printed on the same sheet that the figures are printed on.

A. All right, sir, it is printed on the same sheet that the figures are printed on. I did not take it into account, nor would I consider it necessary to take it into account.

Q. And it is explanatory of the account?

Mr. Holt: I would like to ask a question.

Mr. Harrison: I would rather you would re-examine him.

Mr. Holt: I want to ask whether in adding up the liabilities on the one side and the assets on the other side the item appears in either column.

The Witness: No, sir, it does not.

Q. Do you mean to say that the $13,522.12 is not in either column?

A. Yes, sir, that is taken into account.

Q. And that is the item that the directors qualified by saying that it is a deficiency in the cash account of the teller?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. With a foot note explaining it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Neither foot note have you put on your alleged copy of that document or have you put on it the explanation which the directors gave of that item of $13,522.12?

A. No, sir; I have not copied either footnote nor another foot note which is headed indebtedness of directors, which immediately precedes this foot note.

The Master: How much did the directors owe?

The Witness: January 1, 1861, it shows $52,308.59.

Q. Does the comparative statement show any decrease in the profits of this bank between 1860 and 1861, the comparative statement on the next page?

A. Yes, sir, it shows a decrease of $4,519.60.

Q. That is profit and loss and surplus, isn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, as to the deposits?

A. That also shows a decrease in deposits.

Q. Of how much?

A. Of $48,051.99.

Q. Do you give the same value to the stock of this bank, to the Bank of the Valley, in June 1863, that you do in January 1861?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And is the value of June, 1863, based upon the same reports that the value for January, 1861, is based on?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And independently of those reports you have no knowledge or information as to the value of this stock at either period?

A. No, sir, outside of that and of the dividends quoted as declared upon sheet No. 40 of the blue prints, 1863.

Q. I will ask you the same question in reference to this bank, did your investigations or inquiries lead you to the ascertainment of the fact as to what became of the bank, whether it ceased to exist or whether it is still in existence?

A. No, sir, I made no investigation.

Q. Do you know what became of the state's holdings in this or either of the other three banks that we have been discussing?

A. No, sir, I do not.

Q. Now, I call your attention to the Exchange Bank, shown on your exhibit No. 51, page 52. What is the total holdings of the State in that bank as shown by your exhibit, January 1, 1861?

A. 8,755 shares.

Q. And par value of how much?

A. Par value of $100, $875,500.

Q. What do you show the net value, you call it book value of that stock, to be January 1, 1861?

A. $107.40 per share.

Q. Or premium of $7.40, wouldn't it be?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well now what do you show to be the profits on which your book value is based?

A. $342,170.29.

Q. Does not that include $191,584.24 described as a contingent fund?

A. Yes, sir, it does, and is so stated on page 52.

Q. What were the earnings of this bank, as shown by the tabular statement found on page 23 of Document 14, for December 31, 1860?

A. The profits of the institution entered there are $150,586.05.

By The Master:

Q. Is that the way it appears in the report, "Profits of the institution?"

A. Yes, sir.

The Witness: And I do not consider that they are the profits of the bank for the year at all.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. What dividend was the bank paying, or did it pay for that year?

A. 7½ per cent.

Q. What would the total dividend amount to?

A. $235,282.50.

Q. Then if the total dividends amounted to that figure, namely $235,282.50, and the profit earned, the profit of the institution earned as of December 31, 1860 was $150,586.05, the bank did not earn its dividend, did it?

A. If those are the facts it did not earn its dividend.

Q. Well, now by how much did it fail to earn its dividend, based on those figures?

A. Supposing those to be the facts, it failed to earn its dividend by $84,695.45.

Q. I find that the sworn statement of the officers of the bank report the profits of the institution of that year to be $150,586.05, as you have testified to. What is there in the statement to indicate that the sworn statement of the officers is not correct?

A. That is a running account, the profits of the institution, to which the profits are added and from which the dividends are deducted, and from which from time to time payments may be made to a contingent or surplus fund. It is a running account and does not represent the earnings.

Q. How do you know it is a running account? Have you seen anything except this statement upon which you base that statement?

A. No, sir, but it can readily be deducted by a comparison of the profits and losses for this year and for the last year.

Q. Then it is a deduction that you draw in spite of the explicit statement of the directors?

A. It is an absolute fact which you can draw from these two statements. The profits of the institution, I state are a running account, and that when this statement is made of the directors—

By The Master:

Q. How did you know what was in that running account if you had never seen it?

A. For the reason, your Honor, that the dividends must come from the earnings or from the surplus. It is shown that in each of these years which we have examined the dividends have exceeded this amount which they say were profits of the institution. If they had been the entire profits that would have been a wiping out of the profit and loss account and a severe reduction of the surplus account. Therefore that must be a running account, and the profits which are carried to that account before the deductions for dividends or other items are made must have been larger than this amount. Therefore it is absolutely sure that the profits must have been larger.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. That is your deduction? Am I correct in that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, how does your June 20, 1863, statement turn out in respect to the value which you give this stock as of that date?

A. We have used the same value, viz. $107.40 per share, in 1863, page 41 of the blue prints, as in 1861.

Q. And you have no other information or knowledge as to its value on either date except what you have derived from the statement of the officers of the bank as contained on Document No. 14?

A. None save that and the notation as to dividends paid which I have made on page 41 of the blue prints.

Mr. Lilly: Mr. Harrison, may I ask just one question?

Mr. Harrison: Yes.

By Mr. Lilly:

Q. You have given an explanation with reference to this last bank. Does that apply to the other banks concerning which Mr. Harrison has asked you?

A. Yes, sir, it does.

By Mr. Holt:

Q. In other words running account covers the profits of the institution?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In the case of all banks?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Holt: That will save a tremendous amount of re-direct examination on that point.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. Now, we come to the next item—

The Master: Before you go to that I should like to have you put into the record his theory by which he demonstrates the existence of this running account.

Mr. Lilly: I think I could make a statement possibly—

Mr. Harrison: Let the witness state.

Mr. Lilly: I thought he had finished with that examination.

By The Master:

Q. What I want is, you say you can take the history of this bank for two years and demonstrate that this item of profits of the institution does not cover all of the profits of the institution. Now take the trial balances, for two years and give me your figures, and put the demonstration on the record so that I can understand it. I want to know how it is, from the trial balances of this bank, it can be demonstrated that there was in existence a running account, the result of which was $150,586.05. Now cipher that out for me so that I can understand it.

Mr. Lilly: Your Honor does not mean to call for it at this moment?

The Master: Yes, I want him to put it right in here now. He can do it if it does not take too long.

Mr. Harrison: He might do it over night.

The Master: Then I won't let him stop to do it now. but I will have him bring that in to-morrow morning the very first thing. Be prepared with a concrete, precise, mathematical demonstration of this proposition, so that it can be clear on the record, so that I can understand it. I feel bound to say that I do not understand it now, and it does not go for anything unless I do understand it.

The Witness: All right.

The Master: You know what I want, Mr. Hillman.

The Witness: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. Now we come to the Northwestern Bank, page 53. What is the amount that you show there to be the holdings of the State of Virginia in that bank on January 1, 1861?

A. 3,744 shares, $100 each, $374,400.

Q. How much of that 3,744 shares was what was described as bonus stock?

A. I do not know, sir. I do not know what you mean by bonus stock.

Q. Well, it all appears in the original record, and there—I will give the reference if it is necessary, but I won't stop to do it now—there it appears that 326 shares of that amount was called bonus stock, and conceded that the State had not paid any consideration for it, but it came as a bonus with a subscription.

Mr. Lilly: You mean to introduce proof of that later?

Mr. Harrison: I will refer to the record. I am not going to prove it; it is in the original record now. I thought the accountant had said something about it in his direct examination.

The Master: Of course if you rely on part of the original record to establish that fact it will be necessary to call their attention to it undoubtedly. It is in the summary of the Master's report.

Mr. Lilly: I have not seen that. They ought to introduce it.

The Master: It cannot go into the record without your attention being called to it.

The Witness: No, sir, I am not familiar with that fact, if it is a fact, that 326 shares is bonus stock.

Mr. Holt: It would be immaterial on the question of value anyhow, whether it was given to the State or bought by it. We owned it, however it was.

Mr. Harrison: I am going to refer to that again.

Q. What do you show to be the market value of 3,744 shares not market value, I mean your book value, of the Northwestern stock, January 1, 1861?

A. $108.40.

Q. That gives a total value of how much?

A. $405,849.60, page 53 of the printed record.

Q. You have charged that to the State of Virginia have you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why did you do that?

A. Because the State of Virginia at that time owned these shares.

Q. Did you charge the value of that stock to the State of Virginia under your statement of June 20, 1863?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why did you do that?

A. The books of Virginia showed that amount of stock still on them as still on hand.

Q. Were you aware that the supplemental answer of the defendant conceded that whatever value that stock possessed should be charged to the State of West Virginia?

Mr. Lilly: I want to correct that as a statement of fact because we concede only a certain part of it. Part of it was taken over by the Jefferson people.

Mr. Harrison: I said whatever value the stock possessed was included in the part that he charged to the State of West Virginia.

Mr. Holt: You misunderstood Mr. Lilly.

The Master: If there is any question raised about what the answer says, refer to it.

Mr. Harrison: I will withdraw my last question and put it over again.

Q. Were you aware that the supplemental answer of the defendant conceded that $210,200 of the value of that stock should be charged to the State of West Virginia?

A. Yes, sir; I was.

Q. And in spite of that you charged the whole of it to the State of Virginia?

A. Yes, sir, I put the whole of it up for consideration. I had as yet made no deduction from the totals on account of the transfer of that stock of the Northwestern Bank; and at the same time I might mention, of the Fairmount Bank, to West Virginia.

Q. Why were you putting up for consideration the item that West Virginia did not claim?

A. We have this item to show the total value of that stock on that date. Afterwards there was practically a payment made on the stock, you might call it so, by transfer to the State of West Virginia, of certain bank stocks, which I have not taken into consideration in this computation. I did not consider that it had its place here.

Q. You know how much this stock cost the State of Virginia?

A. I should say it cost the State of Virginia par as far as my knowledge goes.

Q. Do I understand you to say now that the State of Virginia paid $374,400 for this stock, for the 3,744 shares?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is your authority for that statement?

A. I have only the authority that it was entered upon the books as of that value, par value, on that date. I did not run back to see whether it had been actually paid in in money; I supposed of course it had.

Q. Now by reference to Defendant's Exhibit G-1, page 10, page 820 K of the original record, paragraph 7 of the Decree you will find the total amount of that stock, January 1, 1861, is shown to be 3,418 shares, which exhibit did not take into account 326 shares which the State had acquired without paying any money for them. Do you find the total given there?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. As 3,418 shares?

A. I do, yes, sir

Q. Now by reference to the report of the Master, at pages 189 to 192 inclusive—have you examined the report of the Master?

A. Yes, sir, I have read it.

Q. Did you examine what he had to say about this stock?

A. Yes, sir, I have read his report.

Q. Well, he charges to West Virginia the total value of the 3,418 shares, does he not?

A. I do not recall, sir.

Q. Well, if you will look at the page, I will be glad if you will so that we may be in agreement about it. Have you got the report before you?

A. I have not.

Q. I will hand it to you—or I will read it to you.

The Master: What is the page of the report?

Mr. Harrison: The discussion begins on page 189, about the center of the page, and the precise reference is about the middle of page 190.

Q. As appears from the report of the Master it was first conceded by West Virginia that the total value of 3,418 shares should be charged to her—

Mr. Holt: Is that conceded in the Master's report?

Q—the point being made that West Virginia ought not to be charged with the 326 shares, which Virginia did not press. Subsequently, after making the concession that West Virginia should be charged with the whole value of 3,418 shares, West Virginia's counsel amended that contention and insisted that she ought not to be charged with more than $105,100, as shown on page 190 of the Master's report. But under the findings of the Master, which are concluded on page 192, the West Virginia contention was rejected, and West Virginia was charged by the Master with 3,418 shares, at a value of $125 a share, which he ascertained to be the reasonable value of the stock as of January 1, 1861.

Mr. Holt: At what do you put the value of that stock on your schedule there?

The Witness: $108.04.

Q. Making a total charge against Virginia on account of the Northwestern Bank of $427,250, which excluded 326 shares, because West Virginia thought she ought to be excused from accounting for that, as the State has not in the first instance paid money for it.

Mr. Lilly: Is it contended that West Virginia got the branch bank over in Jefferson?

Mr. Harrison: I did not understand your question.

Mr. Holt: The part of that finding, your Honor, if I understand it, is the result of the lack of evidence.

Mr. Harrison: All the evidence was here, I think, Judge.

Mr. Holt: Well, if I am wrong you will correct me. The theory being that the whole of that Northwestern Bank went to West Virginia, when as a matter of fact it did not.

Mr. Harrison: That was the contention that West Virginia's counsel made.

Mr. Holt: It had a branch bank in Tazewell, Virginia, that carried a part of these assets with it and never got across the State line at all. How much was that, Mr. Lilly, $160,000?

Mr. Lilly: Well my memory is about $160,000; I do not remember definitely.

Mr. Holt: The theory there was that it was all over in West Virginia, when it turned out subsequently, or seems to be a fact now at least, that one of its branches was still in Virginia and we did not get that at all.

Mr. Lilly: And the Confederate government took charge of it.

Mr. Holt: Of course that will be up to us to show.

Mr. Lilly: It is up to them to show it.

Mr. Anderson: My recollection is it was a claim set up here after the hearing was closed, and some exhibits filed or sought to be filed by West Virginia, asserting the fact just now stated by Judge Holt.

Mr. Harrison: Even if there was a branch at Tazewell County, that would not affect the disposition of the stock of the bank.

Mr. Holt: Certainly not, but we are trying to ascertain now the value of that stock. Then any portion of it that West Virginia got of course would be deducted from the sum total.

Mr. Harrison: That value has been once definitely ascertained, the value of the stock of the Northwestern Bank. If there is to be any amendment now it would be to increase the charge against West Virginia by charging her with 326 shares that were omitted before, after the value ascertained by the Master.

Mr. Lilly: The value ascertained by the Master was solely on the basis of dividends, and now we show the dividends and we show the financial standing of the bank.

Mr. Harrison: You can impeach the report of the Master as much as you please; I am merely showing what the report was.

Mr. Lilly: We are willing to take that as the financial basis of valuing stock of all the banks.

Q. In spite of the findings of the Master, as called to your attention again, and with which you say you are familiar, that 3,418 shares of the stock of the Northwestern Bank had been charged to West Virginia, and in spite of the admission of the defendant in her supplemental answer that she should be charged with $210,200 of the value of said stock, you have charged Virginia with the ascertained book value of all of the stock of the bank, including bonus, have you not?

A. Yes, sir, leaving the settlement of how much was returned to Virginia as an after consideration.

By Mr. Lilly:

Q. To West Virginia?

A. To West Virginia as an after consideration.

By The Master:

Q. How much was received by West Virginia and for which she should be charged, that is what you mean?

A. Yes, sir, I will amend my answer that way.

Mr. Holt: Now that is the state of his exhibit, and it speaks for itself.

The Master: Then any controversy about the foundation for any of these conclusions as to which you do not agree I will hear you on later and determine.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. Now instead of crediting Virginia by the value of the Northwestern Bank stock you have charged her with it and included it in $4,060,487.02, have you not, carried into your summary?

A. Yes, sir, I have carried it into the summary of $4,060,487.02.

Q. Now if that is taken out it will have to be taken out twice, won't it? If it is an improper charge it will have to come out, won't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And if it ought to be charged to West Virginia you would have to take it off again, wouldn't you?

A. No, sir.

Q. If it was charged instead of being credited, won't you have to take it off twice?

A. No, sir, it is included in the items for which Virginia has got to account to West Virginia, supposing it of course to be of value, and in accounting to West Virginia they are allowed a credit of the full amount of the stock, but the charge should be for mutual consideration as to the cost of that stock before the full credit is allowed.

Q. Now you have charged this item to Virginia, have you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. If it is an erroneous charge it ought to come out, ought it not?

A. It is afterwards to be taken out for whatever it is worth.

Q. Now if it turns out to be an erroneous charge it will have to come out, if it also turns out that Virginia is entitled to be credited with it you will have to take it out again, won't you?

A. No, sir.

Q. Are you quite sure of that?

A. Yes, quite postive.

The Master: Then watch his question, and when you answer it don't spend any time as to the effect of the answer upon the results of the case, but just notice what his question is and answer the question. I am afraid you have not got just the full purport of the question. It is not up to you what the consequences of the question are, but just get the question that he asks you. And whether it is a proper question or whether it is predicated upon anything that exists is not up to you. I am afraid you may have gotten a little bit confused on that.

The Witness: No, sir, I think that is a correct answer.

Q. I will try you again. I find in the summary of $4,060,-487.02 you have charged an item of $405,849.60 against Virginia—

Mr. Holt: That is to the joint account of Virginia and West Virginia.

Mr. Harrison: Now Judge, I do not know what you are talking about when you are talking about the joint account. I am dealing with the witness' summary.

Mr. Holt: Well, I have described it accurately.

The Master: Your assistance does not seem to be appreciated, Judge.

Mr. Holt: It does not.

Mr. Harrison: I would like to see if the witness and I cannot have a chance to understand each other about the idea.

The Master: That you shall have.

Q. I will begin again. You have charged in your summary of charges against the State of Virginia an item of $4,060,487.02. Am I right about that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Included in that item is a charge against Virginia of $405,849.60 on account of the Northwestern Bank, is there not?

A. Yes, sir, I understanding of course that this is a charge against Virginia items for amounts which are afterwards to be prorated. It is not a direct charge against Virginia of that amount.

Q. Now I say if you have charged that item improperly, if it was an erroneous charge, it ought to go out, ought it not?

A. Yes, sir, if it is an erroneous charge.

Q. And if you took it out what would be the balance left?

A. $3,654,638.22.

Q. Now if, instead of charging it as has been erroneously done, you credit Virginia with it, what would be the amount left?

A. If I make a duplicate charge against West Virginia for it, I would then have to make a further deduction from the $3,654,638.22.

The Master: Now that is exactly the legal purport of the question that Mr. Harrison put to you about ten minutes ago, and if you had watched him carefully you would have answered him in the same way then. You had in mind that it was a different proposition. We would have been just that much farther along. That is why I suggested that you pay a little more careful attention to what he says. You ignored the idea of crediting it. Of course you have landed in the same place now.

The Witness: I think, your Honor, when you come to study the case you will find that my answer covers the case exactly.

The Master: You are not to blame perhaps for being somewhat confused about it, but you would have landed just where you have now landed.

The Witness: Your Honor, I think when you analyze what I have just now said and what I said five minute ago that they coincide exactly.

The Master: Well, there is no harm done anyway.

Q. Now we will take up the next bank in order, Exhibit No. 5, page 55, Fairmount Bank. What do you show to be the total number of shares owned by the State of Virginia in that bank?

A. 500 shares, par $100, total $50,000.

Q. Are you not mistaken in respect to the number of shares and the par?

A. I think not. I have looked over the accounts and I see nothing on the books which would indicate whether it was 1,000 shares at $50 each or 500 shares at $100 each.

Q. It appears from the original record in the case, paragraph 7 of the Decree, page 820-K, the same page that we examined in connection with the Northwestern Bank, that the total amount of shares held by the State in the Fairmount Bank was 1,000, and that the par value of the stock was $50 a share, or $50,000.

Mr. Lilly: Does it appear where that was taken from?

Mr. Harrison: That is an agreed schedule between the two accountants, and the evidence does not show that fact. I did have the page a while ago but I have lost it, and I do not want to take the time to hunt it up again; but that is the fact.

Mr. Holt: The total capital is $50,000.

Mr. Harrison: The total capital is correctly stated, but the schedule is incorrect as to the par and the number of shares.

Q. Now what value do you put upon that stock?

A. $103.87 for every $100 worth of stock.

Q. And do you give it the same value in 1863?

A. Yes, sir, I do.

Q. Have you charged the value of that stock to the State of Virginia?

A. I have charged that value upon my summary.

Q. Upon your summary of what?

A. Of the amounts which should be taken into consideration in determining the amount due from Virginia to West Virginia. In that sense I have charged it to Virginia.

Q. Why did you charge it in any sense to Virginia, in view of the concession of the defendant in her supplemental answer that that should be charged to West Virginia?

A. For the same reason as mentioned in regard to the previous stock, that whatever credits were due should be or would be taken up as an after consideration and not at this point. At this time the stock had not been turned over to West Virginia.

Q. Now if it is charged to Virginia and you merely give her credit for it she would not be getting any value, would she? She would not be getting the benefit? She ought not to be charged with it at all, ought she, if it is properly chargeable to West Virginia?

A. I am charging to joint account, I say, and leaving the credits afterwards to take care of themselves.

Mr. Holt: Your Honor, will you permit me to make a little statement right there, because I do not want any confusion of our theory. I think Mr. Harrison has our theory on that. We are trying now to ascertain the total value of the common assets as of 1861, we will say. The banks are included. When we get that total value, 76½ per cent. thereof Virginia is entitled to, and we are entitled according to our contention to the remaining 23½ per cent. But we have to get the total value of the joint assets. Then of that we first take 23½ per cent. to find West Virginia's part and when we find that, if it should be subsequently discovered that any part of that has been heretofore paid over to her, as in the case of the banks across the mountains, why it would be deducted from that 23½ per cent. of ours. You would not be charging up and deducting in one place the whole joint asset in another.

Mr. Harrison: Your Honor will perceive the fallacy of the statement of Judge Holt, coming here and selecting from a number of investments made by the original State of Virginia certain of those investments which it is said West Virginia is entitled to participate in, to have a percentage of those investments assigned to her. Would it be proper to include in that list an investment that West Virginia had gotten the entire benefit of and has gone with, and which it is conceded Virginia had no share in whatsoever? That is the point, and there is the fallacy of the Judge's statement—of his position I mean, when he speaks of having a joint account which is to be divided according to a percentage, to go to one side or the other. The theory of the supplemental answer is that they have discovered something, that they have discovered a certain number of named investments which it is said Virginia failed to account for and which West Virginia is entitled to a certain share of. Well, surely, if that is true it would not be right to include in that list an investment that West Virginia got the entire benefit of. You could not hold Virginia accountable for somethng that West Virginia has had the entire benefit of, incorporate that in the list and say you will give West Virginia another share of it. Therefore, when we tried this case before there was no difficulty of course in eliminating those particular assets that it was conceded on all hands West Virginia had gotten. She was chargeable with those. Now here, take the Northwestern Bank and the Fairmount Bank, the Fairmount Bank about which there is no dispute, no difference of opinion, that West Virginia reaped the benefit of that entirely, and not one copper of benefit accrued to Virginia; my point is that it has no place in any column of figures that purports to embrace items for which Virginia is liable, and for which West Virginia is entitled to a percentage of. We are not dealing with any joint account that would bring about such a result as that.

The Master: I think I understand the contention of the parties.

Mr. Conrad: As a recent distinguished citizen said, this is a condition and not a theory. You ascertained it in your former report; it is res adjudicata, that it was exclusively the property of West Virginia and that Virginia had no right to participate in it at all. I have been somewhat at sea at some observations that have fallen from you as to what the extent of this previous record is. It may not be out of place for me to express my doubt. I apprehend that your Honor proposes to efface the entire record. I challenge your right to do that. This is the record of the Supreme Court of the United States. The decree under which we are assembled here now does not efface this at all. This comes in under a supplemental answer, and these are supplemental proceedings to what has occurred. I have heard you several times, if I understood you correctly, speaking of having to prove something that was in this record, and God forbid; that is fixed by the decree of the court. The court has confirmed the report which you made on that record. I do not consider the decree under which we are now meeting here as in any degree or to any extent setting aside the decree confirming your report. That decree of confirmation stands. The court says that nothing in this decree shall be construed as affecting in any way its previous determination in this case. Now, you have decided and the court has confirmed your finding that this particular item here of $50,000 of stock in the Fairmount Bank is exclusively, absolutely the property of West Virginia.

Mr. Lilly: May I ask you a question. In the ultimate determination of the case did the Northwestern Bank or the Fairmount Bank computation enter into it whatever?

Mr. Conrad: My Lord, yes. You will find in the report of the Master, confirmed by the court, that the Fairmount Bank's asset of $50,000 was conceded and admitted and adjudicated to be exclusively the property of West Virginia, and therefore all this matter about undertaking to ascertain the distributive or contributive share of Virginia in the matter is absurd logically, not personally.

Mr. Holt: Your Honor, just one word. I think we are speaking somewhat at cross purposes.

The Master: I do not think that any of this discussion is going to be productive of any advantageous result. It is all anticipating what comes later. And I may say here that I do not understand that the finding of the court in the previous case as to the Fairmount Bank in the slightest degree militates against the contention now relied upon by West Virginia; I do not think it affects it in the slightest. I will not go over it in detail, but I think I understand the situation. The only question here now is what we want in here as evidence. I will admit anything that either of you have to offer upon this item. As to the effect to be given to it, I will hear you all later. Of course the suggestion of Judge Holt or as to their theory and contention was perfectly answered by Mr. Harrison from the standpoint of Virginia; but neither of those contentions concern me right now. We are taking up the evidence and we want the evidence in, and later I will hear you all as to the effect of this evidence. There has not been a thing said on one side or the other that affects the admissibility of anything either of you want to prove in respect to this item. Mr. Harrison's cross-examination is a perfectly proper cross-examination on the schedules made by Mr. Hillman, and it is perfectly proper for him to show how Mr. Hillman understands them and how he understands them. I have succeeded in being misunderstood as to this original record. I have never intended to say that the original record was not a valid record and part of the record in this case, but what I have tried to say two or three times and what I am trying to have done is this, that when I make up my record to go to the court it will include not only what is testified to here, but will include all of the original record that either party relies upon in connection with the contentions here, so that when the Supreme Court takes this case up and passes on it and when I take it up and pass on it I will have one record made up of the testimony in this case and all that has been introduced before so far as either of you think what has been introduced before tends to illuminate the situation here. Do I make that clear? That does not preclude the court and does not eliminate the original record, but my idea was, whatever either side relied on as a part of this original record as being legitimately probative of any fact that is pending before me here, I want them to point it out to me so that I will look those things up in the original record without going over the whole record myself, and then I wanted it pointed out to the other side so that if the other side wanted to take anything from the original record that tends to explain the matter relied upon by Virginia they will have an opportunity to do that. Of course I have no doubt but that the two records might perhaps be properly termed the legal record in this case; but we are all practical people. The Supreme Court expects me to put this case up in as concrete and concise shape as can be, and that is what I am hoping to do. Of course I am not going to make up a record here that anybody objects to. If the counsel for Virginia when they come to make up this record insist that the whole of the original record goes up as part of my record, I will put it in; or if the counsel for West Virginia insist on that, I will put it in, but the object of that suggestion was and my opinion is that it is going to be better for all concerned if we take the record we make here and then make a part of that as much of the original record as either side may think is pertinent and proper. Do I make myself clear, Mr. Conrad?

Mr. Conrad: Perfectly clear, but I do not agree with you. Pardon me. I represent in this case—

The Master : I do not propose to give this as a direction that is going to foreclose anybody. If Mr. Conrad feels that all ought to go in, it will go in.

Mr. Conrad: It is not what is going in, but what I think ought to be kept out. I represent here the people who are paying for all of this. They have paid now nearly three hundred thousand dollars of money, and the case has not yet been decided. I want to keep down every dollar of expense that is possible to do and you talk about reprinting this record that has already cost thousands of dollars, the stenographic report of which cost over ten thousand dollars.

The Master: Eight thousand dollars.

Mr. Conrad: Ten thousand dollars I am told.

The Master: About eight thousand. It cost enough anyway.

Mr. Conrad: That is enough. I am absolutely opposed to requiring us to reprint anything that is in that book. You have spoken once or twice of not having two records for the Supreme Court. This is all one record. It may be in a dozen volumes. I have a case in the Supreme Court with fifteen distinct volumes in it. Volumes do not make any difference to the court at all. This record must remain intact. It is a record of the Supreme Court of the United States.

The Master: It can all be stipulated.

Mr. Conrad: You cannot strike any part of it out.

The Master: I do not propose to.

Mr. Conrad: If there is any conflict in this case between the record previously made and the record which is made here, if they should come in conflict, I should feel at perfect liberty, either myself or vicariously to call the attention of the Supreme Court to that fact. What has aroused me here, perhaps indiscretely, certainly for my own physical comfort, is the suggestion, the intimation, that whatever is in this record has got to be reprinted and called to the attention of these gentlemen. Why, God forbid that we should say that this is not West Virginia, the same West Virginia, that led to this intolerably lengthy record. They are not people who are coming in here now who have not been parties or privies to this matter here before. They are affected by everything in the record, bound by everything in the record. Why should we even call their attention to anything in it? It is their record as well as ours. And now we talk about printing the bill, the demurrer, the answers, already printed. No, I protest against that; I protest against anything being reprinted that is in the record, Let it be referred to in this record by reference.

The Master: As far as I am concerned I do not care whether it is or not.

Mr. Conrad: I speak for the people who have to pay the money for this—

The Master: We will not have any difficulty about it. In the first place, you have not got to print anything from the original record that you want to refer to.

Mr. Conrad: There is a great deal in it that we want to refer to.

The Master: I do not suppose anybody will have any objection to calling my attention to what they rely on in the original record.

Mr. Conrad: This very stipulation that was proposed here this morning covers over one hundred pages, seventy-five or one hundred pages.

The Master: It can all be stipulated.

Mr. Conrad: I won't stipulate anything.

The Master: Very well, I cannot require you to.

Mr. Holt: The stipulation involves even more than the one hundred pages, because the record of the Board of Public Works is not in Exhibit No. 1; there is the difficulty; and we have been compelled to supplement that exhibit with long-winded oral testimony. I do not misunderstand the suggestion of the Master at all. The suggestion is along the line of convenience, to have a complete record, either side to have the privilege of calling to the attention of the Master such portions of the old record as may be relied upon. Of course we are not trying to destroy the record of the Supreme Court as it stands, but as a matter of fact there has never been a decree in this case excepting the decree of reference.

The Master: I do not think we need have any misapprehension or any trouble. I understand the significance of Mr. Conrad's suggestion and I sympathize entirely with him; as far as he is concerned I do not blame him for having more or less disturbance and annonyance about the expense and the delay. The expense has been large and the delay has been great; and consistently with other things, as far as I am concerned, I propose to consult his wishes and his convenience as well as that of the other counsel in the case. I do not think we will have the slightest trouble in giving a direction as to what may be done in that regard that will be agreeable to all concerned, and certainly as far as I am concerned I shall do my level best to keep the thing within the narrowest possible limits on the line of expense. I can understand perfectly well exactly how Mr. Conrad feels about it, and it is perfectly justifiable from his point of view. I am sorry he has got the impression, at least I did not intend for him to get the impression that I thought the original record was not the record, because it is all a part of the record. I do not think we will have any difficulty about that, and especially if you are able to come to some understanding in relation to the matters suggested in connection with this stipulation.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. What is the total amount that you have charged in your summary on account of these figures for the year 1861 and June 20, 1863?

A. $51,935.

Q. No, I intended to say for all of the banks, the total.

A. $4,060,487.82.

Q. Now, what have you charged for June 20, 1863?

A. The same amount, $4,060,487.82.

Q. Do I understand you to say that you intend to give the same explanation of your charge of the Fairmount stock in your summary against Virginia that you give in the case of the Northwestern Bank stock?

A. Yes, sir.

(Adjourned to September 8, 1914, at 10 A. M.)

BEFORE THE MASTER.

Richmond, Va., September 8, 1914.

Present, the same counsel as on yesterday.

The Master: We have the first proof of the work that is now being done by the printer laid on our desks this morning, and I would like to call the attention of the counsel on either side to it so that they can at the earliest moment examine it, so that when the time comes we can have the necessary copies struck off and this type distributed. I hope you will be prepared to give us some suggestions on that line tomorrow morning.

Continuation of the Cross-examination of

CONWAY W. HILLMAN.

By the Master:

Q. Now Mr. Hillman, just read me what you have in relation to the demonstration as to the question of whether or not the items of profits of the institution does or does not include the whole profits. I want to see just what you have on that line. Read it right into the record.

The Master: And then after that we will have the statement from Judge Holt, and Mr. Harrison will go on with his cross-examination.

A. Farmer's Bank of Virginia, one of the specimen banks, January 1, 1859—

Mr. Holt: Haven't you given us the Bank of Virginia?

The Witness: No.

The Master: I told him he could give us any one by way of illustration.

Q. You have prepared a detailed computation relating to the Farmer's Bank of Virginia and the Exchange Bank of Virginia, which in your judgment demonsrates this proposition?

A. Yes.

The Master: Now we will put that right into the record; I won't stop to have it read, and I will look it over, and if I want anything further I will examine further about it, and either of you gentlemen, if you want anything further, may examine about it. But at this time I won't take time to examine further about it. You may put it right into the record. Is that agreeable?

Mr. Lilly: Yes, sir.

The Master: As far as I am concerned I would be very much better qualified to examine about it after I had looked it over. That may go right into the record as part of your statement.

The Witness: The statement is as follows: Statement showing that "Profits of Institution" is not the total annual profit of Banks as shown by Document No. 14, and that it is a "running account" only.

FARMER'S BANK OF VIRGINIA.

January 1, 1859. Page 24, Document 14.

Had surplus and contingent fund of	$ 343,477.53
And profits of the institution,	166,695.72
Total available for dividends	510,173.25
In 1859 dividends were declared for	236,317.50
being 7½ per cent. on $3,150,900.00 Capital, which, if taken out of the above would leave a balance of	$ 273,855.75

Instead of this the bank showed on January 1, 1860, Page 24, Document 14

Surplus and Contingent	$ 331,040.09
Profits of the Institution	145,813.47
	$ 476,853.56

Which proves conclusively that the amount of $166,695.72 WAS NOT the entire earnings.

Advance now to the next year, January 1, 1860, Page 24, Document 14.

Surplus and Contingent Fund was.....$ 331,040.09
Profits of the Institution 145,813.47

$ 476,853.56

Dividends for 1860, 7¼ per cent. on $3,150,900.00...$ 228,440.25
Which would leave a balance of..... 248,413.31
Instead of this the bank showed January 1, 1861,
Pages 14 and 15, Document 14.....
Surplus and Contingent .....$ 337,067.05
Profits of the Institution 138,101.18

Or .....$ 475,168.23

Which proves conclusively that $145,813.47 was NOT the entire earnings. Therefore, we can confidently state that $138,101.18 was not the total earnings for year ending January 1, 1861.

EXCHANGE BANK OF VIRGINIA.

December 31, 1858, Page 46, Document 14, shows in this bank .....
"Excess of Surplus and Assets" Dec. 31, 1858.....$ 391,955.50
"Excess of Surplus and Assets" Dec. 31, 1859.....$ 359,632.71
This latter item is on page 28, 1861, statement, divided as follows:
Contingent Fund .....$ 205,047.67
Profits of the Institution 154,585.04

$ 359,632.71

Thus surely indicating the "identity" of Contingent Funds with surplus and profits as contended for by Mr. Hillman. It also indicated the correctness of the following:

Exchange Bank of Virginia and Branches, December 31, 1859, Pages 46 and 47, Document 14.

Excess of Assets, or Surplus—

Contingent Fund	$ 205,047.67
Profits of the Institution	$ 154,585.04
Total	$ 359,532.71

Then was declared a dividend in 1859 of 9 per cent. on $3,048,600.00 Capital Stock or $ 274,374.00

Leaving a balance of $ 285,158.71

Instead of this, the bank showed on December 31, 1860—

Contingent Fund	$ 191,584.24
Profits of the Institution	$ 150,586.05
Total	$ 342,170.29

Proving conclusively that $154,585.04 was NOT the entire earnings.

The Master: Judge Holt, if you are prepared with your statement in a general way as to what the State of West Virginia expects to show further in chief, I would be very glad to have you make it.

Mr. Holt: We expect, your Honor, when the examination and the cross-examination and the re-direct examination of Mr. Hillman shall have been completed, to take up first the Acts of the Legislature of the State of Virginia authorizing the purchase of all these stocks in question as well as the issuance of bonds thereunder. Now, we may do that by taking the Acts themselves or by taking such portions of Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 1, in the original record which gives a synopsis of these Acts as we will desire, and may probably undertake to supplement that with certain journal entries of the Board of Public Works showing the expenditures of the money under those Acts.

The Master: That for the purpose of showing that the loan is the source of the assets that you claim?

Mr. Holt: Yes, sir.

The Master: And that will be done unless you are able between you to agree on some short statement covering the record.

Mr. Holt: Of course a stipulation along that line as indicate by us yesterday would relieve us from that necessity.

The Master: Meanwhile counsel have an opportunity to get together and see what they can agree on so as to save time and space in the record.

Mr. Holt: Next after that we expect to introduce two Acts of the Legislature of Virginia, I don't recall their date just now, requiring all these railway and bank companies to make annual reports to the Governor of the Commonwealth of Virginia, and it is these reports from which we have been making up these schedules, that were directed to be made by the Acts.

The Master: That can all be taken care of by a short stipulation in the record, that all of these reports were made by authority and under requirement of the law. What you want to show is that these were official in their character, and I suggest to the other side that they have in mind that question. There is no occasion for that legislation going into the record if its effect can be stipulated in two or three lines; that is, if it is true that these reports have all been made by virtue of provisions of law, which is what you want to show, that can be stipulated and take care of that whole question.

Mr. Anderson: They are not official reports made by State officers.

The Master: They want to show that the Laws of Virginia required them to make the reports, and they want that legislation in as tending to give an official character to the information. That of course they are entitled to, and if what they state is correct there is not reason why it should not be stipulated.

Mr. Holt: In other words, there is no contention that these reports are made by State officials but they are made by railway and bank officials under the requirements of the State statutes.

The Master: Precisely.

Mr. Holt: Afterwards we will undertake to introduce the Acts of Virginia relating to the establishment, regulation and conduct of the Sinking Fund, and in that connection will introduce the Constitution of the State for the purpose of showing that these assets that we are dealing with were intended for the payment of the debt upon which we have been sued. In addition to that, we will introduce the Acts of the Legislature upon the subject of refunding this debt. The only bearing that that could possibl have, I take it in this inquiry, would be upon the subject of interest, and and whether the question of interest should be considered pertinent before your Honor or not, still if those Acts were in the record they could be utilized by us, and we expect to introduce them.

Mr. Anderson: Which Acts are those, Judge, since the war?

Mr. Holt: Yes, sir.

Mr. Anderson: They are all in the record now; they are exhibited and printed with the bill.

Mr. Holt: I presume that some of them, if not all of them, are in there; but we should want to bring forward into the present record either the Act itself, for the purpose of convenience, or a synopsis of it or such sections of it as we would want to rely on. That is a question of convenience more than anything else.

Mr. Anderson: There have been at least two reprints of that already besides the original bill.

Mr. Holt: We likewise expect to introduce certain auditors' reports of the State of Virginia bearing upon the condition, amount and value of these assets, and likewise one or more reports of the Chief Executive of the State bearing upon the same subject. We will also perhaps introduce a map taken from the records of the State of Virginia, showing the situation with respect to all these railroads. It is a photograph of the thing that enables us to understand what was going on from a geographical standpoint better than anything else. It is for purposes of illustration more than anything else. Then there are certain exhibits that were filed with our answer that have not been proven as yet that we will prove by oral testimony as well as by the offer of the exhibits. Upon the subject of market quotations, we do not expect to offer any. We understand from the gentlemen upon the other side that they intend to do that and we will rely upon that statement, because in fact we have, in consequence of the discussion here yesterday and the day before, as I understand it, stopped our investigation along that line except for the purpose of testing the accuracy of those furnished by them.

In a general way, your Honor, this will complete our case.

The Master: Now, this is very largely documentary in its character and is not susceptible of much if any oral testimony, so that I do not see that will take very much time, as far as the plaintiff is concerned, to meet a very large proportion of what is now proposed to be put in by West Virginia, so that relieves the plaintiffs apparently of what might perhaps be more or less embarrassment in that respect in the line of preparation. So that the only controversy that can be possibly pending here of course is as to the value of these various items that are referred to. And as to those I assume that both sides have been in a state of substantial preparation for at any rate the time since the beginning of this hearing. So that I cannot see any reason why we cannot go on without any delay. Now, Mr. Harrison, you may proceed with your cross-examination. From now on in the interests of progress, where upon the part of either side the examinations are going to involve details and computations, so far feasible I want notice given in advance so that the accountants on either side may have these computations practically made, and bring them in so that they may testify to them without delay. I do not think it is proper for me to drag this case along by having the accountant sit here before me and make a lot of detailed computations. But I am not intimating that they are not proper computations and ought not to be made, but what I mean, is, so far as possible, if we have anything of that sort from now on I want either side to be prepared with the detailed computation, so that the accountant can testify right along without these interminable delays. The accountants are doing the best they can, but I cannot wait for the witness on the stand to make the computations, provided it is feasible to have them made outside and brought in so that they may be readily testified to upon either the direct or cross-examination. If we could have anticipated, we could have saved pretty nearly forty per cent. of our time yesterday and the day before by having a lot of these computations made in advance and all ready to be testified to as the examination was going on. Of course I do not mean by that to foreclose either side from testing the accuracy or the judgment or the intelligence of any witness by requiring him to make computations on cross-examination on the spot. You get my point, Brother Harrison?

Mr. Harrison: Yes.

The Master I know how that may be, sometimes it is important to have a computation made. Of course both sides may feel entirely free to go into that branch of the subject as far as they see fit. I do not intend for a minute to restrain anybody from any proper legitimate test on cross-examination, only to make progress. Now, then, Mr. Harrison, if you are ready.

Mr. Harrison: In respect to the exhibit which has just been offered this morning, we have not yet had an opportunity to examine it, but we reserve the right to cross-examine the witness in respect to it after we have had an opportunity to analyze it.

The Master: Certainly, that is the understanding.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. You have testified, I think, that you did not pursue your inquiry in respect to the ownership of the State in the stock of the several banks which are under investigation in order to see what disposition the State made of these stocks. Am I right about that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why didn't you do it as you did in the case of the stock and bonds of the railroad companies which the State owned?

A. For the reason that I had no method of determining what had become of them. There is nothing to show on the books of Virginia what became of them, and so far as I could learn there was nothing elsewhere; and I did not pursue any further investigation.

Q. You mean that the records of the State are silent as to the disposition which Virginia made of the stock which she held in these banks?

A. Yes, sir, I think they are.

By the Master:

Q. Were you instructed to make such investigation?

A. No, sir, I was not.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. Did you examine Journal D of the Board of Public Works to see whether any entry was there made to close these accounts?

A. No, sir; I do not think that I did examine it for that purpose.

Q. By reference to Journal D of the Board of Public Works, under date of September 30, 1872, I find the following entry with reference to these stocks: "To balance latter account, same having been lost at the close of the war in 1865," and those bank stock accounts were closed with that entry.

Mr. Holt: Your Honor, we object to that mode of examination. That is not cross-examination. Here is a witness who is not requested to trace these bank stocks beyond their value in 1863, is not requested to investigate their final disposition, no allegation upon that subject in the answer, he has never opened his mouth upon the subject in his examination in chief, and this is in chief upon the part of the gentlemen upon the other side. We do not believe that it should be lugged in here as a part of the cross-examination. If they want to introduce record evvidence showing the final and ultimate loss, and the date thereof, of these bank stocks, that is part of their case and it is not a part of the cross-examination.

Mr. Harrison: It may go in as a part of our case, whether it is strictly speaking cross-examination or not.

Mr. Holt: That is not the way to do it.

The Master: I do not suppose as a matter of fact that Virginia can establish as a matter of proof by a cross-examination of this character the existence of these facts. That will have to be done undoubtedly in another way. Now, just exactly what use Mr. Harrison intends to make of this question on the cross-examination, I do not yet quite know, because he has not finished his question. It might be necessary—of course I should give pretty broad latitude on cross-examination—but it may be distinctly understood that I do not understand that a reference to a public document or a reference to a fact in this manner is proof of that fact. If the plaintiffs rely upon it they will have to establish it in some other way. They cannot establish it by putting it into a question on cross-examination. But I cannot anticipate just what Mr. Harrison may have in his mind as to the cross-examination, and if it has any reasonable legitimate tendency bearing upon the accuracy of Mr. Hillman's testimony, I will rule upon that when we get the question. If you will just put the whole question, bearing in mind that the fact cannot be proved by a question in that manner, and that it will be admissible only so far as it tends to illustrate what Mr. Hillman has already testified to, I do not go quite so far as to say that I shall not allow cross-examination upon some fact that may have been specifically testified to by Mr. Hillman, because I do not know what the rule may be here, but I do not think as a matter of fact it is of any great consequence whether we rely with great strictness on the rule. It won't make a great deal of difference to me whether it comes from Mr. Hillman on the direct-examination or cross-examination. The legal rule of course I will apply. And strictly speaking, if the United States rule applies here, Mr. Hillman cannot be cross-examined on any subject as to which he has not been examined on the direct.

Mr. Anderson: If we go beyond that we make him our witness.

The Master: That technical proposition is of very little consequence in this hearing.

Mr. Harrison: I thought so.

The Master: It will make very little difference to me whether it comes on the cross or whether it is strictly speaking in chief on the part of Virginia. Judge Holt's main criticism I think is true. I do not know that Mr. Harrison was expecting to establish as a matter of evidence the existence of this record by the questions he puts in his cross-examination.

Q. Did you find that entry on Journal D of the Board of Public Works?

A. No, sir, I did not.

Q. Did you look for it? Did you examine with reference to informing yourself in respect to that matter?

A. No, sir, I did not.

Q. Now, my question is, and I will repeat it, why did you not do it in the case of the banks as well as you did in the case of the State's holdings in the various railroad companies about which you testified? In other words, if you deemed it of importance to pursue that investigation in respect to the railroads why did you not likewise deem it of importance to pursue it in respect to the State's holdings in the banks?

A. The principal reason was because in the supplemental answer there was nothing mentioned as to what the final disposal of those bank securities was, and for that reason I did not follow it.

The Master: Does the supplemental answer refer to the disposition of the railroad stocks?

Mr. Holt: Yes, sir.

By the Master:

Q. Did you have any instructions from the counsel for West Virginia with reference to either class of securities?

A. No, sir.

Q. I mean as to this specific point, as to how far would you pursue your investigation, that is, did they instruct you to look up the matter of the disposition of the railroad stocks?

A. Yes, sir; to confirm as far as possible and get the absolute facts of the several allegations in their supplemental answer, those were the instructions.

Mr. Holt: That answer alleges, your Honor, what became of the railroad stocks, but not what became of the bank stocks. Of course his instructions were based on that answer. I do not believe there will be very much objection if they want to stipulate on that subject to show that th ebanks in the later's 60's went to pieces.

The Master: I do not know what Virginia may desire to introduce on that score, but this is a proper cross-examination and there is no objection made to it as I understand. It is competent for them to develop the circumstances under which the investigation was made.

Mr.Harrison: We intend also to introduce the annual report of the Auditor of Public Accounts for September 30, 1866, showing the State's holdings in these banks were a total loss in consequence of the war.

Mr. Holt: Now, your Honor, upon that proposition, is not that going to derange all the exhibits for them to inject into a cross-examination their part of the case?

The Master: It is not introduced. Mr. Harrison is only indicating what he proposes to do. It does not prove anything or produce any result. I do not understand that you offer it now, Mr. Harrison. It is simply the suggestion that when they get into their side of the case it is their purpose to introduce that report. Is that what you mean, Mr. Harrison.

Mr. Harrison: Yes, sir. I did not suppose that it was worth while for us to be constrained by any rigid rules of evidence in this investigation, but for the purpose of saving time I assumed there would be no objection to putting in these records at this point in order that we might save time and go on; but if the gentlemen would prefer to have it put in later, we will do it.

Mr. Holt: I have only one idea in the world and that is that we should get in the bound printed volumes, your side of the case running consecutively along and not inject it here and there. That was a question of convenience. Of course there is no real substantial objection outside of that.

The Master: I did not get the full purport of Mr. Harrison's suggestion. I did not get the idea that he was offering it now, but the impression left on my mind was that it was simply something that he proposed to offer. Do I understand that you are offering it now, Mr. Harrison?

Mr. Harrison: I say I will not do it now if the gentlemen prefer that we do not.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. I ask you if you examined the Auditor's report, the Auditor of Public Accounts of the State of Virginia, of September 30, 1866, in connection with your investigations in this case.

A. No, sir, I did not.

Q. I call your attention to Defendant's Exhibit No. 6, page 56 of the printed exhibits, the caption of which is sale of various stocks and loans to the Atlantic, Mississippi & Ohio Railroad. What is the total of the items embraced in your Exhibit No. 6, Class F, page 56 of the printed record?

A. $4,689,436.41.

Q. There are two items in that list of stocks and loans embraced in the sale to the Atlantic, Mississippi & Ohio Railroad Company which are not extended, namely, the claim of the State on account of a loan of $800,000, due by the South Side Railroad Company—

The Master: That is No. 4?

Mr. Harrison: Yes, sir.

Q. —and all of the State's claim to a loan of $1,000,000 made to the Virginia & Tennessee Railroad Company. If those two items are extended, your total will be what?

The Master: That last is No. 6?

Mr. Harrison: Yes, sir.

A. $6,489,436.41.

Q. What amount of the items embraced in this exhibit is charged in your summary against Virginia under Class F?

A. There are none of the items on this exhibit charged against the joint account of Virginia and West Virginia from this exhibit. If your question calls for it or desires it I will state what items are finally carried into that total and from what exhibits. Is that your desire, Mr. Harrison?

Q. My question was, what is the total charged under Class F in your summary against Virginia.

A. $4,276,044.39.

Q. What amount of the items in this same exhibit, page 56, are charged in your summary against Virginia under Class C?

A. $1,023.685, as shown on page 13 of the printed record.

Q. Didn't you testify that the South Side Railroad loan of $800,000 should be included under Class C as a charge against Virginia?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why then don't you include it now?

A. For the reason that we have not yet filed our exhibit amending page 13 to show these amounts or what you might call the corrected or amended exhibit, and I am quoting only from page 13, as the totals are shown there.

Q. But you intend to add the $800,000 as a proper charge under Class C, don't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then what will be the result with that added?

A. $2,100,000.

The Master: Why cannot we have that corrected schedule tomorrow morning or to-day noon? You ought to have it for convenience of cross-examination, Mr. Harrison.

The Witness: That is all ready.

The Master: Then hand it to the other side right now so that they can have it for cross-examination, because it is involved right here at this point. You would like to have it, wouldn't you,

Mr. Harrison?

Mr. Harrison: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. Before you added the $800,000. South Side loan didn't you testify that the total was $1,023,685.00?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then if you add $800,000 to that what will it make?

A. If I add $800,000 to that it would make $1,823,685; but on the amended exhibit or the corrected one there would be $163,000 further added to that on account of the Norfolk & Petersburg loan, and $113,315 on account of the Virginia & Tennessee loan, which would bring the total up to $2,100,000.

By the Master:

Q. You have got that corrected exhibit right there, have you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Just hand Mr. Harrison a copy of it and hand me a copy of it, so that I can follow right along.

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. Now I will ask you again, in order that we may have it before us, what is the total of the items in this same exhibit that we are examining, which you have charged in your summary against Virginia under Class C, of the items embraced in the exhibit found on page 56 of the printed exhibits.

A. $2,100,000 on the amended page 13, is in process of preparation.

Q. Then of the items embraced in this exhibit, page 56 of the printed record, which Virginia transferred to the Atlantic, Mississippi & Ohio Railway Company, you charge Virginia with a total of $6,376,044.39, do you not?

The Master: That is taking into account both schedules?

Mr. Harrison: Yes.

The Master: That simply involves adding the item of $4,000,000 to $2,000,000.

Mr. Harrison: That is all.

The Master: That is a computation that can be made in about a second. Add your four million to the balance of $2,100,000, and answer the question.

The witness: Your Honor, the question was that I should make it $6,376,044.39.

Mr. Harrison: I may have given you the wrong addition.

The Master: The answer to that question is so obvious that it is hardly worth discussing.

The Witness: No, sir; I do not charge it.

Q. Didn't you just testify that of the items embraced in this Atlantic, Mississippi & Ohio schedule you had charged to Virginia $4,256,044.39 in your summary under Class F, and $2,100,000 under Class C?

A. I beg your pardon; yes, sir, I did.

Q. Then what is the total of those two sums?

A. You are correct; $6,376,044.39.

Q. Then I am correct when I say that you have charged Virginia with $6,376,044.39 as the value of the securities which she transferred to the Atlantic, Mississippi & Ohio Railway Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. For which she took a mortgage of $4,000,000, did she not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So then you have charged Virginia on the basis of these figures with $2,376,044.39 more than the amount of the mortgage which she took in exchange of those securities, have you not?

A. Yes, sir; but you must recall at the same time that Virginia has received in cash for one of these securities $886,685.00, being the Virginia Central Road.

Q. You are referring now, when you say that she has received that, to the payment made in Confederate notes, which was repudiated, as has appeared in your testimony heretofore, are you not?

A. I do not think that I testified on that subject at all. I simply made the statement that they had received this amount of money, $886,685. The balance of it was read into the record by yourself.

Q. You are referring then to the payments shown by the exhibit read into the record as having been repudiated by the State of Virginia, are you not?

A. Yes, sir; the money for which was never returned to the Virginia Central Road.

Q. Did you in the course of your investigation—

By the Master:

Q. How do you know that, that the money was not returned to the Virginia Central Road? Where did you get the information on that subject?

A. For the reason that there is no record of any such payment on the books of the State of Virginia.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. No record of any such payment?

A. Any such payment or repayment by the State of Virginia, as far as I know.

By the Master:

Q. You found it entered on the debit side of the cash in the first instance?

A. Yes.

Q. But did not find it in any case entered on the credit side of the cash, is that what you mean by that?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. Did your investigation lead you to the ascertainment of the amount which Virginia realized for this $4,000,000 mortgage which was accepted by her as consideration for $6,376,044.39 of securities listed on this exhibit, page 56?

A. Yes, sir, it did.

Q. What was the amount?

A. The $4,000,000 was—

By the Master:

Q. They were paid a certain sum for the purpose of getting the release of their equity?

A. That is the word I want. For the release of their equity they afterwards obtained $500,000.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. Do you mean the State of Virginia received $500,000 in satisfaction of the second mortgage she had of $4,000,000.

A. I do not know what it was for, it was what they received for their entire claim against the Atlantic, Mississippi & Ohio.

Q. Do you know when it was received?

A. I have made no notation of the date, and I could not recall it now.

The Master: Does not the date of those foreclosure proceedings appear somewhere in the record, Mr. Harrison?

Mr. Harrison: Yes.

The Master: The statement is in substance that in the first place the mortgage was foreclosed by the first mortgage bondholders, and that the result of that was that the apparent equity of the State of Virginia in this $4,000,000 loan, being a second mortgage, was wiped out. But in order to get a perfect and complete title without any question or controversy, the road finally paid to Virginia $500,000, which of course must have been some little time after these foreclosure proceedings. Now the date of these foreclosure proceedings must be in here somewhere.

Mr. Harrison: January 25, 1883.

The Master: Have I got the transaction correct in my mind?

Mr. Harrison: Yes, sir.

Mr. Holt: We have the date as March 1st, 1882.

The Master: I do not suppose you are particular about the date.

Mr. Harrison: They are so near together that it does not make much difference. January 25, 1883, is the date when the money was received, but that date is immaterial. It was an act of 1882, but the money was paid in January, 1883.

The Master: I was going to suggest that we had better not have any apparent inconsistency between the date set up in the supplemental answer and the testimony, but still if the date is correct we had better let it stand.

Mr. Holt: I take it that Mr. Harrison has given the correct date of the payment under the Act; that is probably true.

The Master: That is not the way the answer reads, but probably that is what the answer meant. There is no harm done, because the date is of no consequence.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. Now looking on page 57 of the printed record, at this exhibit, Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 6, the transfer of the loss of securities there shown of the Atlantic, Mississippi & Ohio Railway Company, you have put down under head of book value of June 30, 1860, $99.90 opposite the Virginia & Tennessee Railroad Company stock. Does that purport to be the book value of that stock on the 30th of June, 1860?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Holt: It should be the 20th of June, 1860.

A. Yes sir.

The Master: No, this is not 1863. That is the end of the fiscal year of the road, I suppose.

Q. And the South Side Railroad Company's stock, the same exhibit shows, you have given the book value to be $105.98 as of the 30th day of September, 1861, have you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the Virginia & Kentucky Railroad Company's stock you have put under the caption book value, par, $100, is that correct?

A. Yes, sir; that entry means that—it was intended to mean that the stock was taken at par and there was no book value. It is an entry at par.

Q. And the Norfolk & Petersburg Railroad Company stock you have given a book value of $89.52 as of the 31st day of March, 1861, have you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, will you state if you please how you arrived at the book value of the stock in those four roads as shown on this exhibit.

A. By reference to the trial balances of these roads on the dates mentioned in the margin, shown by their printed annual report on file in the Comptroller's office of the Norfolk & Western Railroad Company in the City of Roanoke, Virginia. The Norfolk & Western being the successor of the Atlantic, Mississippi & Ohio, which had absorbed these roads, and they having these reports on file.

Q. Is there anything on your exhibit to show from what records the figures there stated were taken?

A. No, sir, there is not.

Q. Do you include the Virginia & Kentucky Railroad Company in the explanation you have just given as to how you arrived at the value of these stocks?

A. No, sir. The Virginia & Kentucky Railroad Company had not as far as I know any trial balance or annual report of any kind. That is simply the amount of the stock held and the cost of that stock to the State of Virginia.

Q. You have taken the State's holding in that road and put down a book value of par for it?

A. Yes, sir. I have made the entry, as I stated before, to show that I have taken it—intending to show that I have taken it at par and that I had not determined the book value.

By the Master:

Q. Then there is not a thing on your exhibit nor is there anything on the books that you had access to that tends to demonstrate even the book value of the stock you have just referred to? You simply took the par and that is all there is of it?

A. No, sir; it was just an expenditure, and my recollection is that the road had never been operated.

Q. That rather tends to raise the inference that the stock was of very little value.

Mr. Lilly: Maybe it was under construction though.

Q. I do not know how that may be, but you must have something in the record that enables me to reach some intelligent conclusion. The statement that a certain road never was operated does not go very far towards establishing value; it rather tends to negative value. If there is anything in addition to that, you ought to put it in.

Mr. Holt: Does the witness say it never has been operated?

The Master: I understood him to say so.

Mr. Holt: Does he say it never had been operated up to that time?

The Witness: It had not been operated up to that time. It was under construction at that time and whatever there was of it was turned over to this other company.

Q. That is a very inchoate admission. What I was inquiring about in the first instance was whether there was anything on the records of the company that tended to demonstrate what you call a book value, and you say that there was not?

A. It was simply the construction value which had been turned over to this road. There was no trial balance.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. Opposite the Virginia & Tennessee Railroad Company stock on your exhibit at page 57 you have under the caption par $3,452,813.32. What does that represent?

A. That represents the total amount of stock outstanding June 30, 1860, on the Virginia & Tennessee Railroad Company.

Q. It does not then represent the amount of stock held by the State of Virginia?

A. No, sir; that is shown in the second paragraph on page 57.

Q. Take the South Side Railroad Company where you have a par of $1,362,900. Does the same answer apply to that, that is to say, that that is the total stock issued by the road and not the total held by the State?

A. Yes, sir; the total held by the State being shown in the second paragraph of page 57.

Q. And the Norfolk & Petersburg stock $1,800,800, under the caption par is the total issue and not the amount held by the State?

A. That is right.

Q. Now, do you know anything about the physical condition of any of these roads at the time about which you are testifying?

A. No, sir; I have not examined their physical condition; I have only examined their trial balances.

Q. Do you know anything about their assets or liabilities?

A. Yes, sir; I do.

Q. Is it shown on this exhibit, what you know?

A. No, sir; it is not.

Q. Where will I find what you know about the assets and liabilities of these roads? Have you testified to it or shown it on any exhibit?

A. No, sir; I have not. You will find that on the annual reports of the companies which I have mentioned.

Q. But you have not filed those annual reports with us, and we have no knowledge or information about them?

A. No, sir, I have not filed any of those annual reports.

By the Master:

Q. The annual reports refer to three roads only, the Virginia & Tennessee, the South Side Railroad and the Norfolk & Petersburg?

A. Yes, sir, those only.

Q. The Virginia & Kentucky having no annual report?

A. The Virginia & Kentucky having no annual report.

By Mr. Harrison;

Q. When you speak of annual reports, are you referring to the records of the Virginia & Tennessee Railway Company?

A. In this case I am referring to the annual reports for these three roads on file in the Comptroller's Office of the Norfolk & Western Railway. They are the reports of these separate roads, but have fallen into the possession, through legal inheritance I suppose, of the Norfolk & Western Road.

Q. And whatever they may contain or show in respect to these roads as far as the Court and Master are concerned is shown on your exhibit, page 57?

A. Yes. sir, unless they desire to examine the records themselves or have copies furnished as sub schedules to this printed record on page 57. They are quite lengthy.

Q. Do their operating accounts show any charges for depreciation.

A. No, sir, no direct charge for depreciation.

Q. Would any one be able to tell whether the road was solvent from its income and expense account?

A. Yes. sir, from its income and expense account, and its interest charges of course being included in this case as I understand.

Q. Would that fix the value of the assets of the road?

A. No, sir; the earning capacity does not fix the value of the assets.

Q. As a matter of actual fact, have you not to judge solely and exclusively in respect to the solvency of the road from its assets and liabilities?

A. Yes. sir, that would be the final determination.

Q. And you have judged this book value from income and expense?

A. I have not.

Q. Well, does your exhibit show anything to the contrary?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What does it show?

A. It shows that the liabilities of for instance the Virginia & Tennessee Road on June 30, 1860, exceeded its assets by $3,285.30; page 57 of the printed record.

By the Master:

Q. You find that under the head of profits?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. Do you mean to say that that or anything else there shows what the assets and liabilities of the road were?

A. No, sir; it shows simply the difference between the assets and liabilities.

Q. Do you mean to say that this book value that you have given here is based upon the assets and liabiities of the road?

A. I do, yes, sir.

Q. Where are the assets shown?

A. On the annual report from which this profit and loss account was taken.

Q. You are testifying now to something that you have seen, but something that you did not deem of enough importance to produce here in evidence, is that true?

A. My recollection on that subject is that the offer was made in my direct testimony to have those books produced or to have copies of them made if it was deemed necessary. I think that was the offer that was made.

The Master: That does not answer the question. Repeat the question, Mr. Stenographer.

Q. (Question repeated by the stenographer.)

By the Master:

Q. In other words, have you got it in the schedules which you have produced, that is what that question practically calls for.

Have you produced any fact in relation to the assets and liabilities of the Virginia & Tennessee Railroad Company except what appears here on page 57, and if you have, in what schedule have you produced it?

A. I have not produced any such schedule. I would say, your Honor, I made the offer to produce it if deemed necessary or asked for.

Q. Isn't your book value in this case predicated specifically upon the diminution of the stock and the loss of profits during the preceding year, one per cent.

A. No, sir; it is the amount of loss which is shown on their books. It may not be due entirely to operation, and it may. It is the loss that their books show. They are that much shy in assets as regards liabilities.

Q. You took this I suppose from the profit and loss account; you have got it here under the heading of profits.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And instead of being a profit, it is a loss; on that trial balance instead of having it on the credit side you have it on the debit side?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, you put a star here which indicates to us that although under the column of profits, as a matter of fact that was a loss sustained in the operation of the road during the preceding year?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, you take that sum of $3,285.30, being the loss, and you take the percentage that that bears to the total capitalization, and reach your book value of the stock in that way, don't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You reach your book value in this way, in other words, you take the net loss, and upon the basis of the net loss, the percentage that that bears to the capitalization, you figure the book value? Without figuring it out, it seems to me that must be the result. That is right, isn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And do the same thing with reference to the Norfolk & Petersburg road, which according to the star here met with a net loss of that year of $189,942.12?

A. That is right, your Honor, with one exception; the loss may not have been incurred in that year. It is the total net loss up to date, up to that date, this being a trial balance.

Q. Well, the way you get your book value, you take that net loss of $189,942.12 and take the percentage that that bears to the total capitalization, and then work out your book value accordingly?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you say that loss may not have occurred during the preceding year, that is the whole of it?

A. No, sir. Or it may have gained slightly during the preceding year, but it is the net result up to date.

Q. Have you such a recollection of the account so that you can tell us whether there was a gain or loss on that last year? You need not stop to run it through. You have not any such recollection?

A. I have not the recollection, but I can tell you in a very short time, and I will have it handed to you at recess time.

The Master: We will suspend for a few minutes and just hand it to us then. And give us the net loss or profit during the last year.

The Witness: Yes, sir.

The Master: We will suspend here for five minutes.

By the Master:

Q. Now, can you give up those figures, Mr. Hillman?

A. No, sir; I am sorry to say, your Honor, that it does not show for the year. It is taken up in total, and does not show for the year. And I did not examine the accounts in detail enough to take off year by year their earnings or expenses.

Q. So that you have not data enough here upon which you can predicate the statement as to whether during the preceding year there was or was not a profit or loss on operations?

A. I have no data.

The Master: You may proceed, Mr. Harrison.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. What amount do you carry into your summary for June 20, 1863, as a charge against Virginia on account of the various items mentioned in Exhibit No. 6, page 56, being the securities turned over by Virginia to the Atlantic, Mississippi & Ohio Railroad Company?

A. $4,566,015.61.

Q. Why is there a difference in the amount you show on that summary and the amount you show on the summary for January 1, 1861?

A. Because in the meantime the roads had been operating and increasing their surplus.

Q. Haven't you taken the same book value as the basis for determining the amount?

A. I beg your pardon, yes, sir, I have taken the same book value, but their holdings had in the meantime increased.

Q. Whose holdings?

A. The State of Virginia's.

Q. You mean that the difference is accounted for by the fact that the State had paid more on her subscription by June, 1863, than she had on January 1, 1861?

A. Yes, sir.

By the Master:

Q. What is the number of the blueprint schedule?

A. Page 45 of the blueprints.

By. Mr. Harrison:

Q. Now, let us take up this Exhibit No. 7, page 58 of the printed schedules, which purports to be a statement of the value of the James River and Kanawha Canal Company as it was absorbed and capitalized by the Richmond & Alleghany Railroad Company. What amount is shown by that exhibit to have been charged to the State of Virginia as the value of the James River and Kanawha Company as of January 1, 1861?

A. $5,437,341.38.

Q. Now, what is the total which you carry to your summary as a charge against Virginia on that account?

A. $5,410,429.54, as shown on page 60 of the printed record, which is the amount taken from the second annual report of the road, not the first annual report.

Q. Now, are the figures the same in your summary for June 20, 1863?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why do you charge Virginia with that amount at January 1, 1861, and June 20, 1863?

A. That amount is charged to this joint account for the reason that this is the amount which the Richmond & Alleghany Road valued the franchises and property which is acquired from the State of Virginia through the James River and Kanawha Canal Company on its books, and on the opening of its accounts.

Q. Still Virginia did not own the franchise of the James River & Kanawha Canal Company, did it?

A. It owned the stock of the company, and therefore I suppose was proprietor of all that went with the company.

By the Master:

Q. Do you mean it owned all the stock?

A. Yes, sir.

By. Mr. Harrison:

Q. What is your authority for that statement?

A. Well, I cannot say that I have authority for its owning every share of stock. I know that it was the party that sold the James River and Kanawha Canal Company to this railroad company, and I did not investigate to see whether or not they had up to that time acquired every share of stock or not. My impression is and was that they were the sole owners.

Q. You say you know the State is the party that sold the James River and Kanawha Canal Company to the Richmond & Alleghany Railroad Company. What is your authority for that statement?

A. The deed which they gave to the Richmond & Alleghany Railroad Company, conveying the property.

Q. Have you the deed?

By the Master:

Q. That is the deed that the State gave, you mean?

A. Yes, sir.

By. Mr. Harrison:

Q. Have you the deed?

A. I have not the deed, but the deed has, I believe, been placed on file.

Mr. Lilly: It has been introduced.

Q. I wish you would put your hands on it then, and let us see the deed which the State made.

Mr. Harrison: Is the deed here, Judge?

Mr. Holt: We have the deed here, and we have already introduced the deed and also introduced the Act.

Mr. Lilly: It is in the typewritten record.

Q. (Handing paper) I hand you Defendant's Exhibit No. 7, 1863, G, being a copy of the deed referred to. Look at it and tell us who made the deed to the Richmond & Alleghany Railroad Company.

The Master: That is, who is the grantor.

Q. Who was the grantor?

A. The James River and Kanawha Company.

Q. Then you were mistaken when you said that the State of Virginia made the deed to the Richmond & Alleghany, were you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then your schedule is based upon a mistaken fact, is it not, that is to say that the State owned the entire stock in the James River and Kanawha Company?

A. I do not know whether or not it is a fact that they did not own all of the stock.

Q. Your schedule, however, is based upon that hypothesis, is it not?

A. Yes, sir, that they owned the entire stock.

Q. If you are wrong in that hypothesis your schedule would be wrong, wouldn't it?

A. Yes, sir; it would have to then be reduced by the percentage that that outstanding stock bears to the total—I mean the outside stock bears to the total stock of the company. By the outside stock I mean that which is owned by other parties than the State.

Q. Now, tell us from what source you derived the statement—or you have made up the statement that is shown on this Exhibit 7, page 58, called trial balance sheet, first general balance sheet of the Richmond & Alleghany Railroad Company. Where did you derive the information upon which that statement was made?

A. From the first general balance sheet of the Richmond & Alleghany Railroad Company, on file in the office of the Vice-President of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad in the City of Richmond.

Q. That is not a complete balance sheet, is it, that you put in your exhibit?

A. No, sir; I have not put in a complete balance sheet.

Q. Why didn't you put in the complete balance sheet?

A. I did not consider that it was necessary, as its terms are specifically mentioned in that balance sheet.

Q. This statement on page 58 of the exhibits sets out that the Richmond & Alleghany Railway Company acquired the property of the James River & Kanawha Company and the Buchanan and Clifton Forge Railroad Company at a cost in stocks and bonds of $6,389,511.93. To whom did the Richmond & Alleghany deliver the stock and bonds there mentioned?

A. I do not know.

Q. You have treated it as if the railroad company had delivered them to Virginia; have you not?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did the Railway Company pay any part or deliver any part of that sum to Virginia?

A. No, sir; I do not know of their having delivered, or having any record of having delivered any stock or bonds to the State of Virginia.

Q. How much of that amount have you charged to Virginia?

The Witness: Your Honor, just a moment, this is a general observation if you please. When we say charge to Virginia it is understood we are presenting and including in our final account for adjudication between the States, and it is not charged against Virginia but placed in that column for final adjudication. Is that understood? I am not charging the State with it. I have noticed that right through, and it may be a little confusing later on.

By the Master:

Q. I suppose what you mean is that you have prepared these schedules and worked up this account and charged to what might be termed assets certain things?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then propose later on to make some distribution of the assets thus collected together?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I do not think we will have any misunderstanding.

Mr. Harrison: I have not the slightest misunderstanding at all.

Q. Mr. Harrison considers a charge to assets practically a charge to Virginia, and that is the way the matter lies in his mind.

The Master: We do not misunderstand it, do we, Mr. Harrison?

Mr. Harrison: No, sir.

A. I have been answering under that supposition.

Q. You do not give rise to any false impression. Mr. Harrison carries the matter in his mind on the assumption that the charge to assets is practically a charge to Virginia, and so treats it all the way through.

The Master: I am right about that, Mr. Harrison.

Mr. Harrison: Yes, sir.

Q. Did any of those four railroads that are mentioned on page 57 declare any dividends at any time, and if so, does that appear in any exhibit? You can answer that question when we come in after lunch. If they did I want the facts to appear, that is all, or if they did not.

A. I am not sure that I can tell you.

Q. Then you need not bother to take the time to look it up now, but answer that question on coming in after recess.

The Master: Excuse me, Mr. Harrison, for the interruption.

By. Mr. Harrison:

Q. (Question repeated).

A. $5,410,429.54.

Q. If you have no evidence of any part of that sum having ever been received by Virginia why did you charge her with it?

A. For the reason that I am charging in this case, or trying to charge, the value of the property which was turned over, and not dealing with what was received for it, nor have I considered that matter.

Mr. Holt: The allegation of the answer is that she gave that away, and that we own part of it.

The Master: Your contention is that she ought to account for it at its par value?

Mr. Holt: Yes, sir.

Q. Were the assets which the Richmond & Alleghany Railway Company acquired under the deed of the James River and Kanawha Company encumbered?

The Master: That is, were there any liens on these assets?

A. Yes, sir; there was a lien upon them, shown on page 58 of the printed record.

Q. There are liens shown on page 58 also. Was there a mortgage or mortgages on these assets?

The Master: That, is in addition to the item of $1,393,637.66.

Mr. Harrison: Yes, sir; undoubtedly in addition to that.

A. Those liens were not mortgages. They were for supplies, etc.

Q. I want to know if there was any mortage or mortgages on the assets which the railroad company acquired from the James River and Kanawha Company.

A. Yes, sir, $1,393,637.66.

Q. You have already referred to those which are put down as liens. My question was in addition to that amount were the assets encumbered by a mortgage?

A. That is a mortgage, sir.

By the Master:

Q. That is not the question. The question is in addition to this item of $1,393,637.66 was there any mortgage in addition to that? If there was not, simply say so.

A. No, sir; I believe not.

The Master: That covers it.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. Why do you say you believe not? Do you know it to be a fact?

A. No, sir.

Q. What is the foundation of your belief?

A. Because I did not run across any other mortgage in the investigation.

Q. Then what was the $6,389,511.93 issued for by the railroad company?

A. They issued that of their own mortgage bonds and their own stocks.

By the Master:

Q. Who do you mean by their own?

A. Richmond & Alleghany Company.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. What did they get for it?

A. That I have not the slightest idea, what they got for it. They got this property for it.

Q. I thought they got the property for nothing?

Mr. Lilly: They did so far as Virginia is concerned, with certain limitations.

A. They issued these mortgages and stocks on the basis of the property that they acquired from the James River and Kanawha and Buchanan and Clifton Forge Railroad.

Q. For what purpose did they issue it?

The Master: If you know? If you don't know, say so.

A. I don't know.

Mr. Holt: Then just answer.

The Witness: I don't know what they issued them for.

The Master: I do not want to hurry you, Mr. Hillman, but do not take time when you don't know. If you don't know, say so, and that exhausts the subject of inquiry. You are not responsible for what you don't know, and you are not subject to criticism about it. In a question like that, if you don't know, say so and say so right off, and then we will go on.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. Well, what is your answer?

A. I have answered it.

The Master: In the confusion Mr. Harrison did not get it. See what the record shows.

Mr. Harrison: I saw only the exhibition of a very tired feeling, but I did not know that he had answered the question.

(Testimony read by stenographer.)

Mr. Holt: As I understand it, your Honor, they acquired this property from the James River—

Mr. Harrison: Now, Judge, I would rather pursue my examination of the witness without having your explanation at this point.

The Master: That you are entitled to do. Of course the Judge does not insist on it if you object. Brother Harrison has a right to develop it from his point of view, and if he does not develop it satisfactorily you will have your turn.

Mr. Holt: It is so long and tedious.

The Master: I do not know about that. They have a right to develop it in their own way for whatever it may be worth. I am not intimating by any means that your statement would not have been both instructive and illuminating. My observation has been that they usually are.

Q. Have you a complete transcript of the balance sheet, which is partially shown on your Exhibit No. 7, page 58, of the printed record?

A. Yes, sir; I have.

Q. What is the total of the invested assets as shown on the balance sheet? The complete balance sheet I refer to now.

A. September 30, 1881, assets $13,510,248.46.

Q. Does not that sum include over eleven million dollars of invested assets?

A. Yes, sir; $11,798,156.36.

Q. That was the figure I asked you for.

By the Master:

Q. Now, for my information, is this the balance sheet from which the figures found on page 58 are taken?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is 1881. When was this transfer made, in 1881?

A. Made in 1880.

Mr. Harrison: The Act was passed February 27, 1879.

The Master: Now, then, this has significance so far as it has a tendency to establish value in 1861, twenty years earlier?

Mr. Harrison: I presume that is what he is introducing it for.

The Master: This is a balance sheet in 1881, as tending to show value in 1861?

Mr. Harrison: I presume so.

Mr. Lilly: That is right, your Honor.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. Now, what was the capitalization of the company?

A. $5,000,000.

Q. And the amount of the mortgage bonds, that is to say, what was the capital and the mortgage bonds, the aggregate, including the Alleghany Car Trust?

By the Master:

Q. Have you not got a copy of this balance sheet right there?

A. Yes, sir; but I have to add them up.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. (Handing paper), I will hand you a copy that is added.

A. $10,824,000.

Q. Then is it not a fact that the liens are taken up on both sides of the sheet?

A. No.

Q. Among the assets and liabilities?

A. No.

Q. Do you mean to say that the assets and liabilities are not taken up on both sides of the sheet, not shown on both sides of the sheet—the assets and the liens I mean?

A. That question is totally incapable of being answered, your Honor, it does not mean anything. I will have to have the meaning.

The Master: Well, try it again.

Q. I find on the sheet James River & Kanawha Company and Buchanan and Clifton Forge Railway Company liens, among the liabilities. Is that true or not?

A. Yes, sir, $1,393,637.66.

The Master: Well, now, that does not happen to be the amount. Have you not got the copy of the trial balance?

Mr. Harrison: I have given him the exact copy.

The Master: He is confused about it in some way, because that is obviously wrong. He asked you for the James River & Kanawha and the Clifton Forge liens, and that appears on that sheet among the liabilities as $1,537,381.41.

The Witness: Yes, sir.

The Master: As a matter of fact the witness gave the James River & Kanawha Company's lien.

The Witness: It is the list of liens that are on file with the trustee.

Q. As part of the cost of the road?

A. As part of the cost of the road.

Q. Then if that is true the capital stock and the bonds issued must have been for the other items of assets, were they not.

A. I do not know what they were issued for.

Q. All right, sir.

By the Master:

Q. Does not your note, Mr. Hillman, on page 58, show what these stocks and bonds were issued for? You say, "Acquired the property of the James River & Kanawha and the Buchanan and Clifton Forge Railroad at a cost in stock and bonds of $6,389,-511.93, thus securing legal right of way for its railway lines, basins and docks in Richmond, and other property." Does not that show?

A. Yes, sir, that shows. The reason I answered as I did was when I had made that statement that these stocks and bonds were issued for that purpose, in the acquirement of that property, I was then asked to state why they were issued, and I supposed it was the same question coming over again.

Q. Then you said you did not know, and as a matter of fact it is so obvious you did know that it is hardly worth discussion, is that it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You do not mean to say that that is an adequate reason, after you had stated in your schedule just exactly what these stocks and bonds were issued for, and then you were asked what they were issued for and you said you did not know, and the reason you did not know was because you had stated the information in your note, is that the way you explain that?

A. No, sir; it is so obvious what they were issued for, and I made the statement what they were issued for, that I mistook this for the second question that was asked me some time ago, as to what this big issue of stocks and bonds going out, to whom they were paid, and what they were paid for, meaning why should they obtain a property for practically a small amount and issue stocks for a large amount, and it was to that that I said I did not know. I know why they were issued upon these properties that they acquired.

The Master: That is a pretty intricate process of reasoning.

The Witness: If your Honor will follow some questions just immediately preceding this you will see the trend that my mind took on this subject, because it was so obvious that I did not think they could ask that question.

The Master: You must not conduct so elaborate a process of reasoning in testifying in this case. Suppose they put the same question half a dozen times; it calls for the same answer, does it not?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

The Master: You just wipe out this process of reasoning and devote your time to answering particular questions, and your examination will get along better. Excuse me for this lecture, but that is pretty near the fact.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. Is there anything whatever in this balance sheet to justify the assumption that the assets acquired by the Richmond & Alleghany Railway Company were not covered by an equal amount of liabilities?

A. I do not understand that question.

Mr. Harrison: I will let the stenographer read it.

(Question repeated by stenographer.)

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is it?

A. The liabilities assumed being between one and two million dollars, and the stock and bonds issue being for between six and seven millions, would indicate that there was a value conveyed above the amount of the mortgage or lien.

Q. If the issue of $10,824,000 capital stock and bonds was not intended or designed for the purchase of the assets shown on the balance sheet, what is your theory as to what they were intended for? How would you, as an expert account for the issue of $10,824,000 of securities, stocks and bonds, under such a state of affairs as the question embodies?

A. That they had acquired a property of a great deal of value at a very small figure, and were then capitalizing it up to its value; or else that there was a bald steal in the issue of the stocks and bonds.

Q. That the railway had perpetrated a bald steal, is that the meaning of the answer?

Mr. Holt: Let the answer itself be read.

(Answer read by stenographer.)

By the Master:

Q. I suppose, in other words, you would term it water or wind?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. What would be the natural construction when you find on a balance sheet an item of assets which includes the right of way and franchise, which cost $5,588,609.76, the cost of road $4,607,217.53, the cost of equipment, the cost of the Richmond Dock property, and real estate, all items aggregating $11,798,156.36 of assets, which cost that much money, or evidencing money; and you find under the liabilities, capital stock and bonds amounting to $10,824,000? What would be the natural inference to draw from those two statements? Would it be that the capital stock and mortgage bonds had been issued to acquire the assets enumerated above?

A. Yes, sir; that would be the inference.

Q. Have you not testified that of the stock and bonds issued by the railroad company $6,389,511.93 were issued to acquire the right of way and the docks in Richmond, and other property?

A. Yes, sir; I have quoted that from the report, and it is in my testimony, page 58.

Q. And have you not also testified that the State of Virginia received no part of it?

A. As far as I know they received none of it.

Q. And that, notwithstanding you were charging Virginia with $5,410,429.54 of it?

A. Yes, sir; being the value of the property on that date as shown on page 60 of the printed report.

By the Master:

Q. You mean the value of the property in 1881?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you therefore assume that that is the value on January 1, 1861?

A. That is the value at that date, yes, sir.

Q. That is, you fix the value at January 1, 1861, because you find that value in this report of January 1, 1881.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Or September 30, 1881?

A. Yes, sir.

The Master: I want to keep the connection in my mind. I get it now.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. You have applied the value which you have figured out on your exhibit, page 58 of the printed record, under the sale of the James River and Kanawha Company's property to the Richmond & Alleghany Railroad Company in 1881 as the value of the property January 1, 1861, and June 20, 1863, have you not?

A. No, sir, I have not. I have taken the value on the next date, shown on Page 60, the reason being that on page 60 the value was slightly less than shown on page 58, and I thought I would take that instead of the prior date.

Q. It is only a few dollars less, isn't it?

A. About $46,000, yes, sir.

Q. Then the value that you have taken and applied as of January, 1861, and June, 1863, is shown on page 60 to be $5,410,429.54, is that right?

A. Yes, sir; on January 1, 1861, and June 20th, 1863.

Q. And that is the result of your statement as to the value of the property acquired by the Richmond & Alleghany Railroad Company in 1881, is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you find in the course of your investigation whether the James River and Kanawha Company had paid a dividend on its stock?

A. No, sir; there had been some dividends paid from time to time on the stock. I did not investigate it.

Q. You didn't think that of any importance?

A. No, sir.

Q. Haven't you in the course of other securities deemed it of very vital importance in reaching your conclusions about value at these distant dates in the past?

A. No, sir; I have not.

Q. Then you do not attach any importance in your testimony in relation to values that you have given here to the question of the payment of dividends on the securities?

A. Not as far as my statements which I have made in this case go, no, sir; I have not considered the dividend basis save in making a statement on my blueprints for 1863 concerning the bank stocks where I have no other data to go on, and simply made the statement that they had continued to pay dividends at the usual rate.

Q. But the question of the payment of dividends you regarded as an unimportant question?

A. I did not consider it.

By the Master:

Q. Well, what do you say about that question? He asks you if you considered the payment of dividends an unimportant question. You say you did not consider it; but that does not answer the question. What do you say to that question? Do you or do you not consider the question of dividends an unimportant factor, that is the question and I would like to get your views about that.

A. I do not consider it unimportant.

Q. You do not consider it unimportant?

A. No, sir.

Q. The result is that you do look upon it as an important factor?

A. It is a factor which enters into the determination of every value, but how far it was controlling depends upon individual cases and instances.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. You now say you consider the question of payment of dividends important. If so, why then didn't you take account of it in your testimony in the matter of values? You have testified that you did not consider it; why not, if they were important?

A. For the reason that I have determined as far as possible actual values and not values based upon dividends.

Q. Actual values?

A. As far as I could.

Q. Do you mean now to testify that the figures you have testified to here constitute actual values?

A. Yes, sir; as far as could be determined.

Q. And not book values?

A. A book value is an actual value.

Q. You would accept these book values as constituting the actual cash value of the securities in each case?

A. As constituting the actual value of the securities.

Q. And would advise their purchase on that basis?

A. That is an entirely different matter.

Q. A horse of another color, isn't it?

A. Advice as to purchase is an entirely different matter from dividend value.

By the Master:

Q. Don't you understand that the result we are trying to reach here is equivalent to a purchase? Do you think we are trying to get a value here that is distinct from what would be the fair value on the basis of purchase?

A. No, sir, I do not.

Q. Then your conception of the whole situation is that we are practically determining the fair purchase value, isn't it?

A. Yes, sir; that is the point to be determined.

The Master: Precisely. The cross-examination may proceed, Mr. Harrison.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. Haven't you several times testified that you did not wish to be understood as testifying to anything except what the books showed, whether it was cost or whatever it might be that was to be put down as value, without expressing any opinion as to whether or not that represented actual value?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. Is that your present position or do you now wish to change that?

A. That is the position that I have wished right along to hold, and from which I have been forced by the cross-examination, time and time again, to an expression of an opinion instead of confining myself to the actual facts which I have presented here.

By the Master:

Q. The question is now whether you intend to change your base upon your own examination and your own method. Do you intend to change from book value to actual value or is it now your contention that the book value is the actual value?

The Master: That is your question, isn't it, Mr. Harrison?

Mr. Harrison: Yes, sir.

A. That is just what I finished saying, your Honor,

Q. How am I to understand you? You have said that you were testifying to the book value only; that was entirely aside from my questions that have been asked you on cross-examination on another hypothesis; and you have stated that the book value was one thing and the actual cash market value was another. Now, do I understand that you adhere to that as a general proposition or that you now say that the book value in your judgment is the actual cash value? That is what I want to know. Which do you say?

A. Your Honor, if you will leave out the word cash I could answer that better. Cash value—

Q. I do not leave it out; I will leave it in.

Mr. Holt: His answer I believe will explain his position.

Q. I simply want to know whether the hypothesis upon which you have been proceeding is the one under which you now stand or whether we are to understand from now on that you proceed on a different hypothesis.

A. I proceed under the book value as showing the actual value of the security which we have under consideration. It is always understood that a book value, if used that way, is predicated on the fact that your books have been honestly kept. You have asked concerning the cash value, and I believe the question was brought up yesterday, and I answered that the cash value was practically the market value, and I meant by that statement that if you wanted to determine how much cash you could get for a security at a given date you would have to find out what other people got for their securities at that date, and that is the amount of the cash that you could realize on it, not necessarily its value.

Q. Do you wish me to understand that in your opinion the book value is equivalent to the actual cash market value? Do I make that question plain?

A. No, sir; the two are not equivalent.

The Master: That is all.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. Did you ascertain and do you show in any exhibit the book value of the James River and Kanawha stock on either of these dates, either January, 1861, or June, 1863, or any other date?

A. No, sir, I do not.

Q. Why didn't you do that in order to determine the value of the State's holdings in the company?

A. Because the book value of that would be simply the par value of the stock.

Q. It would be?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you mean to say the books of the company show that?

A. It shows that the State has paid that money over and that that money has been invested in the construction of the canal. It was one of the requisites before the State would invest that subscriptions should be made and work should be done, and therefore the amount of work done would be shown by the total amount paid in, and that would be par, and the State's value then would be $10,400,000.

By the Master:

Q. You mean that is the State's par holding in the James River and Kananwha Canal Company?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. Do you mean to say that the amount expended by the State in the purchase of its holdings would represent its book value?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You said you examined the Master's report; am I right about that?

A. Yes, sir; I read it over.

Q. On page 192 and 193 of his report he states the James River and Kanawha Canal Company value, and I will read you this extract:

"A detailed statement of the investment of the Commonwealth in the capital stock of the James River and Kanawha Company appears on pages 820-L and 820-M of the record. By this it appears that 3.49 per cent. of the improvement was located in West Virginia (page 820-M). The only dividend that the Company appears to have ever paid is $10,092, in 1836 (page 820-L). Under these circumstances I find that the stock of this company had no value on June 20, 1863."

Q. In the course of your investigation of this report, did you find that conclusion of the Master?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did it serve as any guide to you in your investigation?

A. I read that, yes, sir.

Q. Did you find any other dividend than the one which he states was paid?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you find that?

A. I did not look for it.

By the Master:

Q. Mr. Hillman, this item No. 2, franchises and right of way, $5,588,009.76; did you make any investigation of the accounts of either of these companies to ascertain upon what that item is predicated, how much of it is attributable to right of way and how much of it to franchises?

A. No sir; there is nothing to show that at all on the books of the Company.

Q. Are the books of the James River and Kanawha Canal Company out of existence or nonexistant?

A. I do not know of any; I have not run across any; I could not say whether there are any books or not.

Q. Then in the absence of the books of the James River and Kanawha Canal Company it is pretty difficult for you to make any statement about that company, isn't it? What I want to get at, I want to see how much of that item is treated as franchises, and I want to see how much of it is treated as right of way, and then I want to find out whether this was a franchise granted to this Company by the State of Virginia, that the Canal Company has put an arbitrary value on, that is, I want to see what that item means.

Mr. Harrison: The railroad company.

Q. Yes, the railroad company. I want to see how much they call franchises and how much they call right of way.

A. There is no record now, your Honor, that will give you that.

Q. The books of the James River and Kanawha Canal Company can give it, that is if they are kept as they ought to be kept. You have not seen them?

A. No, sir.

Q. Are they in existence?

Mr. Anderson: I have no doubt they are.

A. I do not think, your Honor, that they would show.

Mr. Holt: The only schedules that seem to be extant so far as the evidence is concerned are the schedules in this deed where the transfer was made to the Richmond & Alleghany Company. They just simply turned it over to the Richmond & Alleghany Railroad Company, their road, and the Railroad Company, laid down the ties and rails.

The Master: Yes, but here is an item upon which is predicated a large charge to the asset column, and this item is stated as franchises and right of way. What I would like to know is how much of that is right of way, and I would like to know how much is franchises, and if that is right of way I would like to know how much it cost somebody, and if it is franchises I would like to know whether or not that is the legal situation that is created by a grant of the State of Virginia to this James River and Kanawha Canal Company and that they call their franchise, the right to use this property, and I want to see how much that item is and I want to see how much value that item had. If I am to pass on this intelligently I want to know what makes up that item.

Mr. Holt: So far as we go, as I understand it, there was no separation in those items at all. They just recapitulated.

The Master: Have you any information, Judge, except what you got from Mr. Hillman?

Mr. Holt: From the Acts of the Legislature that are in here and from the deeds that are in here. The James River and Kanawha sold to the Richmond & Alleghany whatever they had there.

The Master: Of course I have not seen the deeds and I do not know what light they may give.

Mr. Holt: All the property that they had was just bunched and given to them.

The Master: I want to get at this question, I want to find out how much this cost, at some time, if it cost them anything. And then I want to find out about this Richmond dock right, $1,000,000. I want to ascertain if that appears in this statement of this Richmond & Alleghany Railroad Company as representing actual value and expenditure by somebody at some time, or whether it is put in here as a basis for capitalization. There is quite a difference between the two. And if the information is in existence I want that before this case is concluded, from one side or the other.

Mr. Anderson: If your Honor please, there is not simply evidence, but I think there is absolute proof of it.

The Master: I want one side or the other to present to me before this hearing concludes—you can see what is in my mind—for instance here is Richmond dock, $1,000,000; of course I have not the slightest knowledge of this, they may have cost someone $100,000, and this company may have put them in here as the basis for capitalization at a million dollars. If that is true, and I am to give serious consideration to this, I want to know about it. And they may have cost considerably more than a million, I do not know. The mere statement of it here as one million dollars as the basis for capitalization does not convey to my mind the idea that I would like to have to predicate actual values on. I have got to find what the value of this property was in 1861, predicated upon a statement made in 1881 as the basis for capitalization, I want more information than I have here to make that conclusion on. Do I make that clear?

Mr. Harrison: Yes, sir.

The Master: I do not know how it may develop, but as it stands here and speaking right as it does, I have not got the information that I want in order to reach an intelligent conclusion.

The Witness: Your Honor, on page 59, answering one of your inquiries, you will see that there was $1,000,000 arbitrarily assigned to Richmond docks and basin, leaving the charge to right of way and franchises, $5,588,609.76.

The Master: Who assigned that?

The Witness: The Richmond & Alleghany Railroad Company.

The Master: That tends to increase my suspicion that a good deal of this is the basis of capitalization and not value.

Mr. Holt: Your Honor, we expect this schedule, whether it be weak or strong, is simply offered for whatever persuasion it may have in it. We put it in for what it is worth. We expect to offer some more evidence on that subject.

The Master: I simply call attention to it now so that both sides can see how the matter lies in my mind. I want all the facts connected with the matter.

Mr. Holt: We are going to give all we can find.

Mr. Anderson: We will bring out from Mr. Hillman facts that will show the value of this property.

The Master: I do not want to be up against an item of five or six million dollars and have to speculate and guess about it.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. I will ask you a question in relation to this matter. Did your investigation of this matter of the affairs of the Richmond & Alleghany Railway Company lead you to the ascertainment of what became of it? Did you go beyond 1881?

A. No, sir, I did not.

Q. You did not ascertain that the Richmond & Alleghany Railway went into the hands of a receiver about 1883?

A. I know that that is a fact, that it did, that it went into the hands of a receiver later on.

The Master: How much later on?

Mr. Harrison: About two years, it became insolvent and went into the hands of a receiver. It was sold under foreclosure proceedings here in the Circuit Court of the City of Richmond.

The Master: By the way, when you are looking up these accounts, tell me whether or not from the time of the declaration of those dividends, did I specify in my report this Canal Company was operated at a loss or a profit. If they did not declare any dividends I would like to know whether they accumulated anything.

Mr. Harrison: All that we went into in the former investigation from one end to the other.

Mr. Holt: I think you are mistaken about that, Mr. Harrison.

The Master: I think so too, because I think if the other record had disclosed the operations of the company in addition to that dividend, I think I should have stated it in my summary. My impression would be that all that appeared in connection with that was a dividend of $10,000, away back in 1836. However, we should have it in this record.

Mr. Lilly: And the character of the work that was done over on the West Virginia side.

Mr. Hogg: In determining the expenditures made by Virginia in West Virginia that was the only phase in which it was up.

Mr. Harrison: We went into the history of the old James River Company, the parent company, and the James River and Kanawha Company.

Mr. Anderson: Three-quarters of that record was never printed. A great deal of the evidence was not printed.

Mr. Holt: We do not deny that you gave a history of the company in one sense, but it is pretty silent on the question of value, that is our point.

The Master: I am afraid it may develop that that particular question was not very much at issue in the previous hearing and I have not read, since I made my report, the various paragraphs that I was requested to find on, but my impression is that when you read them you won't find that I had any authority to determine the value of any of these assets that were in controversy here. I may be wrong about that. The suggestion is only made here that the issue is pending here, my impression is, without having read the paragraphs, was not specifically presented to me before. I am not suggesting whose fault it was, or that it was anybody's fault. Now if it was not, then whatever came in came in on another hypothesis, and was considered by me upon this hypothesis. Of course that is merely a suggestion. All these things are for argument later on. It does not make any difference what my report showed, each side is entitled to the benefit, and I shall consider it all. I am simply making that suggestion. And even if it was, the whole thing is now raised before me on this supplemental answer, and I cannot shut out either side from the submission of anything that they think is material as bearing on that. Of course right now we are on this James River and Kanawha Canal Company. If anybody can satisfy me that any conclusion I reached in that report was wrong, I shall so hold. Of course I shall have to be satisfied. I do not mean that I will not change it if you can satisfy me, but you must satisfy me. This subject is to be resumed. If it is in the original transcript I will take that.

We will suspend until twenty minutes past two.

Recess until 2:20 P. M.

AFTER RECESS.

Continuation of the cross-examination.

CONWAY W. HILLMAN.

By Mr. Harrison:

Q. The second item in the supplemental answer at page 59, Class G, is Manassas Gap Railroad Company, which is dealt with by its exhibit No. 7-A on page 61 of the printed exhibits. Do you show on that exhibit amount expended by the State, either in the purchase of stock or otherwise, on that road, or on account of that road?
